It is a Government priority to maximise the supply of organs for transplantation and I am sure that relatives' refusal is a matter of concern which Ministers and the Department of Health are addressing. My noble Friend Lady Cumberlege, the Under-Secretary of State for Health, raised that point when the late Lord Finsberg presented the Bill in another place. A more fruitful course, however, would be to continue to promote organ donation through publicity and education, encouraging people to join the NHS organ donor register. We should also encourage them to discuss openly with their relatives their wishes and those of their family.

I hope that I am not robbing my hon. Friend the Minister of a point that he may wish to make later. He adds to my guilt that I do not have an organ donor card, as I see that he is studying his as he sits on the Front Bench. I notice that he has now quickly put it away, but it is a great credit to him that he has one and I must look into the matter for myself.

The Government have shown their commitment to increasing the supply of organs through a number of interesting initiatives in recent years. That has included television and other media publicity, organ consent boxes on driving licences, educating hospital staff about discussing donation with relatives and a reimbursement scheme for donating hospitals. All those are important and we have to get it as much as possible into the public consciousness that all those routes are open to people.

The NHS organ donor register was launched in October 1994. I understand that already 4 million people have applied to join it. The register can be quickly accessed by transplant co-ordinators in hospitals and the families can then be consulted with sensitivity. The Department of Health continues to give considerable publicity to that register; we all should be pleased to note that, as the number on it increased, the number of refusals should therefore decrease. Currently, there are about 10 to 12 each week whose details were on the register—about half of the total number of donors—so it has had a significant impact.

In the Department of Health, as in any Government Department, such things are considered with a new perspective and perhaps with new thoughts. There may be new ways of doing it, but the fact that the total is about 10 to 12 each week is a tribute to the way in which the scheme was put together in the first place. I hope that we will be able to do even better. Therefore, rather than introduce a measure of compulsion, it is preferable that the Government should continue to promote organ donation through publicity and education and through encouraging people to join the register.

I should like comment on the study by the UK Transport Co-ordinators Association—[HON. MEMBERS: "Transplant."] The UK Transplant Co-ordinators Association. I beg hon. Members' pardon. What did I say? I am not going to suggest that I cannot walk and chew gum at the same time, but I cannot read a paragraph and talk at the same time. I was trying to say that the UK Transplant Co-ordinators Association and clinicians confirm that it is almost unknown for relatives to refuse consent if they know that the deceased has expressed a wish to be a donor.

That is the crux of the debate. If there were evidence that people were overturning the express wish of their deceased relative, we would have to think again, but there is no such evidence. Refusal nearly always occurs when the deceased has not left instructions that he or she wishes to donate. The study that I referred to by UKTCA and MORI shows that the commonest reasons for refusal are claims that the deceased has said that he or she did not wish to donate, and the inability of relatives to agree in the absence of instructions. Unless a future survey along the same lines proves that things have changed and that a barrier is going up against the deceased person's wishes, we have to go the way we are going.

The Bill has much to commend it. The thoughts behind it have much to commend them. Clearly, people who are desperate for a transplant operation want the Government to go much further, but our job as legislators is to say, "Hold on a minute. What is the balance of rights in this? What is the balance of rights and wrongs? What is the balance of people having control over their own lives and their future?" We have to say today that the balance has been struck about right and that, regrettably, the Bill goes just that bit too far.

I hope that, in responding to the Bill, the Government will introduce new measures that are along the lines that they have been advancing, and give us fresh thoughts about how to increase the number of organ donors and those saying that they wish to be an organ donor in the event of their death. In addition, I hope that the Government will not support the Bill's line, at least at the moment.

1.48 pm

Mr. Hartley Booth (Finchley): I commend this Bill, and I welcome the initiative of my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall). The Bill is short—it is contained in one page. I wish that we had commendably short Bills such as this all the time, as it would make the work of the Chamber much easier. It harks back to the time when the Chamber frequently had short Bills. In 1876, Prime Minister Disraeli produced one of the most momentous pieces of legislation of the Victorian period, the Royal Titles Act. That, too, was only one page long.

This Bill deals with the sensitive area of death and what we do with the human body. My welcome for it is based on my knowledge that donors have saved lives with their kidneys, hearts, corneas, lungs, livers and skin grafts—although skin grafts often come from live donors. The way in which one neighbour helps another in this context is one of the most heartening parts of our so-called selfish society. I welcome the fact that people are coming forward honourably and generously to give their very own organs to save lives. I believe that to be heroic, and it is an adjunct to people giving blood to save lives.

It is right that a person who is giving a vital organ, or some other part of his body, expresses his own view about it. As a society, we have recognised for hundreds of years the right of an individual to decide on the disposal of his property after death. That has been true since this House passed the Wills Act 1837, which is still used as the determinant Act for the disposal of property. The same principle should apply to the human body. The Bill requires "a person lawfully in possession of the body of a deceased person to authorise the donation of the body or any specified part of the body for therapeutic or medical purposes if the deceased person had requested such a donation."

That principle is at the heart of this Bill, and I am happy to support it.

As a lawyer who has acted in this area, I have experience of trying to recognise an individual's right to decide on what happens beyond death. I believe that one recognises a person's desires if that person at that point is of sound mind. I would like my hon. Friend the Minister, or my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South, to assure me that the form for the donor card will contain a requirement to assess whether the person who signs the card is of sound mind, so that we can honourably recognise his decision after his death. Perhaps that matter could come up in Committee. What will happen if, in future, medical science finds a way in which to perform human brain transplants? We may be many decades away from such transplants, but it is not ridiculous to suggest the possibility. In the 1920s, for example, it may have been thought ridiculous to suggest that we might transplant a human heart. I realise that, under our current understanding of the law and the Bill's provisions, we are not considering brain transplants—as the Bill deals with persons who are deceased, and of course the definition of "death" is based on brain death—but I believe that a parliamentary debate on the issue may be necessary in future, and that it will involve greater ethical issues. The thoughts on euthanasia expressed by my hon. Friend the Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) are very pertinent to those ethical issues.

The main ethical issue today—I hope that my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South will assure the House that he had it in mind when tabling his Bill—is to ensure that, under the current system, it is never suggested to people who give their organs, "You would be better off dead, because someone else could use your organs." I say that bluntly, not because I think that such a suggestion is likely to be made but because it could be made. The House's job is to foresee possibilities, and I hope that, perhaps in Committee—with the addition of a few words or a small clause, although I do not resile from my praise of the Bill's brevity—we can ensure that such pressure is never put on people.

Mr. Forman indicated assent.

Mr. Booth: I am grateful for this opportunity to welcome the Bill, and I assure the House of my support for it, particularly because it deals with voluntary donations. I hope that the Bill's successful passage will send out a reminder to the public that to give a part of one's body can be life saving, that it is honourable and generous, and that it can be a human being's last act to help a neighbour. I hope that the Bill's passage and this debate will somehow increase such acts.

1.56 pm

Mr. Kevin Hughes (Doncaster, North): I congratulate the hon. Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on promoting his Bill, which provides an opportunity to debate an important issue. The hon. Gentleman gave us a splendid tour of how organ donation operates around the world; I congratulate him also on his research. I doubt whether many people would argue with the proposition that there is a shortage of organ and tissue donors in Britain. The Bill is not the first attempt to address the issue of how to acquire more donors.

We should also remember that donors are needed in life as well as in death. We frequently hear calls, especially in the winter months, for more and new blood donors. Emergency appeals for bone marrow donors seem to be made more often these days, and we even hear appeals, occasionally, for living organ donors. However, the newly deceased provide the greatest potential supply of organs and human tissue. Kidneys, hearts, lungs and livers are needed for suffering patients; there is also a need for human tissue, such as corneas to restore sight. There is now an opportunity for deceased people to donate their skin for use as specialist dressings and grafting material for people suffering from very serious burns.

The Bill attempts to deal with the apparent and long-standing problem of a lack of donors. I say that it is an apparent problem because the United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority—the body responsible for overseeing these matters—does not collect figures annually or make estimates of the number of potential donors. Figures are certainly available for the number needing a donor. The Minister mentioned during an Adjournment debate last week that 6,000 people are awaiting organ transplants, around 5,000 of whom need kidney transplants.

Those figures seem to change little year on year. In March last year, for example, the Minister told the House in a written answer that 6,122 people were awaiting transplant surgery, 5,280 of whom needed kidney transplants. He also told us that 402 people had died in the previous year while on the waiting list. I have been affected by that—as has the House—because my good friend Jimmy Boyce, who was the Member of Parliament for Rotherham, died while waiting for a heart transplant. We all felt for Jimmy.

This is a continuing problem. Vigorous efforts should be made to encourage a greater supply of organs and human tissue. I hope that all hon. Members will join me in congratulating the NHS organ donor register on its efforts. Having 4 million people on the register is a good start, but I am sure that we can all make greater efforts.

In addition to the clear humanitarian reasons for increasing the supply of donors, there are sound economic reasons for transplantation. I understand from the National Kidney Federation that kidney dialysis costs around £10,000 per patient per year, but that supporting a post-operative kidney patient costs only £3,000 to £5,000—and the patient may have not only a more productive life after a transplant, but a better quality of life.

Modern medical advances and the great leaps forward that have been made in transplant technology and rejection suppression mean that the pool of people suitable for transplant grows continuously. It follows that the number of people whose quality of life could be bettered is also increasing.

The supply of organs for donation appears to have reached a plateau. Several solutions to that problem have been put forward. Elective ventilation—artificially maintaining the integrity of a dead patient's organs until consent can be obtained—is perhaps the most frequently considered. Another possibility is to require people to opt out of organ donation, rather than the current system of opting in through the national register and the donor card. I understand that that is favoured by the British Kidney Patients Association, among other interested groups.

Recently, it has been proposed that the organ supply problem can be solved by the breeding and use of transgenetic animals. There appears to be a broad consensus on the ethics of that approach, but there are still important public health and moral implications to be considered.

The Bill would impose an obligation on the person in charge of the deceased person's body to carry out the wishes of the deceased on organ donation. That is certainly a bold solution, but it is not without pitfalls. First, there is the problem of consent. The Human Tissue Act 1961 was clear that the possibility of a deceased person having withdrawn consent to organ donation was ground for refusing to allow donation.

The Bill would remove consideration of the possible withdrawal of consent. In theory, any consent document signed at any time by a deceased person could be viewed as an agreement to donate organs. There is a danger of people, mindful of the fact that they may later change their minds, choosing not to sign an organ or tissue donation consent form. It is therefore possible that the number of people volunteering to become organ donors will reduce. We certainly want to consider the matter further in Committee.

The Bill proposes to remove the veto from relatives and others who may have a connection with the deceased. It is often said that it is wrong to ask a spouse or other relative to sign a donor consent form at the time of a loved one's death. Strong emotions do not make for calm decisions. Perhaps there is some merit in amendment of the law, but I am sure that the House agrees that there are difficult legal questions about a deceased's remains. Those questions need to be addressed. Has the Minister taken advice about that? Will the Bill, should it become law, require consequential amendments to other statutes?

Finally, there is the issue of clinical opinion. I am told that, in the main, transplant specialists are opposed to any system of donation other than the current one. Has the Minister received that same view? If clinicians do not want to change the law, the Bill may be unworkable. However, if medical specialists are lobbying for a change in the law, the Minister should state what steps he and the Department of Health are taking to address clinicians' concerns.

The Bill raises important matters that I am sure the House will wish to consider further and in deeper detail. The hon. Member for Hendon, South has made a timely contribution to the debate on organ donation, and the Opposition hope to have the opportunity to study it further and in more detail in Committee.

2.6 pm

Mr. Bernard Jenkin (Colchester, North): We are debating an important subject and I join other hon. Members in congratulating my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on presenting an opportunity to debate it. I join my hon. Friend in paying tribute to our late friend Lord Finsberg who so ably represented the constituency of Hampstead and Highgate for many years. I was born in Highgate and I know that he was a good and able Member of Parliament who gave the House, his constituency and his country distinguished service.

I have listened to the debate with interest and it is obvious that there is much concern about the lack of organs for transplant. Organs become available only in the most distressing circumstances. In every culture, in every society, and in every age, people are reluctant to discuss some issues. In Victorian England, people did not talk about sex, but they did talk about death and money. In modern Britain, death is the taboo subject. We need only to consider how we approach the friends or relatives of those who are faced with imminent death to know how sensitively we feel that we need to behave.

The problem with the matter that we are debating is that people think it is about death. The only time relatives are formally approached is when they are confronted by the death of a loved one. To approach the problem from the angle of a change in legislation—effectively to ride roughshod over the understanding and sensitivities of relatives—is to go about it in the wrong way. We need to change the terms of the discussion. We must explain to relatives, perhaps at a propitious moment, which would be before they are confronted by the death of a loved one, that the issue is not about death but about giving life—and a better life—to others.

I carry a kidney donor card, which is now called an organ donor card because I have ticked the box to show that everything is up for grabs in the event of my death, but I have never been asked to consult the next of kin who appear on my card about what I want; nor have my next of kin ever been asked to record their understanding of what they think should happen to my body in the event of my death. We need not an amendment of the law to turn over people's sensitivities, but a public campaign to change the instructions on the card that we carry to give someone a better life.

The organ donor register should, for example, contain not only the wishes of the donor, but the pre-death consent of the next of kin as to what will happen in the event of the donor's death. We need to change what happens so that obtaining the consent of the potential donor and his next of kin is not the end of the matter; in the event of the donor's death, the relatives must know what they will face.

The trouble with the present arrangement is that, although we have achieved a great deal in getting people to carry organ donor cards, we have not prepared the relatives for the shock of what will confront them. A dead person's relatives are often not in the correct psychological state to deal with the fact that someone has died, let alone to choose what happens to the body. That is precisely the kind of decision that they are incapable of making unless they can be persuaded that they have already made that decision.

I beg hon. Members to think about tackling the problem from the opposite direction. A change in the law is inappropriate; persuasion is the answer. There are examples of how we can change by invocation how people behave and what is regarded as acceptable. Twenty years ago, people thought nothing of getting into a car when they were over the limit, to drive home from the pub. That was part of the game that they played with the police. Such behaviour has become wholly unacceptable. How did we achieve that change? It was done without changing the law, the method of enforcement or the penalties—it was done by invocation.

We need a much better campaign of invocation and education—and perhaps a change in the system of recording the wishes of organ donors and their relatives. In that way, people will be ready to give the necessary consent at the appropriate time. It is therefore with regret and considerable anxiety, but some certainty, that I oppose the Bill.

2.12 pm

Lady Olga Maitland (Sutton and Cheam): I greatly appreciate the fact that my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) has introduced the Bill. I had long been an admirer of Lord Finsberg. In fact, I was part of his campaign team when he was first elected to Parliament, and I had remained in touch ever since. It is very moving that one of his last acts was to introduce the original Bill.

The crux of the matter is that about 6,000 people are now waiting for an organ. In 25 per cent. of cases, the families of potential organ donors resist the request that their relatives' organs should be made available to give life. That fact led me to discuss the issue with my husband because, years ago, I had signed an organ donor card, and so had he. What I had not realised is that, in the event of my death, my husband, even knowing that I had signed the card, could—in his distress or after having second thoughts—override my wishes. That card was simply a worthless piece of paper.

When I write my will, I know that my wishes will be carried out on my behalf in the event of my death by the trustees, who are obliged by law not to deviate one jot. How is it that a will in the form of a card, which I have filled in and which states my express wishes—I want my organs, whatever use they might be, to be made available to give life to another person—can be overridden, yet my final will and testament will be adhered to by the law? When one considers the matter in that way, it is logical and sensible that the wishes of a donor, when written down on a piece of paper in the form of an explicit request, should have the same power as any request that I might make in my will.

Therefore, I hope that the Bill will come to fruition. I fear that, today, we may not be successful because of lack of parliamentary time, and I regret that. The issue is of fundamental importance, because I believe that it is my human right to be able to ensure that my wishes are carried out.

Some interesting research has shown that, where a person has made an explicit request, on the whole and mercifully, the family rarely override that wish—but they can. A wider issue is that when someone who has not made an explicit request dies, the family has a right to say, "No, I do not wish this to go ahead", and that happens in about 25 per cent. of cases. We should examine their reasons for doing that and not be too harsh. They often say that, in the trauma of grief, they feel that giving the body up for a donation is somehow extra surgery. Even if it makes no logical sense to think that, because the person is dead, such considerations can have great emotional power over grieving relatives. Sometimes, relatives say, "My relative has suffered enough—don't do any more." We have to bear in mind that fog of emotion and the time has come to try to clarify what people can do and whose wishes should be respected.

I totally endorse the Government's endeavours to publicise the organ donor scheme. I have looked down the list of all their initiatives and can only say that, although we have had years when the Government have worked hard and pumped money into a big publicity campaign, that does not happen every year or with the same energy. Sometimes, people come across their cards haphazardly—for example, I had not realised until today that I should have signed the section of my driving licence that provides for organ donor consent. How many people in the Chamber have signed the consent on their driving licence so that there is no shadow of doubt that that is their wish? It is a brilliant idea and it should be built on and publicised because, nowadays, there is barely a person in the land who does not carry a driving licence.

The Bill is so important that I wish it the very best passage, and if it does not pass all its stages right now, I very much hope that it will be picked up on another day. It means so much to me to know that, in the event of my death, someone, somewhere will benefit. It would also help the relatives to know that the spirit of their loved one, in a sense, continues in service in another being, and has made a better life for them. It eases the pain, the sharpness of death, to know that good is coming out of a tragedy.

I very much hope that we shall carry on in our endeavours to ensure that all our wishes are adhered to and that other people may benefit.

2.19 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. John Horam): I join others in congratulating my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon,

[Mr. John Horam]

South (Mr. Marshall) on introducing the Bill. As we all know, he is a doughty campaigner on several health subjects—indeed, I would say relentless, considering the way in which he has pursued me concerning haemophiliacs. I noticed that he managed to get a well-contrived mention of the problems of haemophiliacs into his speech, which was otherwise about organ transplantation. His campaigning has been praiseworthy, although it is quite intimidating to be on the receiving end of some of his campaigns.

It is noteworthy that my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South has campaigned so much on health subjects when he is primarily an economist, and speaks also on economic matters. As a fellow economist, I am delighted by that, because it shows clearly that economists, who are often maligned, are also human beings. He will recall that one of the most famous of political economists, a Labour Member, was once called a desiccated calculating machine by another member of the Labour party. I do not wish to be disputatious about this, but it shows the low opinion in which economists are sometimes held. I am glad that my hon. Friend is striving manfully to present the other side of the coin.

My hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South said, as have others, that the Bill is a replica of the Bill that was introduced by the late Lord Finsberg in 1995, which passed through the House of Lords but did not succeed in the House of Commons. Geoffrey Finsberg was my hon. Friend's neighbour in north London. There must be something about the air in north London that brings about—

Mr. John Marshall: Very healthy air.

Mr. Horam: Or perhaps it is the electorate in north London who bring about this admirable concern for selfless health matters, if I may put it like that.

My hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South took us on a fascinating tour of Europe. Uncharacteristically for him, given his views on European Union matters, he brought into play the strength of the arrangements in other European countries and said that we were a long way down the list of European countries when it came to the provision of dialysis. That is a fair point.

On a happier note, more people are alive with transplanted kidneys in the United Kingdom than in any European country—15,000. As my hon. Friend would be the first to say to me, given the wonderful performance of successive Conservative Governments, we are now leaders in Europe on economic matters; we are also, clearly, leaders in Europe on transplantation matters, which is the subject of his Bill. I should like to put my hon. Friend's point about our relatively poor performance in renal dialysis in that perspective—we are excellent on transplantation.

I must correct my hon. Friend's point about the percentage of relatives who refuse to allow organs to be removed for donation from people who have died in intensive care. He mentioned the figure of 50 per cent., which was picked up by one of my Conservative colleagues. We have different evidence. In 1989-90, an independent study showed that 30 per cent. of families consulted refused permission; in 1993, a study showed that relatives refused permission in 26 per cent. of cases. I am not sure where my hon. Friend found the figure of 50 per cent.; it does not appear to coincide with the information that we have. Our information is not specifically related to intensive care units, but concerns all cases where permission has been refused by the relatives.

Mr. John Marshall: The information was contained in one of the speeches in the debate instigated by the late Lord Finsberg.

Mr. Horam: I shall check on that if I may. I am not saying that my hon. Friend is wrong about intensive care units, but there is contradictory evidence about what happens generally when permission has been refused. I shall look into the point raised by my hon. Friend.

My hon. Friend the Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) gave a characteristically balanced and rational appraisal of the situation and asked a significant question. Why does not the possession of a donor card automatically close the issue? Why is the card not enough to show clearly the wishes of the deceased with no further argument? The possession of a signed donor card satisfies the requirements of the Human Tissue Act 1961, which my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) proposes to amend, and under which organs may be taken without anyone being consulted. That requirement is fulfilled under existing legislation. However, the Human Tissue Act also requires it to be established that the deceased had not changed his or her mind after signing the card; the only sensible way to check up on that is to consult the family. That is the first reason why relatives have to be consulted.

As my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Hughes) suggested, I was consulting my donor card. I was checking on the point raised by my hon. Friend the Member for Carshalton and Wallington. The donor card states at the bottom:

"Let your relatives know your wishes."

In addition to carrying and signing the card, someone must let his relatives know his wishes. In that way, there can be no doubt that the wishes of the deceased remained as they were at the time of his signing the card and he has not resiled from them since.

My hon. Friend the Member for Finchley (Mr. Booth), who is no longer in the Chamber, mentioned that the donor should be of sound mind. We want to ensure that no one who signs a donor card is under a misapprehension about what it involves, as it is a significant thing to do.

My hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West paid tribute to Lord Finsberg and raised an important point about the family. The relatives of the deceased will have memories and emotions of him or her. My hon. Friend made a telling point. One can imagine the situation where a young man has died in a car accident. His organs could be most usefully used in a transplant, but his relatives would be in shock; they would be particularly traumatised because he was young. It would be horrific if they made a decision and were then overruled so that organs were taken out of the young person against their wishes. If that happened, with all the tabloid publicity associated with such a gruesome incident, it would be a setback for voluntary organ donation, which we all support. We must address that problem. I am sure that my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South understands the problem and would not want to set back the cause of organ donation.

My hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West made the key point that, if a person has clearly said that he wishes his body to be used for organ transplantation after his death, permission is almost never refused by his relatives. In practice, under the current arrangements, the voluntary system works almost to maximum efficiency, which is crucial. I am glad that my hon. Friend raised that point.

My hon. Friend the Member for Finchley made an interesting point about the shortness and simplicity of the Bill. I agree: if all Bills were as short as this one, the House would be extremely grateful. My hon. Friend spoke of the Royal Titles Act 1876. Disraeli had a thing about shortness and simplicity: his Cabinet consisted of only 12 members, one of whom was the Master of the Horse, Lord Cardigan. So Disraeli clearly had things worked out in a way that we have perhaps gone back on since then.

The hon. Member for Doncaster, North (Mr. Hughes) made a characteristically forthright speech. I congratulate him on his maiden speech from the Opposition Dispatch Box. As is traditional in these cases, I wish him a long sojourn on the Opposition Front Bench. I am sure that he will hone his skills to perfection in the long years ahead of him. As he was substituting for my usual opponent, the hon. Member for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron), there was no change in the friendly Yorkshire tones in which the problem was aired. The hon. Member for Doncaster, North mentioned Jimmy Boyce, the Member of Parliament for Rotherham until his sad death. He was my pair and I was personally in contact with him literally a few days before he died—

It being half-past Two o'clock, the debate stood adjourned.

Debate to be resumed on Friday 14 February.

Telecommunication Masts (Planning Guidance)

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Carrington.]

2.35 pm

Mr. Bernard Jenkin (Colchester, North): I am grateful to have the opportunity of a debate on the subject of telecommunication masts and planning guidance.

First, let me explain the background to the debate. The issue has been boiling on and off in the local and national media for more than a year. Indeed, my hon. Friend the Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo), who is my neighbour, raised the issue on the Adjournment on 1 March last year. There are now four appeals against planning refusal that affect a particular area of our two constituencies. Those appeals prompted me to apply for the debate.

I am grateful for the support of all councillors of all parties on the matter, and of others. It is not a party political matter and should not become so. My hon. Friend the Member for South Suffolk regrets that he cannot be present for the debate, but he wishes to be associated with my remarks, as I was with his.

Back in March last year, my hon. Friend expressed the general fear that telecom masts would sprout up all over the countryside and that even areas of special landscape interest would be affected. The Minister for Construction, Planning and Energy Efficiency, my hon. Friend the Member for West Hertfordshire (Mr. Jones), responded positively and sensitively to the points raised. He focused on the code of best practice that he published shortly afterwards in April, and promised that the code would be closely monitored. He also emphasised the sensible point that the best way forward was for all parties—mobile telecom companies, planning authorities, those locally affected and conservation groups—to maintain a constructive dialogue.

I took up the challenge on behalf of my constituency. I have initiated and attended meetings with councillors and planning officials. Local authorities and others have had to learn a new technical language—including terms such as footprints, coverage and sight lines—in order to understand the key questions. Some authorities have not been as fleet-footed as they might have been. I am pleased, however, that Colchester borough council has eventually engaged the mobile telecom companies in serious discussions as to how best they could help to resolve each other's problems.

I invited all the companies making applications in my area to come and see me. Most came, and I should like to thank Orange, Cellnet and Vodaphone for taking the trouble to keep me informed. After some initial reluctance in some cases, they were all keen to explain their obligations under their licences and anxious to avoid unnecessary controversy.

I warned all the companies of the backlash that they would provoke if they pressed their proposals. Cellnet has wisely withdrawn its proposals, and Orange this morning informed me that it is withdrawing two of the four appeals that are pending. In a fax this morning, Orange states:

"You will be aware that we currently have failed to obtain Planning Permission on three locations already, and have lodged Planning Appeals on two of them. Since these appeals were lodged, and as a direct result of your intervention, we have been in discussion with the other three operators".

That is progress, I suppose. At least the operators are looking to use one shared facility, as opposed to a multiplicity of sites, although the situation is still unsatisfactory.

I fully appreciate that my hon. Friend the Minister is constrained from commenting on specific planning proposals that may at some future date end up on his desk requiring a decision. However, I make it absolutely clear that I am here today because of the potential threat to the historic landscapes of the Stour valley in my constituency. The skylines in and around Dedham vale, which so inspired John Constable two centuries ago, have remained almost unchanged until today. Not surprisingly, the threat of telecom masts is a highly charged issue in my constituency and in that of my hon. Friend the Member for South Suffolk.

The region is an area of outstanding natural beauty—AONB—and has specific protections. I acknowledge that protection, which has prompted the companies concerned to give up hope of erecting masts within the AONB. However, two companies have written to inform me of applications outside the area that have been refused by the Colchester borough council which they propose to take to appeal. Sites such as Gun hill and Hill Top farm, as their names suggest, are prominent and visible. The structures, which are more than 20 m—or over 60 ft—tall, will be seen for miles around and will dominate the skyline.

Since my hon. Friend's Adjournment debate last year and following our most helpful meeting with my hon. Friend the Minister of State, I have sought to reassure my constituents in several ways. First, I have told them that the world is watching the mobile telecom companies. They have special privileges in the planning process, as set out in planning policy guidance note 8. Colchester borough council advises me that the thread running through the guidance is that operators are obliged to provide a certain level of service under the Telecommunications Act 1984. That is a material planning consideration that should prevail over—or at least be given equal weight to—all other considerations. However, the companies have wisely been cautious about asserting those privileges hitherto—seeming to prefer agreement to imposition, as set out in the code of best practice.

Secondly, such impositions in sensitive areas in the face of furious local opposition and national concern about heritage sites would be a setback for the industry. As I have said, in my meetings with the companies concerned, I warned them of the backlash that they would invite from Members of Parliament and conservationists. Thirdly, I continue to set great store by the Government's general commitment to the environment and the countryside. I have taken it on trust from my right hon. and hon. Friends that what is most feared for the Stour valley will not be allowed to happen.

There will now be appeals, and local people may be forgiven for feeling that there is a question mark over the Government's commitment. I am advised by the Colchester borough council planning department that, ultimately, the matter rests in the hands of Ministers. The code of best practice seemed intended to avoid such a confrontational approach by the companies. As far as the Council for the Protection of Rural England and other conservationists are concerned, the code will have failed if it allows companies to lodge appeals over the heads of the local planning authorities. PPG8 seems destined to bias any inspector's report in favour of development.

Therefore, I ask my hon. Friend the Minister to address his reply to the general effects of applications for development just outside the boundaries of protected areas such as AONBs. Is the presumption in favour of development inviolate, or does protecting our natural heritage come first? A constituent reiterated that point in a letter to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, in which he said:

"concern would be much eased if we could be assured that, in the event of appeals against the local planning authority's decision, the Inspector would have both the power and the intention to take into account the environmental impact in each case."

How will the balance be struck? Do the protections afforded to AONBs, national parks and other sensitive areas extend to sites outside the boundaries of such areas if the development in question would adversely affect the landscape? Crucially, in light of the appeals that are now going ahead, is it not time to announce a review of PPG8? Colchester borough council and I have consistently pressed for such action. Could there be any better way of signalling to the operators that their activities will be severely constrained in order to protect the environment if they press ahead with their plans?

In his reply, will my hon. Friend the Minister bear it in mind that technology may rescue us from making those choices sooner than we might think? How long will it be before mobile communications are taken over by satellites instead of terrestrial radio? What is the prospect of cellphone systems with much more local, much smaller, less visually intrusive antennae? The representatives of one company that visited me told me how technology would eventually be able to conceal transceivers in roadside signs, trees and lamp posts. What will happen tomorrow to the huge aerial arrays that are under consideration today? We are told that they will be taken down. But they will be far too useful to their owners for them to allow them to be taken down. Our planning law does not adapt well to the practice of temporary consents.

Christian civilisation has waited nearly 2,000 years for mobile phones. Our precious countryside, which has evolved over thousands of centuries, is changing faster than ever before in what amounts to the twinkling of an eye under the pressures of the modern world. Can we merely say no on this occasion? When we sing:

"And did those feet in ancient time

Walk upon England's mountains green?", are we simply referring to a commodity that the British people will be happy to trade in for an extra minute's conversation as they drive up the A12? If we reflect upon it, I think not. I am sure that my hon. Friend the Minister will concur. I am grateful to him for giving up his time to attend the debate, and I look forward to his response.

2.45 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment (Sir Paul Beresford): I suddenly thought it was Sunday, for a moment.

I listened with interest to what my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) said about the impact of telecommunication masts on the countryside. I was about to say that it is a hobby, but it is a matter of distinct long-term importance that my hon. Friend has made clear to the House. We understand his argument when we think of the countryside that he is talking about, lives in, works round and is part of his and other constituencies.

I shall start in reverse, as it were, and take up the concern that my hon. Friend has expressed about what happens to telecommunications installations when they become redundant. In an age when technologies develop rapidly, it is something that we must consider. The House will be aware that installations by licensed telecommunications companies are governed by the Telecommunications Act 1984 as well as—I am not putting one above the other—the Town and Country Planning Act 1990. Both the telecommunications code and the operators' licence obligations require that apparatus must be removed when redundant. Provisions under the planning Act reinforce this requirement. It is also a condition of development permitted by the General Permitted Development Order 1995 that redundant apparatus is removed, and that local planning authorities may attach, if they wish—I hope that some of them are awake to this—similar conditions to planning permissions that they grant.

My hon. Friend talked about satellites. These are fine for transmitting television programmes to millions of viewers but, unfortunately, they are apparently not suitable at present for systems that must provide for an extremely large number of two-way conversations at the same time.

My hon. Friend talked also about possibilities of making masts smaller. That is already happening. I understand that many base stations are already a passable imitation of street lights and antennae serving individual streets. They can be no larger than burglar alarms. The difficulty is that the range and capacity of this smaller apparatus is limited and therefore not suitable for many locations, especially in the open countryside. The choice is often between one large mast and a number of smaller but still fairly obvious ones serving the same area. We can expect, however, that technological refinements will make masts smaller and less obtrusive. We are working in discussions with the operators and the Department of Trade and Industry.

Here and now there is a continuing need sensitively to accommodate masts in the landscape. Our policy is to facilitate the growth of telecommunications systems because of the benefits that they can bring. For example, fast, reliable and cost-effective communications can help to attract new business and assist established firms. I understand that they even assist farmers in the countryside.

There are other benefits too, such as safety and security. Accessible communications systems can reduce the need to travel, using the telephone driver information systems. They can enable more effective use to be made of the existing road network. I must emphasise, however, that this must be done while honouring our commitment to protect the environment, and especially our best and most sensitive areas. In short, the Government's land use planning policy seeks to balance the national importance of the telecommunications industry with the need to protect visual amenity.

My hon. Friend mentioned specific developments in his area. As he appreciates, it is not appropriate for me to comment on such matters at this stage, given that appeals may be lodged. Our general policy on the development of telecommunications is set out in planning policy guidance Note 8, which facilitates the growth of new and existing systems, while honouring our commitments to environmental objectives, including well established national policies for the protection of the countryside and urban areas. The PPG confirms the need, in the context of telecommunications development, to protect the best and most sensitive environments. Those include national parks, areas of outstanding natural beauty, and conservation areas. The need to protect those and other defined areas is recognised under both licensing and planning legislation.

Code system operators' licences may impose their own environmental conditions, which help to protect those areas. Equally, the control of development under the Planning Act recognises the special needs of those areas. The installation of any mast in an area of outstanding natural beauty or other protected area is subject to full planning control.

Elsewhere, the general permitted development order allows code system operators to carry out various types of development, including the erection of masts of up to 15 m high, without the need to apply for planning permission. That freedom was reviewed in 1992, when we decided that the 15 m limit struck the right balance. Masts over the 15 m limit require a full planning application, but that does not mean that local planning authorities are powerless to prevent masts under 15 m in unsuitable locations. A code system operator wishing to erect a mast of up to 15 m in height must apply to the local planning authority for its determination as to whether it wishes to approve details of the mast siting and appearance, and the authority can refuse approval to one or both of those aspects if it considers that it is justified. As with applications made for other kinds of development, a code system operator has the right of appeal to the Secretary of State for the Environment when the authorisation sought from a local planning authority is not forthcoming.

Decisions taken by local planning authorities on planning applications, and by the Secretary of State on appeals, must be made in accordance with the local authority's development plan, unless material considerations indicate otherwise. National planning policies, too, may be a governing factor when such decisions are made. In the context of telecommunications applications, that means not only the policies set out in PPG8 but relevant policies in other guidance notes. For instance, PPG8 cites green-belt policies—PPG2; countryside policies—PPG7; and policies for nature conservation—now PPG9—as particularly relevant.

To help keep the number of masts to a minimum, our planning policy guidance encourages mast-sharing, and licences issued by the Department of Trade and Industry require operators to consider that. There are, however, technical constraints. A choice must sometimes be made between one larger and more conspicuous mast shared by several operators and more than one smaller, less conspicuous masts for a number of individual operators.

Local authority development plans apply national landscape conservation policies on a site-specific basis and may well formulate policies for locally defined landscape areas. Increasingly, plans contain policies and proposals specifically for telecommunications development. PPG8 specifically advises that those should be formulated having regard to the need to protect the best and most sensitive environments. While such established planning policies that have been the subject of public consultation form the basis for decision-making, other material considerations will come into play on a case-by-case basis. Visual amenity is one such consideration and the visibility of a mast from a designated area, such as an area of outstanding natural beauty, can be a material consideration in relation to both prior approval determinations and full planning applications.

I have sought briefly to explain the land-use policy framework, which offers a firm basis for decisions on proposals for telecommunications masts. Planning authorities have a substantial degree of control over that type of development through the prior approval procedure and the need for a full planning application to be submitted in sensitive areas.

My hon. Friend mentioned the code of best practice that my Department published last year. To encourage better working of the prior approval procedure, we set up a working group consisting of representatives of local planning authorities, the code system operators, the Department of Trade and Industry and the Welsh Office. The code has been generally welcomed as setting out a helpful information base and providing a positive framework for code operators and local planning authorities to work together over the siting of masts. It encourages co-operation to make it easier for prior approval applications to be dealt with effectively within the 28-day period allowed. The code refers to designated areas and locations of environmental sensitivity.

When the code was launched, we undertook to reconvene the working group to review its operation. With the help of the code operators and local planning authorities, the group is monitoring the working of the code. My Department has undertaken a preliminary survey of the code's effectiveness. One of the survey's findings was that 11 per cent. of the applications for prior approval reported during the survey period were refused by the local authorities.

All in all, that demonstrates the point that I made early on that local authorities have substantial control over such mast development, particularly in and around sensitive areas. I welcome the continuing dialogue within the group, which is considering the suggestions for amending and amplifying the code in the light of the practical experience of its operation. We must consider my hon. Friend's case as well.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at five minutes to Three o'clock.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Animal Procedures Committee will publish the findings and outcome of the review of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The review of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 by the Animal Procedures Committee is still in progress. It is hoped that the committee will make a preliminary report to the Secretary of State by July 1997.

Detainees

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that all people held in custody under immigration law will be given the reasons for their incarceration in writing in their mother tongue; and if he will make a statement. [13055]

Mr. Kirkhope: All immigration detainees are fully informed of the reasons for their detention. This is done orally, in a language which the person understands, through an interpreter if necessary. The Government see no justification for providing written reasons.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the current total of immigration detainees are (a) awaiting deportation, (b) awaiting an appeal and (c) not subject to any process. [13060]

Mr. Kirkhope: There were 891 persons recorded as being in detention solely under Immigration Act powers on 11 December 1996. This figure excludes non-asylum port cases who have been in detention for less than a month; information on such persons is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information on the current stage of the 891 cases is given in the table.

Persons in detention solely under Immigration Act powers on 11 December 1996

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of asylum seekers held in detention at the end of (i) October, (ii) November and (iii) December; in which establishments they were held; what were their (a) nationalities and (b) gender; and how many were deported and from which establishments. [12321]

Mr. Kirkhope: The available information on asylum seekers detained, and on the number deported from detention, is given in the tables. The number deported does not include those who are removed as illegal entrants or under port refusal procedures.

A comprehensive breakdown of those recorded as deported from detention, by location of detention, is available only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons who had completed their prison sentences were detained further under Immigration Act powers; and for how long each was detained in each of the last three years. [12331]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not available centrally.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who were convicted of a criminal offence, punishable by a person sentence, but not served with a deportation order as part of the sentence, were at a later date served with a notice of deportation in each of the last three years. [12329]

Mr. Kirkhope: The total numbers of notices of intention to deport issued in respect of a convicted criminal on the grounds that the person's continued presence in the United Kingdom was not conducive to the public good, were 125 in 1994, 79 in 1995, and 80—provisional figure—in the period January to September 1996. Data for the whole of 1996 are not yet available. Separate data on those criminals who had served a prison sentence, and those who had not, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Marchioness Inquiry

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the cost to date of transcribing the proceedings of the reconvened inquest into the victims of the Marchioness disaster and (b) the charge that is made to a (i) relative and (ii) other interested party to (1) peruse the transcript and (2) purchase a copy. [12414]

Mr. Sackville: I understand that the cost of typing the transcription was £6,000. Under the present rules the charge for supplying a copy to an interested person, including relatives, would be £2,400. There is no charge for inspecting relevant documents.

Gambling

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned on the incidence of addictive gambling in (a) adults and (b) young people under 16 since the introduction of the national lottery. [12468]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Home Office has not commissioned primary research, but in September 1996 we published a report, "The Social Implications of Casino Gambling". This examined international experience in casino regulation and problem gambling. I have placed a copy in the Library.

Our second consultation paper on casino deregulation, issued on 18 November 1996, commented further on the social implications of casino gambling.

Prisoners (Restraints)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to the chaining of a prisoner to an inanimate object; [11932]

(2) if he will list the circumstances under which restraints may be removed from a prisoner; [11933]

(3) if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of the use of mechanical restraints on prisoners receiving hospital care; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidelines issued by the Prison Service; [11934]

(4) if he will arrange for a copy of the report of the Prison Service's inquiry into the death of Geoffrey Thomas to be placed in the Library; [11935]

(5) what is the current timetable for revising the security manual in respect of new guidelines for restraining prisoners receiving hospital care; and if he will list the major changes. [11931]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 27 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the use of restraints on prisoners in hospital and the report on the death of Geoffrey Thomas.

Current instructions are that a prisoner will be chained to an inanimate object only in the circumstances set out in paragraph 60.18 of the Manual of Security. This states:

> "Unless the doctor (or midwife where relevant) objects for medical reasons, an escort chain should be used to secure the prisoner by one wrist, preferably to an officer, on to an item of furniture if the officer needs to be free to cover an exit."

This advise applies only to those prisoners whom the governor judges to require restraint under the criteria set out in the Home Secretary's statement to Parliament on 18 January 1996. A copy is attached.

The circumstances in which restraints may be removed from (or not applied to) a prisoner are set out in paragraphs 5.3.4–6, 53.16, 59.11, 59.17, 59.18 and 60.18 of the Manual on Security, a copy is in the Library.

The policy in respect of the use of mechanical restraints on prisoners receiving hospital care is set out in the Home Secretary's statement to Parliament of 18 January. (I attach a copy of the subsequent instruction issued by the Director of Security and Programmes on 19 January 1996).

You asked if a copy of the report of our inquiry into the death of Geoffrey Thomas will be placed in the Library. The investigation into the circumstances surrounding the physical restraint of Geoffrey Thomas in a hospice in Cardiff is nearly complete. The conclusions and any recommendations for changes in practices will be urgently considered. It would be premature to anticipate the outcome of this review in advance of decisions yet to be taken.

It is not normal Prison Service practice for a report of an internal inquiry to be published. Therefore there are no plans to place a copy of the report in the Library.

Hong Kong Residents

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Governor of Hong Kong on the entry into Britain of Hong Kong residents whose status is uncertain after 1 July; and if he will make a statement. [12158]

Mr. Kirkhope: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the Governor of Hong Kong on 9 January, for discussion of current issues of mutual concern.

Woodhill Prison

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy in respect of building a top-security unit at Woodhill prison, Milton Keynes; how much has been budgeted for the prison unit and for fixtures and fittings; and if he will make a statement. [11187]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. David Porter, dated 27 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the building of a top security unit at Woodhill prison.

On 15 January I announced that category A prisoners would be held in a smaller number of more secure prisons to meet the recommendations of Sir John Woodcock and General Sir John Learmont. Woodhill is one of these prisons and will in the future hold a larger number of category A prisoners.

The Prison Service also has examined the options for improving the management of disruptive prisoners. We have concluded that this can be accomplished most effectively by the establishment of a co-ordinated series of five close supervision units (CSUs) each holding small numbers of prisoners with varying regimes ranging from the strict through to the more structured regimes. The three CSUs at Woodhill will be part of this co-ordianted series.

The latest estimate of the capital cost of the programme of work for the CSUs at Woodhill is £3.2m. The fixtures and fittings will be standard Prison Service issue and association areas will also have standard furnishing and equipment.

Prison Births

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners have given birth while serving prison sentences in prisons other than Holloway for the last three years for which figures are available. [11775]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Jean Corston, dated 27 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of women prisoners who have given birth while serving prison sentences in prisons other than Holloway.

Information collected about births to prisoners does not distinguish between sentenced and unsentenced women. The figures for births to women in prisons other than Holloway are set out in the table below:

Total births to prisoners in prisons and NHS hospitals (excluding Holloway)

Year	Total live births	Total delivery-prison	Total delivery-hospital
1993–94	31	1	30
1994–95	32	0	32
1995–96	32	0	32

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12699]

Mr. Streeter: My Department issued no White Papers, Green Papers, consultation papers, draft regulations or circulars last year which have been assessed as giving rise either directly or indirectly to significant environmental effects.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the number of magistrates courts in operation in Wales, indicating (a) the number of cases heard by each court, (b) the cost of providing the service and (c) the catchment area served by population and maximum travel distance, on 31 December for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [12866]

Mr. Streeter: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

On 14 October 1996, Official Report, columns 655–56, in answer to a question from the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger), I said that there were 63 magistrates courts in Wales. Researches for this question have revealed that the correct number is 57. I have written to the hon. Member to set the record straight and have placed a copy of the letter in the library.

ENVIRONMENT

Personalised Number Plates (Executive Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department and if he will list them. [11422]

Sir Paul Beresford: This is an operational matter for the agencies, and the chief executives have been asked to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. G. Courtney to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 23 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment has asked me to reply on behalf of the Building Research Establishment Executive Agency to your question on personalised number plates.

There are no personalised number plates in the ownership of the Building Research Establishment.

Letter from M. C. Buck to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 24 January 1997:

I would refer to the above Parliamentary Question concerning how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of executive agencies within the Department of the Environment.

Please be advised that there are nil within the ownership of The Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre.

Letter from C. J. Shepley to Mr. Brian H. Donohoe, dated 21 January 1997:

I have been asked by Sir Paul Beresford to reply to your question about how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of executive agencies.

The Planning Inspectorate has no official cars and no personalised number plates.

Cold Weather (Energy Efficiency)

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to improve the energy conservation values of the housing stock in England; [12292]

(2) what plans he has to introduce measures to reduce the number of extra deaths caused by cold weather. [12293]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave during an Adjournment debate on 22 January 1997, Official Report, columns 916–20.

Minerals Local Plans

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what calculations underlie the quotas produced by county councils for the minerals local plans. [12208]

Sir Paul Beresford: The regional guidelines for aggregates provision in England, which have been appointed to minerals planning authorities for incorporation into development plans, are set out in "Minerals Planning Guidance Note 6"—MPG6—issued in April 1994. The overall provision is based on long-term projections of aggregate demand, which were in turn derived from projections of construction activity, which take account of the relationship between economic activity and construction investment. The consultants' reports on the projections were placed in the Library of the House at the time, and are summarised in annexe C of MPG6. Taking account of the lowest growth scenario in the projections, the Government took the view that demand for aggregates in England over the period 1992 to 2006 is likely to be in the order of 4.2 billion tonnes. The Department further assumed that, in line with the policies set out in the MPG, approximately 1,165 million tonnes of aggregates supply would come from sources other than primary land-based production in England—details are given in annexe A of MPG6. The guidelines therefore advise that planning authorities in England should make provision for some 3.1 billion tonnes of primary aggregates over the period 1992 to 2006.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to review the quotas for the county councils' minerals local plans. [12209]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment is undertaking a research project to examine the overall approach to aggregates planning, including the operation of the quantified guidelines and the projections on which they are based. The next review of MPG6, which will be the subject of wide consultation, will be started when the results of the research are available, early in 1998.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution he estimates the private finance initiative will make to the capital programme of local authorities in the next financial year. [12592]

Sir Paul Beresford: We have announced support for up to £50 million of PFI investment in 1996–97, and £200 million in 1997–98. The public private partnerships programme has recently announced a series of PFI pathfinder projects which are expected to be signed in forthcoming months.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to announce the outcome of consultation on the local government finance settlement; and if he will make a statement. [13213]

Mr. Gummer: I am today laying before the House the "Local Government Finance Report (England) 1997–98", the "Limitation of Council Tax and Precepts (Relevant Notional Amounts) Report (England 1997–98", and the "Special Grant Report (No. 23)". These reports establish the amounts of revenue support grant and non-domestic rates to be paid to local authorities in 1997–98, and the basis of their distribution, specify the amounts which are to be used as the basis of comparison for measuring increases in certain local authorities' budgets in 1997–98 for the purposes of capping, and provide for a special standard spending assessment reduction grant to be paid to certain authorities for 1997–98. Drafts of these reports were issued for consultation on 27 November 1996. The Department received written representations from 210 authorities and my Ministers met 79 delegations from local councils.

I have considered the views of local authorities and others who have commented on my initial proposals. The local government finance settlement represents a reasonable and balanced distribution of resources in the context of what the country can afford as a whole.

Within the total resources, priority has been given to education, police and the fire service. It is now up to local authorities to prove they can maintain and improve their delivery of key services, and use the flexibility we have given them through capping to adapt to local circumstances.

I shall be sending copies of these report to all authorities, together with tables showing each authority's standard spending assessment and its entitlement to RSG, NDR and special grant. I have placed copies of the reports and the tables in the Library and the Vote Office.

Fish-eating Birds

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by what means his Department intends to ensure the Government's research into fish-eating birds is made available to anglers over the next two years; and what factors underlay the methods of dissemination chosen. [12639]

Mr. Clappison: It is the intention of the Department of the Environment and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to publish the results of the research into fish-eating birds.

Preliminary findings are disseminated to bodies representing fishery interests at annual seminars. The seminars allow interested parties to be informed of the progress of the research, and ask questions of the researchers. Seminars were held in December 1995 and December 1996.

Aggregate Extraction Licences

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) pursuant to his letter G/PSO/23151/96, what review he is undertaking with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food of licences for the extraction of aggregates from the sea bed; and what is the time scale; [12182]

(2) pursuant to the letter from the Prime Minister G/PSO/23151/96, what is the allocation of responsibilities for the extraction of aggregates from the sea bed and sediment movements and constant erosion between (a) the Department of the Environment, (b) the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, (c) the Scottish Office and (d) the Welsh Office. [12183]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Crown Estate, as landowner, issues licences for aggregates dredging. A prerequisite to the issue of a licence is a favourable Government view issued by the Department of the Environment, or in Wales the Welsh Office, which co-ordinates and considers the views of Government Departments, including the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and responses to public consultation on the proposals, before issuing of GV. Applications must be accompanied by a report on the potential impact of the proposed dredging on the coastline. If there is a risk of an adverse impact the application is taken no further. Applications are also accompanied by an assessment of the impact on the marine environment—including fish—and on commercial fishing operations. This is considered by MAFF, which is responsible for marine environmental protection, before it passes its views on the application to DOE.

In Scotland, similar arrangements are operated by the Scottish Office Development Department which co-ordinates the GV and seeks comments on issues relating to marine environmental protection from the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department.

Neither DOE nor MAFF is undertaking a review of licences. These are issued by the Crown Estate. The DOE has, however, undertaken a review of the GV procedures and the Government have announced their intention to introduce a statutory procedure in place of the GV procedure. In the meantime, until a suitable legislative opportunity arises, the Government will be introducing similar, interim, informal procedures following discussion with interested parties in England and Wales. A similar review of the GV procedure is currently being undertaken by the Scottish Office, which expects to reach a conclusion shortly.

Bathing Water Directives

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the time scale for the implementation, by the United Kingdom, of recommendations contained in the EC bathing water directive. [12497]

Mr. Clappison: The bathing water directive provides for a 10-year time scale for compliance following its notification in 1976. However, the majority of United Kingdom bathing waters were not identified until 1987. The £2,000 million programme of bathing water improvements, which is now substantially complete, is intended to achieve the required standards as quickly as possible. Significant progress has been made with compliance against the coliform bacteria standards, rising from 66 per cent. in 1988 to 90 per cent. last year.

Sanitary Products

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue guidelines to producers of sanitary products in respect of labelling relating to their proper disposal. [12490]

Mr. Clappison: Guidance on how to dispose of sanitary products will be included in the revised version of "Waste Management Paper 25 (Clinical Waste)". The Environment Agency, which is responsible for drawing up this paper, is expected to consult industry on it in summer 1997. This consultation will include manufacturers of sanitary products.

Many existing manufacturers have already revised the disposal instructions on their products either to recommend waste bins as an appropriate alternative disposal option to flushing or to advise positively against flushing.

Revenue Support Grant (Manchester)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the steps taken to ensure the accuracy of the statistics for income support claimants and their dependants used for calculating revenue support grant settlements for the city of Manchester. [12576]

Sir Paul Beresford: The data used on income support claimants are as estimated by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security. My Department is discussing with the Department of Social Security the representations made by Manchester city council about these data. There have also been direct discussions between officers of the city council and the Department of Social Security.

Song Birds

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he is taking to protect song birds. [12498]

Mr. Clappison: The biodiversity steering group report, published in December 1995, highlighted the issue of declining song bird populations as a priority issue. The report contained costed action plans to stabilise and prevent further declines in the populations of the song thrush and skylark as well as costed habitat action plans for cereal field margins, lowland wet grassland and other important bird habitats. The targets and action plans have been endorsed by the Government and further costed action plans are in preparation for a number of other song bird species.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12704]

Mr. Clappison: The Department produces a great many circulars, regulations and consultation papers; many, to a greater or lesser extent, have environmental effects. Central records are not kept of the information in the way requested. Therefore, this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Asbestos

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of (a) the quantity of (i) white asbestos and (ii) brown and blue asbestos, removed from structures in each of the last 10 years and (b) the quantity which remains in structures. [12680]

Mr. Clappison: No estimates of the quantity of asbestos removed from or remaining within structures have been made by my Department.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many deaths have resulted from exposure to asbestos in the workplace in each of the last 10 years; [12682]

(2) how many deaths resulted from non-occupational exposure to asbestos in each of the last 10 years; and what estimate he has made of the number of deaths from non-occupational exposure to asbestos in each of the next three decades; [12671]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of deaths which will result from occupational exposure to asbestos in each of the next three decades; [12683]

(4) how many deaths from occupational exposure to asbestos there were in each of the last 10 years, categorised according to type of occupation. [12687]

Sir Paul Beresford: Exposure to asbestos can cause three serious diseases—mesothelioma, asbestosis and lung cancer. The table shows the total number of deaths with a cause of death mentioning mesothelioma or asbestosis in each of the years from 1985 to 1994 for males and females combined. These are the latest data available.

Most cases of mesothelioma are believed to be caused by asbestos exposure, although there is also believed to be a background rate of mesothelioma deaths which may account for about 100 cases annually in this country. This figure is expected to remain static over the next three decades. The remaining cases of mesothelioma can be assumed to be due to asbestos exposure, and most of this exposure to have been occupational.

	Mesothelioma	Asbestosis (without mesothelioma)
1985	617	140
1986	704	166
1987	814	143
1990	885	164
1991	1,011	163
1992	1,082	150

The data currently available on deaths from mesothelioma suggest that the number of deaths in men in 10 years, time could range between 1,000 and 2,100; in 20 years, time between 1,300 and 3,000 and in 30 years, time between 1,000 and 3,200. These projections are based on a paper, "The continuing increase in mesothelioma mortality in Britain", which was published in The Lancet on 3 March 1995. This paper discusses the uncertainties attached to the projections, which increase considerably beyond about 2010. The projections are confined to men because there are too few deaths among women to provide stable projections of future mortality. There were 152 female mesothelioma deaths in 1994.

No projections have been made of how the numbers of asbestosis cases may increase, but the long latency of the asbestos-related diseases, which is anything from 15 to 60 years, means that these deaths are occurring from exposures that generally took place long ago.

From the available data it is not possible to attribute individual cases of mesothelioma reliably to exposure within a particular occupation. For a discussion of occupational patterns for mesothelioma I refer the hon. Member to chapter 9 of the "Occupational Health Decennial Supplement" published in 1995 by the then Office of Population Censuses and Surveys and the Health and Safety Executive, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Deaths from asbestos-related lung cancer are indistinguishable from those caused by other factors, including smoking. Currently there are estimated to be one or two deaths from asbestos-related lung cancer for each death from mesothelioma. The falling prevalence of smoking is likely to reduce this ratio in future because the effects of asbestos and tobacco multiply each other.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the regulation of white asbestos in products imported into the United Kingdom. [12686]

Sir Paul Beresford: The range of asbestos products which may be manufactured, imported, supplied and used in the United Kingdom is restricted by the provisions of an EU directive (91/659/EEC), which bans certain uses and a range of products containing white asbestos. This directive is implemented in the United Kingdom by the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1992 in Great Britain, the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1993 for Northern Ireland and the Asbestos Products (Safety) Regulations 1985, as amended in 1987.

Care Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many and what percentage of identified young vulnerable people leaving care are (a) eligible for and (b) granted (i) temporary and (ii) permanent housing; and if he will make a statement. [12809]

Mr. Clappison: During the 12 months to 30 September 1996, 3,540 households containing a vulnerable young person were accepted as statutorily homeless by local housing authorities in England. Information is not held centrally either about the number of young care leavers in this category or about the type of accommodation provided. Under part VII of the Housing Act 1996, which took effect from 20 January 1997, an authority has a duty to secure suitable accommodation for at least two years for applicants who meet the statutory homelessness criteria, unless suitable alternative accommodation is available in the authority's area. Such people will also be entitled to appear on the authority's housing register, and be considered for long-term housing.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Desertification

25. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent measures he has taken to help countries counter desertification. [11140]

Dr. Liam Fox: The United Kingdom has currently committed this financial year about £57 million in bilateral assistance for projects relevant to desertification. The United Kingdom ratified the UN desertification convention on 18 October 1996 and continues to play a leading role in negotiations to finalise financial and institutional arrangements for implementation of the convention.

Rwanda and Burundi

30. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contributions the Government are making towards population and reproductive health projects for the refugees in Rwanda and Burundi. [11145]

Dr. Liam Fox: Since 1993 we have provided £175 million bilaterally and through the EU to assist the populations of these two countries. Programmes supported include the provision of basic health care services which often encompass population and reproductive health activities.

European Union

31. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further measures his Department proposes to assist the development of those central European countries that are applicants for EU membership. [11146]

Dr. Liam Fox: Through the know-how fund we are providing a wide range of training and consultancy in European integration issues to the associated countries. Additionally, we also contribute to the cost of EC PHARE—Poland and Hungary Assistance for Economic Restructuring—programmes in this area.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 443, if he will make a statement on the factors underlying his Department's assessment of the benefits accruing from an extension of the second phase of the Indonesian national police training project. [12642]

Dr. Liam Fox: Particular account was taken of the conclusions of a monitoring report of January 1994. This noted

"positive signs that the concept of public service and higher quality standards are beginning to take root in the INP", although these were still limited to police regions in which project activity had been taking place.

The report also noted, with regard to the training of the consultancy unit, that

"the continuing development of their practical experience and the development of regional counterparts in a support function is beginning to indicate the emergence of a powerful and potentially critical service to INP, functioning at strategic, functional and regional levels."

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 208, what steps his Department has taken to ensure that the strategic plans produced under the national police management training project in Indonesia exclude East Timor. [12606]

Dr. Fox: The application of management skills acquired under this project, including production of any strategic plans, is a matter for the Indonesian police authorities.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 207, what specific measures his Department took to promote community policing through the national police management training project in Indonesia. [12605]

Dr. Fox: The methodology of the trainers and the nature of the training itself were designed to expose Indonesian police personnel, both in the central consultancy unit and in the regional commands, to the concept and ethos of community policing, in particular through the setting of improved standards of service to the public.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list those bodies in Lewisham, East to which national lottery awards have been made; and what sum was involved in each case. [12364]

Mr. Sproat: There have been four awards totalling £739,488 to projects in Lewisham, East. The awards are as follows:

Body	Award date	Recipient	Award amount
Sports	31 January 1996	London Borough Lewisham (Malory School)	725,500.00
Charity	11 August 1996	Tideway Adventurers	6,468.00
Charity	11 August 1996	St. Margaret Parent and Toddler Playgroup	1,520.00
Charity	23 October 1995	Newstead Road Playgroup	6,000.00
Total			739,488.00

Football Grounds

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the work still to be completed by Premier League and Football League clubs to bring their grounds up to the safety standards required in the report of Lord Justice Taylor; and what estimates she has made of the cost of this work. [12358]

Mr. Sproat: Premier League and division one clubs were required to meet the all-seater recommendations in the Taylor report by August 1994. The great majority of clubs meet these requirements. Those few that do not have either been granted an extension to the deadline, on account of their having been recently promoted, or they are relocating to new stadia.

Clubs in divisions two and three of the Football League are not required to go all-seated, but will have to meet certain minimum safety standards for retained standing terraces by August 1999. I understand that the Football Trust is carrying out a survey to establish the costs of remaining safety work.

Performing Arts

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to give early notification to local authorities planning their discretionary awards budgets of changes to methods of supporting students undertaking performing arts courses through lottery funds. [12426]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1997]: Plans for an interim scheme to help more students take up places at accredited dance and drama training schools in England were announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in October last year. The scheme will be administered by the Arts Council of England which is in the process of consulting on the details of its operation. As part of this consultation, a copy of the Arts Council's draft proposals has been sent to each local education authority. The Arts Council, in consultation with the Council for Local Education Authorities, hopes to be in a position to inform local education authorities of the final details of the scheme by the end of February.

Museum Councils

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) when the timetable will be published for the Government's review of area museum councils, as set out in section 7.4 of "Treasures in Trust"; [10507]

(2) when she will make available the terms of reference referred to in section 7.4 of "Treasures in Trust", regarding the review of area museum councils. [10508]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am pleased to announce that Mr. Tony Pender has been appointed to lead the review of area museum councils in England. He will act as chairman of the working party on the review, whose members were announced on 18 December 1996, Official Report, columns 592-93.

Mr. Pender has been asked to let my Department have the conclusions of his review by 7 April. Its broad terms of reference are to conduct a comprehensive review of the area museum councils, having regard to changes in circumstances since their creation, the contents of "Treasures in Trust" and possible future developments. The review will involve wide consultation but the details of the conduct and timetable of the review will be for the working party to decide.

English Tourist Board

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects the review of the Crown classification grading scheme by the English tourist board to be completed. [12637]

Mr. Sproat: In recent months the English tourist board has been working in partnership with the Wales and Scottish tourist boards and with the motoring organisations to design and agree a harmonised scheme for the rating of serviced accommodation in Great Britain. This is a complex task. I hope the ETB will be in a position to make an announcement soon.

Foundation for Sport and the Arts

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what reports she has received on prospects for the continuing operation of the Foundation for Sport and the Arts. [12388]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1997]: The football pools companies have informed me of their intention to cease their voluntary contributions to the Foundation for Sport and the Arts. My officials are meeting the Pools Promoters Association shortly to discuss the continuing operation of the foundation.

National Academy of Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of the costs incurred by the 26 consortia that bid for the site of the National Academy of Sport. [12360]

Mr. Sproat: None. It was up to each bidder to decide how much to spend on its bid.

EU Funding

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful attempts have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the last four years to obtain funds from the EU's (i) Media, (ii) Raphael, (iii) Ariadne and (iv) Kaleidoscope schemes; and what funds have already been allocated to the United Kingdom under each of these schemes. [12345]

Mr. Sproat: Media II, the European Community's initiative to enhance the strength of member states' national audiovisual industries, began in 1996. Under the 1996 programme, 86 proposals from the United Kingdom have been successful. Information regarding the funds allocated, and the number of unsuccessful applications, is not available from the Commission.

Raphael, the European Community support programme in the field of cultural heritage, has yet to be formally adopted by the European Community as an official support programme. A pilot programme was, however, run by the European Commission during 1996. Under this pilot 43 applications were received in which a UK organisation was the lead partner. Of these, 13 were accepted and awarded a total of 760,291 ecu—£560,562.55. In addition, 43 other UK organisations have benefited from funding under the pilot year in view of their participation in projects in which an organisation from another EC member state was the lead partner. Details of the amount of funding received by UK organisations is not held centrally.

Ariadne is the European Community's proposed support programme in the field of books and reading. Like Raphael, it has yet to be officially adopted by the European Community. A pilot programme was run by the European Commission during 1996. Four UK-led partnerships applied for funding under the pilot programme, of which three were successful and received a total of 68,838.40 ecu—£50,754.55. A further 12 UK organisations were cited as co-organisers of successful projects which received a total of 494,136.48 ecu—£364,326.82. It is not possible to specify the precise amounts which will be received by the UK organisations.

One of the benefits to the UK of the Ariadne programme is the translation of England-language literary works and their dissemination throughout the European Community. Of the 40 projects submitted for consideration under the 1996 pilot which involved English-language works for translation, 21 were successful in receiving funding support.

Kaleidoscope is the European Community cultural support programme and was officially adopted as such in 1996. In this first year, 62 applications were made by UK-led partnerships. Of these, 10 applications were successful and received a total of 425,764.46 ecu—£313,916.13. A further 31 UK organisations were cited as co-organisers of successful projects, which received a total of 1,186,262.80 ecu—£874,631.56. Again, the precise allocation of funding to the UK organisations is not known.

Tourism (Consultants)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list those independent consultants or firms that have been awarded contracts to carry our tourism-related work for each of the last four years, specifying which body was responsible for the appointments, the dates of appointment, the name of the consultant or firm, the value of the contract and the subject of the consultants' work. [12357]

Mr. Sproat: The following table lists the contracts awarded by tourism division in my Department, by the British Tourist Authority and by the English tourist board, since the beginning of financial year 1993–94 and including the present one, for work relating to the development of tourism programmes:

In addition, the ETB, in partnership with the Scottish, Wales and Northern Ireland tourist boards awards a contract to undertake the United Kingdom tourism survey. As this contract is for on-going work and is put out for competitive tender at regular intervals, it is not normal commercial practice to make public the value of the contract.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Economic Growth

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will fund research into the role of competitive markets in fostering economic growth. [11113]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Open competitive markets enhance business efficiency and consumer choice, and it is for this reason that competition lies at the heart of the Government's economic policies. Relevant research, bearing on the relationship between competitive markets and economic growth, is being supported by the Economic and Social Research Council and is also undertaken by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Business Breakfasts

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ashfield (Mr. Hoon) on 16 December, Official Report, column 427, if he will list (a) the total cost to date of business breakfasts, (b) the projected total cost until the end of the breakfasts planned, (c) the budget for the breakfasts and (d) the departmental budget from which this money is drawn. [13001]

Mr. Lang: The 11 events held so far are expected to cost approximately £51,500. The final cost of the programme will depend on the number of events. No budget has been specifically set aside for business breakfasts. The costs are being paid by the Government offices concerned: these are underwritten by the DTI's running cost provision.

White Asbestos

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many products containing white asbestos are imported into the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years. [12685]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Data on the number of goods containing white asbestos that were imported into the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years are not available.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much white asbestos was imported into the United Kingdom in bulk form in each of the last 10 years. [12684]

Mr. Taylor: Data on UK imports of white asbestos are given in the table:

UK imports of white asbestos

	Quantity (metric tonnes)	Value (£000)
1986	26,766	7,863
1987	23,865	6,188
1988	24,266	5,417
1989	19,702	5,757
1990	16,022	5,196
1991	11,248	3,272
1992	10,269	3,569
1993	9,681	3,715
1994	11,466	3,987
1995	10,164	3,958
January to August 1996	4,776	2,060

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the level of white asbestos in products manufactured in the United Kingdom. [12681]

Mr. Taylor: This information is not available from official statistics.

Information Technology

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received about his "IT for All" initiative. [11129]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government have received many practical proposals for this initiative from the organisations that have successfully applied to become partners. Many of the partners have also committed significant financial support and other resources to the project. They have welcomed "IT for All" as a valuable addition to the range of programmes already included in the Government's information society initiative.

Other companies and voluntary groups are coming forward to take part.

Wind Farm Schemes

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the projected output of the wind farm schemes funded through the fossil fuel levy for each year from 1991 to 1995; and what has been the actual output; [12117]

(2) what has the cost been of the wind farm programme funded through the fossil fuel levy; and what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of financial support for wind farms. [12119]

Mr. Page [holding answer 22 January 1997]: Figures from the Office of Electricity Regulation put the total cost to the fossil fuel levy of supporting all the renewable energy projects, from the beginning of the programme in 1990 up to March 1996, at £309 million. Of this, I estimate that about a quarter has been for wind farms.

The total annual turnover of the UK electricity supply industry is about £15 billion and the Government believe that, if their market enablement strategy using the non-fossil fuel obligation succeeds, wind energy could eventually capture 10 per cent. of this market. The reductions in the amounts paid for wind energy under successive NFFO rounds suggest that this strategy is indeed working.

The Government do not make output projections for wind farms, but I understand that, on the whole, wind farm projects are meeting the expectations of their owners. The actual outputs, in gigawatt hours, as reported by the Non-fossil Purchasing Agency, were as follows:

1992: 26

1993: 213

1995: 340.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Germany

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has collated on the steps the German Government have taken to secure compliance with the provisions of the Single European Act forbidding discrimination on grounds of nationality. [12307]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has collated no such information.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will collate information on the instances on which the German Government have not overturned decisions of German courts on the grounds of discrimination against other nationalities as required under the Single European Act. [12333]

Mr. Davis: Under the EC treaty, the issue of whether there would be a breach of the right to provide services or of the right of establishment is a matter for the European Commission which has the duty of ensuring that the provisions of the treaty and measures implementing it are applied.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek an assurance from the German Government that they will revoke the decisions of the German county court at Friedrichshafen in respect of the admissibility of evidence provided by a British lawyer on the English law of probate. [12332]

Mr. Davis: Revoking a decision of the county court is not a matter for the German Government. A court decision can usually be reversed or altered only by the same or another court within the same legal system, for example, on appeals in accordance with the rules of that system.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the German Government urging that their courts accept evidence from British lawyers on the powers granted under the law of probate in the United Kingdom in cases which relate to such matters in Germany. [12308]

Mr. Davis: The German courts are, like our own, independent of Government. It would be inappropriate for us to seek to persuade the German Government to influence the decisions of the German courts.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the German county court at Friedrichshafen's ruling on the acceptability of evidence as to the English law of probate. [12306]

Mr. Davis: None.

Antarctic Treaty

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many countries have ratified the Antarctic treaty; and when he expects the secretariat to be established. [12455]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Twenty-three countries have ratified the environmental protocol. Japan, Russia and the US have still to do so. On the issue of the Antarctic treaty secretariat, the consultative parties have yet to reach an agreement by consensus on its location and date of establishment.

European Commission (General Election)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the European Union Commission about interventions by (a) British-based and (b) non-British-based officials and Commissioners in the forthcoming general election in respect of (i) advancing or deferring Commission policies and (ii) rebutting criticisms of the Commission, the Union and its policies. [12476]

Mr. David Davis: None.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 321, if he will make a statement on the police studies course under the Chevening award scheme. [12635]

Mr. Hanley: One Indonesian police officer undertook an MA in police studies at Exeter university in 1992–93. The course was funded from this Department's Chevening awards scheme-diplomatic wing.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the business likely to come to the United Kingdom referred to in paragraph 2.5 of the National Audit Office report on "Aid to Indonesia" (HC 101 of Session 1996–97). [12593]

Mr. Hanley: Paragraph 2.5 of the National Audit Office report records the view expressed by the British embassy in Jakarta in September 1985 that failure to make a good aid offer quickly could affect a number of items of business likely to come to the United Kingdom. The embassy did not specify of which items of business it had in mind.

The conclusions in the NAO report found that there was no evidence that these representations had any influence on the Administration's decision to undertake the project referred to in paragraph 2.5 of the NAO report.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, columns 33–34, what was the value of the turnkey project near Jakarta. [12630]

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

I understand from the company that the value is £12.25 million.

European Union

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his European counterparts about the next stages of European construction. [11109]

Mr. David Davis: Government Ministers regularly meet their European counterparts to discuss European issues.

Amsterdam Summit

Mr. Mackinlay: to ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's role in co-ordinating the Government's policies in respect of the Amsterdam summit. [11121]

Mr. David Davis: This Department has overall responsibility for co-ordinating the Government's policy towards the European Union, including that towards the Amsterdam European Council.

Ministers for Children

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which (a) EU and (b) UN countries have a Minister for children. [12807]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: This information is not collected centrally. To answer the question would incur disproportionate cost.

European Single Currency

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the plans and competence of the European Commission to advance a publicity campaign for the European single currency within the United Kingdom, through the Committee of the Regions. [12959]

Mr. David Davis: The European Commission has confirmed that, in accordance with earlier agreements, it has no plans for a publicity campaign on the euro in the United Kingdom, either through the Committee of the Regions or by other means. Statements made in Brussels by the Commissioner responsible for information referred to plans for activities in the EU as a whole, and were not directed specifically at the UK.

DEFENCE

Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the joint working groups at present operating as part of (a) the 1958 mutual defence agreement for co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for defence purposes, (b) the Polaris sales agreement and (c) the Trident sales agreement. [12372]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Joint working groups continue to be the focal points for technical exchanges under the 1958 mutual defence agreement. Subject areas are as follows:

Radiation simulation and kinetic effects technology
Energetic materials
Test monitoring
Nuclear materials
Warhead electrical components and technologies
Non-nuclear materials
Nuclear counter-terrorism technology
Facilities
Nuclear weapons engineering
Nuclear warhead physics
Computational technology
Aircraft, missile and space system hardening
Laboratory plasma physics
Manufacturing practices
Nuclear weapon accident response technology

Nuclear weapon code development

Nuclear weapon environment and damage effects.

Separate arrangements exist for exchanges under the Polaris sales agreement, as amended for Trident. The working groups concerned are the Trident working party group, the joint steering tasks group, the Trident joint re-entry systems working group and the joint systems performance and assessment group. I am withholding information related to the detailed activities of these groups under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government information relating to defence, security and international affairs.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on relations between the United States and the United Kingdom Governments in respect of implementation of the 1958 mutual defence agreement for co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for defence purposes since the agreement was last amended. [12125]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Our arrangements with the United States under the 1958 agreement for co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for defence purposes continue to contribute to our mutual defence and security.

Sandia National Laboratories

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the services that Sandia National Laboratories provides in support of (i) the United Kingdom nuclear research programme and (ii) the United Kingdom Trident programme. [12374]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my predecessor, my right hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman), gave on 8 June 1995, Official Report, column 298.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the facilities currently available or planned to be available at AWE Aldermaston for use as part of the above ground experiments programme; and what are the estimated annual running costs. [12120]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No new facilities have so far been constructed or approved for above ground experimental work at AWE Aldermaston. Existing facilities, many of which have other purposes, are used as required.

I am withholding details of those facilities and their estimated annual running costs for above ground experimental work under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the projects on which his Department is working jointly with Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. [12373]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Details of the areas of research involving the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory are as follows:

Radiation simulation and kinetic effects technology

Energetic materials

Test monitoring

Nuclear materials

Warhead electrical components and technologies

Non-nuclear materials

Nuclear counter-terrorism technology

Facilities

Nuclear weapons engineering

Nuclear warhead physics

Computational technology

Aircraft, missile and space system hardening

Laboratory plasma physics

Manufacturing practices

Nuclear weapon accident response technology

Nuclear weapon code development

Nuclear weapon environment and damage effects.

Laser Defence System

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the proposed United Kingdom–United States of America anti-ballistic laser defence system with particular reference to the implications for his Department. [12590]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No decision has been taken on the requirement for a national ballistic missile defence capability. We are aware that a ballistic missile defence system is being developed in the United States of America which uses an airborne laser. Currently, there are no proposals for this to become a joint programme involving the United Kingdom.

Arctic Convoys

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received in respect of Arctic convoy veterans. [12549]

Mr. Soames: My Department has recently received a number of letters seeking the institution of an Arctic campaign star to recognise service given on the Arctic convoys during the second world war. Replies have been sent to all these letters, explaining that service with the Arctic convoys has already been recognised by the award of the Atlantic star, and that there are no plans to institute any further medals for service given in the second world war.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will arrange for the striking of a medal for the merchant and Royal Navy seamen who took part in the second world war Arctic convoy systems; and if he will make a statement. [12548]

Mr. Soames: Service with the convoys to north Russia during the second world war was recognised by the award of the Atlantic star. There are no plans to institute any further medals for service given in the second world war.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will meet second world war Arctic convoy veterans of north-east Wales concerning their requests for an Arctic campaign star; and if he will make a statement. [12550]

Mr. Soames: My Department has no plans to hold any meetings with those who served on the convoys to north Russia during the second world war to discuss the institution of an Arctic campaign star. Service with the convoys has already been recognised by the award of the Atlantic star.

Test Ban Treaty

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress towards the implementation of a comprehensive test ban treaty. [12589]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The comprehensive test ban treaty has so far been signed by 139 states. The first preparatory commission of signatory states to carry out the necessary preparations for the effective implementation of the treaty met in New York in November 1996 and will resume in Geneva in March. A provisional technical secretariat is being established to co-ordinate and support the process. Expert consultations on implementation of the verification arrangements are under way.

Service Redundancies

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the costs incurred by his Department as a result of redundancies in each of the three services in each of the last six years. [11456]

Mr. Soames: [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1997, c. 553]: I regret that the estimate given for 1996–97 was incomplete. A table with the correct figures is provided:

£ million

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97[1]
RN	12	95	75	28	90
ARMY	209	328	281	16	16
RAF	11	86	97	143	275
Total	232	509	453	187	381

[1] Estimate.

These payments include special capital payments, and early payment of terminal grants, commuted pension payments and the first year's payment of immediate pensions.

The figures for 1996–97 are an estimate as the RAF redundancy programme will not be completed until the end of the year.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12709]

Mr. Soames: The "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1996" contains an account of MOD environmental activities and my Department's environmental policy statement. My Department has not issued any other document of the type listed which has been assessed directly or indirectly to originate significant environmental effects.

Military Museums

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the revenue which the National Army museum in Chelsea would have obtained from an entry charge of £2 per visitor in 1996. [12871]

Mr. Soames: A sum of £256,878, but this figure takes no account of any reduction in visitor numbers that would have followed the introduction of admission charges, or visitors who may have been eligible for free admission.

Any decision to introduce admission charges is a matter for the council of the National Army museum.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost to (a) the Royal Signals museum and (b) Bournemouth university of their joint multi-media facility programme; and if he will make a statement. [12872]

Mr. Soames: The cost of the Royal Signals museum's participation in Bournemouth university's project, Electroscape, will be met from the museum trustees' non-public funds. There will be no cost to my Department. The cost to Bournemouth university is not a matter for my Department.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage reduction in the funding of regimental and corps museums is planned for the period from April 1998. [12873]

Mr. Soames: We have advised museum trustees that there will be a reduction of 12.7 per cent. in the contribution the MOD makes to the funding of regimental and corps museums from April 1998. We are currently consulting with them about how this should be achieved. Not all regimental and corps museums will be affected.

Abbey Wood, Bristol

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the outcome of the discussions between his Department and the shell and core contractors for the new MOD building at Abbey Wood, Bristol, following their claim for additional payments referred in his answer of 24 June 1996, Official Report, column 39. [12958]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Following the completion of shell and core works, a new claim for additional payments and extensions of time was submitted by the Abbey Wood shell and core contractor in December 1996. This claim is currently being assessed and negotiations between the Department and its contractor continue.

Service Accommodation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list estimate on a monthly basis for the cost to public funds of providing service accommodation for a (a) private, (b) corporal, (c) lance corporal, (d) sergeant and (e) staff sergeant in (i) the Regular Army and (ii) the Military Provost Guard Service. [11286]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 20 January 1997]: I regret that the information requested is unavailable in the format requested. Houses are allocated to service personnel by size of family of family and not by rank and the requested figures for a breakdown by rank would not therefore be available.

The married quarters estate in England and Wales has recently been sold to Annington Homes; the MOD leases back the quarters required at the same cost whether they are occupied by Military Provost Guard Service or by full engagement regular service personnel. In addition, my Department pays the costs of maintenance, the upgrade programme, administration of the Defence Housing Executive and the inherent costs of asset ownership in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

MPGS soldiers will be allowed to occupy married and single accommodation on the same terms as full engagement regular service personnel for the duration of the pilot scheme, where this accommodation is available. The MPGS investment appraisal reflected this last factor.

TREASURY

Jersey (Financial Institutions)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent the liabilities of the Jersey financial institutions are underwritten by (a) UK institutions and (b) the Bank of England; and if he will make a statement. [9730]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In general, the relationship between a parent institution and its subsidiaries is the same irrespective of where the subsidiaries are located. In the event of an insolvency, the extent to which a parent underwrites the liabilities of its subsidiaries is ultimately a matter for the courts.

The Bank of England does not underwrite the liabilities of Jersey financial institutions.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the responsibilities of (a) the Government and (b) the Bank of England in relation to the financial institutions and affairs of Jersey; and if he will make a statement. [9729]

Mrs. Knight: Jersey is internally self-governing and has its own legislature which is responsible for matters relating to financial institutions. The UK Government are responsible for Jersey's defence and external relations.

The Bank of England includes Jersey subsidiaries and branches of UK authorised institutions in its consolidated supervision of the UK parent.

Utility Bills

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 5 December 1996, Official Report, columns 745-46, if he will estimate for the typical domestic customer the change in the combined gas, electricity and water bill between 1979 and 1996 in real terms. [11936]

Mr. Jack: The information requested is given in the table. The typical domestic customer's gas and electricity bills have fallen in real terms, including VAT. There has however been an increase in water bills, which reflects the industry's large capital investment and environmental programmes. Taking this into account, a typical combined bill rose by about £7.70 in 1990 prices.

	Electricity £	Gas £	Water and sewerage £	Total £
1979	272.9	277.1	93.4	643.4

Electricity bills are based on a typical annual consumption of 3,300 kWh. The figures used are weighted averages for the UK, and include both VAT and the national grid discount.

Gas bills are based on an annual consumption of 17,600 kWh. The figures used are weighted averages for the UK, and include VAT.

Water and sewerage bills relate to 1979–80 and 1996. They are based on average unmeasured bills of customers of the water and sewerage companies in England and Wales.

All figures are in 1990 prices, and all have been deflated using the retail prices index deflator.

Value Added Tax

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals have been made by the European Commission since 1990 to extend the coverage of the United Kingdom's VAT system; what goods and services would have been affected; and what was the United Kingdom's Government response in each case. [11642]

Mr. Oppenheim: No proposals have been made by the European Commission specifically to extend the coverage of the United Kingdom's VAT system. However, since 1990 the Commission has put forward a number of proposals relating to the VAT system in the European Community as a whole. The policy implications, and the Government's position, in respect of all such proposals have been fully set out in the relevant explanatory memorandums, which have been deposited in the Library of the House.

Hypothermia

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the incidence of (a) hypothermia and (b) hypothermia-related illnesses in (i) December 1996 and (ii) January 1997. [11472]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 27 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the incidence of hypothermia and hypothermia-related illnesses in December 1996 and January 1997.

This information is not available for this period.

The latest figures for NHS hospital in-patient incidences of hypothermia in England are for 1994/95. 1,012 incidences of hypothermia as the primary diagnosis were recorded. This figure shows each incidence of hypothermia presented to a consultant and may, therefore, double count people who see more than one consultant or see a consultant for more than one incidence of hypothermia. It also only shows hospital in-patient figures, so does not include people dealt with by GPs or in emergency departments.

This reply was drafted in conjunction with members of the Government Statistical Service in the Department of Health.

Taxation

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the combined impact on the overall level of taxation of the measures in the Finance Bill. [12394]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 23 January 1997]: The measures in the Finance Bill will raise £390 million in 1997–98, compared to an indexed base. The Finance Bill excludes measures in the Budget that are passed by regulation or statutory instrument, such as measures on business rates and national insurance contributions. The effect of Budget measures, excluding pre-announced measures, is to cut taxes by £735 million in 1997–98, compared to an indexed base.

Green Book (Revision)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1996, Official Report, column 438, if he will give his current estimate of the date of publication of the revised edition of the Green Book. [11636]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 January 1997]: The revised addition of the Green Book has a preliminary publication date of 24 February 1997. It is proposed to publish the book through the Stationery Office.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1996, Official Report, column 438, if he will give the dates on which the relevant Treasury expenditure team (a) received the proposal for the Cardiff bay barrage for the purposes of the analysis using Green Book principles and (b) gave its agreement that the expenditure provided value for money. [11635]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 January 1997]: An economic appraisal of the Cardiff bay barrage project was received by the Treasury from the Welsh Office in November 1987. The Treasury gave its approval for expenditure on the project in June 1988.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1996, Official Report, column 438, if he will place in the Library a copy of the Treasury's economic appraisal of the Cardiff bay barrage. [11634]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 January 1997]: Responsibility for preparing economic appraisals of individual projects lies with the body that is funding the project. The Treasury did not therefore prepare an economic appraisal of the Cardiff bay barrage.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which inter-governmental agency will be responsible for drawing up the rules, and exercising authority in their interpretation and application, of the exchange rate mechanism that will be available for those members of the European Union that do not join the Euro-monetary system when it commences operation. [10695]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 13 January 1997]: The European Council meeting at Dublin on 13 and 14 December confirmed that there will be a new, voluntary, exchange rate mechanism in stage 3 of economic and monetary union. The Government expect that European Council resolutions on a new ERM will now be drafted for final agreement by Heads of State or Government meeting at Amsterdam in June. The European Council endorsed the European Monetary Institute report "Monetary and Exchange rate policy cooperation between the Euro and other EU countries" which stated:

> "At the level of the central banks, the European Central Bank (ECB) General Council will monitor the functioning of the exchange rate mechanism and will serve as a forum for monetary and exchange rate policy coordination as well as for the administration of the intervention and financing mechanism." (Presidency conclusions—Dublin, 13–14 December 1996 SN 401/96 (p.25 of annex))

Under the treaty, all EU member states will be represented on the ECB general council.

The Prime Minister and I have made it clear that the United Kingdom will not join such a mechanism and the European Council conclusions made it clear that no member state would be obliged to join it.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Dover: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobless households there were in the (a) Chorley and (b) Sedgefield constituencies (i) in April 1992 and (ii) at the most recent date for which there are available statistics; and what was the number of children in these jobless households. [11788]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 20 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Den Dover dated 27 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the number of jobless households in the Chorley and Sedgefield constituencies; and the number of children in these jobless households.

The information requested is not available. County is the lowest level at which such figures are available from the Labour Force Survey.

Unemployment

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for November (a) 1990 and (b) 1996 the number of under-25-year-olds who had been out of work for more than 12 months in (i) each region of England, (ii) Scotland, (iii) Wales, (iv) Northern Ireland and (v) the United Kingdom. [10909]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 15 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 27 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on long term unemployment amongst people aged under 25 years old.

Claimant count statistics by age and duration are available quarterly for the months of January, April, July and October. For other months data is restricted to those claimants whose records have been computerised. In each case the data is on the unadjusted basis and is therefore not seasonally adjusted and does not make allowances for discontinuities in the count.

The available information can be obtained from the Nomis database accessed by the House of Commons Library.

Drug Misuse (Deaths)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people (a) under 16 and (b) under 20 years died as a result of using (i) cocaine, (ii) heroin, (iii) Ecstasy and (iv) volatile substances, (1) nationally and (2) in the west midlands in each year since 1992; and if he will indicate the percentage change on the previous year. [11681]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 27 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many people have died as a result of using cocaine, heroin, ecstasy and volatile substances.

The numbers of deaths in England and Wales in 1992 of under 16 and under 20 year olds assigned to accidental and other poisoning where cocaine, heroin, ecstasy and volatile substances were mentioned are published in Table 11 of Mortality statistics: injury and poisoning, England and Wales", series DH4, no. 18, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Similar data for the West Midlands and for England and Wales for 1993, 1994 and 1995 could be provided at disproportionate cost.

Treasury Building

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the final contract to be signed with Exchequer Partnerships plc for the development of the Treasury building. [12146]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The aim is to conclude the final contract, the development framework agreement, as soon as practicable.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he proposes to make available about the plans for the Treasury building following the signing of the commercial heads of terms agreement with Exchequer Partnerships plc. [12148]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 16 January 1997, Official Report, column 382.

WALES

Personalised Number Plates (Executive Agencies)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many personalised number plates there are in the ownership of the executive agencies operated by his Department; and if he will list them. [11409]

Mr. Hague: My Department has sole responsibility for one executive agency, which is Cadw. It has no personalised number plates.

Unemployment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of unemployed people in Wales on the basis of (a) those who claim benefits and (b) those recorded in the labour force survey as desiring to work, at the latest available date in each case; and if he will indicate what factors underlie any differences between the two figures. [12024]

Mr. Hague: On 12 December 1996, there were 93,084 persons on the claimant unemployment count in Wales. The latest figure from the labour force survey is for autumn—September to November—1996, when an estimated 109,000 people in Wales were classified as International Labour Organisation unemployed. The above figures are not seasonally adjusted.

The first figure is from a monthly count of those claiming unemployment-related benefits. It is an administrative measure and records the number of claimants on one particular day each month. In contrast, the labour force survey measure is based on a sample survey of around 3,000 households in Wales each quarter. It uses the internationally standard ILO definition of unemployment. This classifies as unemployed those who were without a job at the time the survey was conducted and were available to start work in the next fortnight and had either actively looked for work in the last four weeks or had found a job and were waiting to start.

The ILO unemployed are not asked if they would like to have a job because, in order to be classified as unemployed, they will need already to have stated that they have looked, and are available, for work. Respondents are questioned only on whether they would like a job if they are economically inactive and have not looked for a job in the last four weeks. These people are not ILO unemployed.

The Office for National Statistics has published a booklet "How exactly is unemployment measured" which describes the claimant count and labour force survey measures of unemployment in more detail. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to (a) monitor and (b) deal with the problem of processing statutory assessments of children with special educational needs within the legal deadline of six months with particular reference to dyslexia. [11576]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Local education authorities have a responsibility to comply with the time scales prescribed in regulations for the assessment of children with special educational needs, including those with dyslexia. Should the local education authority fail to meet the time scales, there is a right of complaint to my right hon. Friend. Health authorities and social services departments also have duties in relation to these statutory time scales.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to ensure implementation of the principle of partnership with parents of children with special needs from April. [11577]

Mr. Evans: The code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, to which all agencies involved with children with special educational needs have to have regard, stresses the principle of partnership with parents. In support of this, my right hon. Friend has, for a number of years, allocated grant to the special needs advisory project—SNAP—and, through the grants for educational support and training programme, has allocated grant to local education authorities to assist them in their duty of identifying a name person to help parents in the statementing process. The GEST funding is to continue in 1997–98 and the Welsh Office is considering an application from SNAP for further funding from April 1997.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children in (a) Ynys Môn and (b) Wales are the subject of statements of special educational needs; and how many of these are estimated to be related to dyslexia or specific literacy difficulties. [11578]

Mr. Evans: At January 1996, according to returns to the schools census, 15,909 children in schools in Wales had statements of special educational needs, and of these 372 were in schools in Ynys Môn. Information is not available about the number of children with dyslexia or specific literacy difficulties, although they are likely to be included in the number identified as having specific learning difficulties: 2,529 children in schools in Wales had statements which recorded this category as their major difficulty; of these, 114 were in schools in Ynys Môn. Further data on children with statements of special educational needs are contained in the recently published Welsh Office volume "Welsh Education and Training Statistics Bulletin No. 3: Pupils with Statements of Special Educational Needs 1993–94—1995–96", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to ensure that an adequate number of teachers hold specialist qualifications in dyslexia in Ynys Môn. [11579]

Mr. Evans: It is for local education authorities and schools to ensure that suitable education is provided for children who are dyslexic. The Welsh Office provides funding through the grants for education support and training programme to local education authorities for the training of teachers of children with special educational needs, including specifically those with dyslexia.

Greenmeadow Inn, Machen

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what applications he has received for assistance from public funds for the demolition of the Greenmeadow inn, Waterloo, Machen, and for the subsequent redevelopment of the site; and if he will make a statement. [11930]

Mr. Hague: No application for financial assistance for demolition and redevelopment of this site has been made to my Department.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12715]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Welsh Office issues a great number of these documents and many could give rise, to a greater or lesser extent, to environmental effects. No central records are maintained of the environmental assessments undertaken by the Department, and listings could not be provided without incurring disproportionate costs. The main environmental initiatives under way or planned by the Welsh Office are described in "The Environment in Wales Fifth Report" published last November, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Nurses

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the pre-registration nurse education intake in each year from 1987–88 to 1995–96. [12689]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the intake for nursing education is published by the Welsh National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health visiting in its annual report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many nurses in Wales were aged (a) between 20 and 30, (b) between 31 and 40, (c) between 41 and 50, and (d) over 50 years in each year from 1987–88 to 1995–96. [12691]

Mr. Jones: The available information, which relates to all nursing and midwifery staff directly employed by the NHS in Wales excluding pre-registration learners, is given in the table.

Number of staff in post at 30 September[1]

	Age group (years)
	20 to 29	30 to 39	40 to 49	50 and over

1996	6,500	12,600	8,900	6,100

n/a = Not available.

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred. Some nurses may be counted more than once—such as when they have more than one contract—and a small number of nurses on local payscales, who cannot be identified centrally as nursing and midwifery staff, may be excluded.

Bird Reserve, Gwent

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he received the application for an appeal against non-determination of the Land Authority for Wales' application for a bird reserve on the Gwent levels; and when he expects the appeal to begin. [13056]

Mr. Hague: The application for an appeal against non-determination of the Land Authority for Wales' application for a bird reserve on the Gwent levels was received in my Department on 17 January 1997, and is under consideration.

Meningitis

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the findings of (a) the Bro Taf health authority report and (b) the university report into the meningitis outbreak at the university of Wales in Cardiff. [13026]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Yes.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 21 January, Official Report, columns 575-76, on meningitis cases, how long it took to diagnose each case of type C meningitis in Wales in 1996. [13053]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not held centrally.

Cardiff International Airport

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to link Cardiff international airport via (a) a class 1 road and (b) a rail link to (i) the city of Cardiff and (ii) the M4. [12870]

Mr. Hague: None. These are matters for the responsible organisations.

The Vale of Glamorgan council is, with the support of transport grant from my Department, undertaking preparatory work on proposals to improve road links between the airport and Culverhouse Cross. I understand that Prism Rail plc, the new operator of the Cardiff Valley lines, will be examining the feasibility of a new rail link.

Health Authorities and Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of (a) the financial position of Welsh health authorities and trusts at the end of the third quarter of the financial year 1996–97 (b) the number of (i) authorities and (ii) trusts expected to be in deficit at the year end; and if he will make a statement on the arrangements for year end carrying over of deficits. [13057]

Mr. Hague: Health authorities are required to ensure that spending is contained within notified cash limits for the financial year. The table illustrates the health authority reported spend at the end of December against the latest notified cash limits for revenue, capital and GP expenses.

The third quarter trust monitoring returns are in the process of being validated and I shall write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

As health authorities deal with cash figures the carrying over of deficits is not applicable.

Audiometry Patients

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average time audiometry patients in Wales waited to be treated by a consultant in each of the region's health authorities for each of the last five years for which figures are available; how many patients voluntarily removed themselves from the waiting lists before treatment was completed; and if he will make a statement. [12864]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of registered mentally handicapped people in community care in each council area in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [12950]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Each local authority reports to the Welsh Office the total number on its register of people with learning disabilities and the number of these who are accommodated in community living arrangements. The latest figures are shown in the table.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the expenditure on (a) building maintenance and (b) education of each authority indicating (i) grant and (ii) private finance initiative funding received for each of the last five financial years; and if he will make a statement. [12867]

Mr. Hague: The latest available complete information is outturn expenditure on education from 1990–91 to 1994–95 as reported to the Welsh Office by county councils. The information provided is split between revenue expenditure—tables 1 and 2—and capital expenditure—table 3. No information is available relating to capital expenditure on building maintenance. There were reductions in expenditure from 1992–93 to 1993–94 due to the transfer of responsibility for the funding for further education from local authorities to the Further Education Funding Council for Wales.

Central Government support for local authorities' revenue expenditure is provided mainly by way of revenue support grant and shares of redistributed non-domestic rates. This support is unhypothecated, therefore allocations in respect of individual functions or services such as education do not exist.

Additional support for revenue expenditure is provided by specific grants which are paid in relation to expenditure on a particular project or service. Details of those specific grants relating to education are given in table 4.

There were no PFI projects in the education sector for the given years.

[1] Includes mandatory student awards, grants for education support and training, Welsh language education, education of travel and displaced persons, education of commonwealth immigrants, Training Agency and work related further education.

Welsh Medium Schools

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many primary schools in Wales provide education through the medium of Welsh; what was the average class size in these schools on 31 December for each of the last five years; what was the average cost of teaching staff provision in these schools in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [12868]

Mr. Hague: At January 1996, 561 primary schools had classes where at least part of the curriculum was taught through the medium of Welsh. The average class size in those schools was 23.6 pupils. The average class size in schools similarly defined in January 1995 was 23.5 and in January 1994 23.1. Figures could be provided for previous years only at disproportionate cost. No average teaching staff cost figures are available.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Clergy (Pensions)

38. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what assessment the Church Commissioners have made of the relationship between the contributions made by retired clergy during their working ministership and the level of pension they are now receiving. [11153]

Mr. Alison: The Church's pension scheme for retired clergy, deaconesses and licensed layworkers is non-contributory for those members of the scheme in pensionable service. Pensions and retirement lump sums are currently paid from the commissioners' investment income, and based on the length of qualifying pensionable service completed. In 1996–97, the full service pension—based on a full 37 years' service—was £8,533. For those with less than the full 37 years' service, the pension entitlement is reduced proportionately.

Investments

39. Mr. Cohen: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what representations the Church Commissioners have made to their bankers to practise ethical investments. [11154]

Mr. Alison: The commissioners would expect their bankers to operate responsibly in areas such as corporate governance, employment, the environment and the community.

Vicarages and Palaces (Security)

40. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, pursuant to his answer of 9 December, Official Report, column 55, if he will make a statement on the progress of the Church Commissioners' review of advice to dioceses on security measures for parsonage homes and suffragan bishops' homes. [11155]

Mr. Alison: The advice which the commissioners have under review at present specifically concerns parsonage houses, as part of a wider review of their parsonages design guide. To this end, they have visited houses in the dioceses of Chichester, Guildford and Oxford and have in hand visits to the dioceses of Manchester and Southwark. They will also have discussions on security with crime prevention officers. Suffragan bishops houses' are the which responsibility of dioceses which no doubt bear in mind the security measures introduced by the commissioners into See houses and which are recommended in the parsonages design guide.

Episcopal Residences

41. Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what is the value of episcopal residences owned by the Church Commissioners; and what these figures represent as a proportion of the Church Commissioners' total assets. [11156]

Mr. Alison: Some See houses, which by their nature are unlikely to be sold, are valued at a nominal figure. Other See houses are valued on the basis of their council tax bandings. On this basis as at 31 December 1995, the last date for which figures are currently available, the value of diocesan bishops' houses owned by the commissioners, including staff accommodation, was £16 million. This represented 0.6 per cent. of the commissioners' total assets.

Archbishops Commission

42. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what action he has taken regarding the recommendations arising from the Archbishops Commission set up in 1994; and if he will make a statement. [11157]

Mr. Alison: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 11 December 1995, Official Report, column 501.

The commissioners continue to take a constructive part in developing proposals for improving the machinery of the established Church at national level. Key elements from the commissioners' perspective are their answerability both to Synod and to Parliament and the integrity of the commissioners' historic trusts.

Poverty

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what was the financial provision for the Church Commission on poverty in the last available year. [11151]

Mr. Alison: Most of the commissioners' expenditure goes on the support of a nationwide ministry, which includes the most deprived areas of the country. In 1996 this support included £22 million on allocations for stipends and housing outgoings which was specifically targeted on the needier dioceses.

Set-aside Arrangements

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what acreage of land owned by the Church Commissioners is covered by set-aside arrangements. [11152]

Mr. Alison: The commissioners do not hold statistics on their land covered by set-aside arrangements, since this is a matter for each tenant.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pesca Scheme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful attempts have been made in the last four years by United Kingdom organisations to obtain funds from the EU's Pesca scheme; and what funds have been allocated to the United Kingdom under this scheme. [12352]

Mr. Baldry: The Pesca scheme was launched in 1996. To date, there have been 71 applications for Pesca funding in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, of which four projects have been approved and six have been rejected. Decisions on the remaining applications will be taken early in the year.

Similar information is not available for Scotland as the Scottish Office does not hold a list of projects submitted under Pesca. Pesca is delivered in eligible areas in Scotland through local Pesca groups. The Scottish Office will collate detailed annual reports from the LPGs for transmission to the European Commission in June 1997.

Some 43 mecu—£36 million—has been allocated to the UK Pesca fishing dependent areas and this funding is due to be committed between 1996 and 1999.

Beef Steers (Prices)

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average price per kilo of beef steers sold in markets around Britain for each month from January 1995 to the present. [12771]

Mr. Baldry: The following table is based on weighted average weekly prices for steers sold per kilogramme liveweight, from selected auction markets in Great Britain.

January	121	117
February	121	120

Fisheries

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the benefits accruing to the United Kingdom arising from the allocation of United Kingdom funding to help the European Union secure fishing rights in waters off (a) Morocco, (b) Mauritania, (c) Guinea, (d) the Seychelles, (e) Angola and (f) Sao Tome. [12657]

Mr. Baldry: Some European Community fisheries agreements with third countries benefit mainly southern member states. Thus except for Mauritania, where one UK vessel fished in 1996, the UK does not benefit directly from the fisheries agreements between the EU and third countries listed. However, other fisheries agreements bring far greater benefits to the United Kingdom. The Government are concerned to achieve value for money from the agreements as a whole.

Beef Exports

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of beef exports from the United Kingdom during 1995–96 in cash terms derived from (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland. [12824]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is not available.

Avropacia

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from Roche Products Ltd. on Avropacia; and if he will make a statement. [12181]

Mrs. Browning: Officials of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate have had regular contact with Dr. A. J. Mudd, technical manager of Roche Products Ltd. and I have met Dr. Mudd twice.

Avoparcin has been used as a dietary enhancer in the European Community for over 20 years. It has been assessed on a number of occasions by the UK's independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee and by the EU Commission's Scientific Committee on Animal Nutrition. In 1995 Denmark and Germany introduced unilateral bans on its use in animal feed as a result of work by the Danish Veterinary Laboratory which purported to establish a link between the use of Avoparcin in animal feed and resistance to vancomycin in the treatment of humans. Danish and German data were examined by the SCAN, which agreed that the data identified the existence of what might, with the benefit of further studies, prove to be a hazard but concluded that the data failed to establish any risk associated with that potential hazard. The VPC agreed. The UK therefore opposed a ban on use but fully supported the EU Commission's proposal to set up a programme to examine the problem of the development of antibiotic resistance in humans and animals, which we take very seriously. The proposed ban was approved by qualified majority in standing committee in Brussels on 19 December with the UK voting against and, subject to formal adoption of the amending directive by the European Commission, the ban will enter into force on 1 April 1997.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12712]

Mr. Boswell: The Department issues a wide range of documents concerning departmental policies, which have varying environmental effects. However, we do not keep central records in the form requested and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Training

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many action for community employment workers are employed (a) by each district council and (b) in charity shops; how many action for community employment employers there are; and what was the average number of employees per scheme in 1995 and 1996; [11699]

(2) if he will list the (a) annual costs, (b) staff numbers and (c) trainee throughput of each training centre in Northern Ireland, indicating the overall cost per trainee for each centre. [11698]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 24 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your questions about the Agency's Training Centres and the Action for Community Employment (ACE) scheme.

Training Centres (11698)

You requested information on Training Centres and the most recent available is set out below.

Training Centre annual costs for 1995–96

Ballymena	1,763,966
Dundonald	1,322,484
Felden	1,393,863
Lisburn	1,086,375
Boucher Road	1,093,757
Newry	1,397,222
Craigavon	1,097,476
Omagh	1,091,301
Enniskillen	831,419
Springtown	1,233,025
Maydown	806,751

In line with the practice in all Training Organisations, the Training Centres' annual costs shown above do not include training allowances. In addition, the Agency has a provision for capital equipment which is administered centrally.

Training Centres normally provide 12 months in-Centre training followed by a period of monitored training and work experience with employers. For completeness therefore, the average numbers of trainees occupying training places are best presented as follows:

Training Centre	Average occupancy	In-Centre	In placements
Ballymena	464	219	245
Dundonald	392	154	238
Felden	481	210	271
Lisburn	384	126	258
Boucher Road	229	135	94
Newry	470	150	320
Craigavon	390	156	234
Omagh	348	126	222
Enniskillen	233	110	123
Springtown	300	170	130
Maydown	287	109	178

I should mention that Boucher Road Training Centre closed in September 1996.

The current numbers of staff at each Training Centre are:

Training Centre	Number of staff
Ballymena	40
Dundonald	40
Felden	41.5
Lisburn	42.5
Newry	46
Craigavon	27
Omagh	30
Enniskillen	22
Maydown	21

The average cost of each training place in 1995–96 was £5,237. The information you requested on trainee throughput is not held in a form which would allow for a full reply to your question. That information could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. Trainees are continually recruited to the Centres for varying lengths of time and of course there is therefore a continual outflow. On average, the Centres recruit approximately 2,000 trainees per annum and a similar number leave the system, either on completion of training or prematurely.

Nine of the District Councils employ the following numbers of ACE workers:

District Councils	Places filled at 17 December 1996
Antrim Borough Council	1
Armagh District	13
Banbridge District Council	1
Lisburn Borough Council	6
North Down Borough Council	12
Dungannon District Council	15
Limavady Borough Council	17
Omagh District Council	27
Strabane District Council	16

The current number of ACE employees in charity shops is 115.

The Agency generally holds information about ACE for financial years. At the end of December 1996, the 229 ACE providers' individual occupancy averaged 32, amounting to a total average occupancy in the current financial year to date of 7,294. In 1995/96 there were 237 ACE providers who maintained a total average occupancy of 7,757 employees, giving an average of 33 employees with each provider. In 1994/95, 248 ACE providers had a total average occupancy of 9,562, with an average of 39 employees each.

I hope you find this information useful.

Police Authority for Northern Ireland

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost to the Police Authority for Northern Ireland for each year since 1 January 1993, of (a) fair employment settlements, (b) tribunal costs, (c) legal fees and (d) police officers' time on (a) to (c). [11697]

Sir John Wheeler: The costs associated with fair employment cases arising from actions taken by civilian employees against the Police Authority for Northern Ireland, which have been settled or heard during the period 1 January 1993 to date, are set out in the table.

	Settlement £	Legal costs £
1993	3,000	1,880
1994	—	—
1995	19,000	3,642
1996	22,639	[1]—

[1] Not yet quantified.

No costs in respect of tribunals or police officers' time were incurred.

Information in respect of actions taken by police officers against the Chief Constable is held in such a way that it has not been possible to disaggregate the fair employment cases from other cases. To do so accurately would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

Police Complaints

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints of discriminatory conduct towards police officers were made in 1996 against RUC personnel of assistant chief constable rank and above; and what was the outcome of the complaints. [11696]

Sir John Wheeler: I understand that, in 1996, the Police Authority appointed a senior officer from another police force to investigate three complaints which had been made against two senior RUC officers by a serving police officer.

The investigation substantiated two of the three complaints, but the authority found there were no grounds for recommending formal discipline against any senior officer. A number of recommendations were made to the RUC to put right certain shortcomings identified by the investigating officer.

Public Entertainments Licences (Drug Misuse) Bill

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to extend the provisions of the Public Entertainments Licences (Drug Misuse) Bill to Northern Ireland. [12865]

Mr. Moss: The Department is keeping abreast of legislative developments in this area in Great Britain and will take these into account during the current review of entertainments licences conditions.

Magheramorne Landfill Project

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the potential for conflict of interest arising from the appointment on short-term contract to the Department of the Environment, Northern Ireland, of the representative of the applicant at the public inquiry into the Magheramorne landfill project. [12953]

Mr. Moss: The person concerned was appointed by the Environment and Heritage Service through the Government Purchasing Agency to prepare the specification for a waste strategy for Northern Ireland and was deemed to be the best person for the job. However, because the Department recognised a potential conflict of interest, steps have been taken to ensure that the consultant will not be involved in any way with the Department's consideration of the report of the planning appeals commission into the Magheramorne landfill project, nor will he have access to any papers relating to the project.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the officer on short-term contract to the Department of the Environment, Northern Ireland, will provide advice through permanent officials to the Environment Minister when he considers the outcome of the public inquiry into the Magheramorne landfill project. [12955]

Mr. Moss: The consultant will not be providing advice through permanent officials to the Environment Minister when he considers the outcome of the public inquiry into the Magheramorne landfill project. He has not and will not be involved in any aspect of the Magheramorne landfill project while contracted with Environment and Heritage Service.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the role within the Department of the Environment, Northern Ireland, waste management and contaminated land section and the water quality unit, Northern Ireland, of the officer on short-term contract since August 1996 who acted on behalf of the applicant during the public inquiry in respect of the Magheramorne landfill project. [12952]

Mr. Moss: The consultant has been engaged on a short-term contract by the Environment and Heritage Service to advise the service's waste management and contaminated land unit. He is engaged on work involved in the preparation of a Northern Ireland waste strategy and the auditing of operational landfill sites in consultation with the district councils, and has no involvement with the service's water quality unit.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what access the officer appointed on short-term contract to the Department of the Environment, Northern Ireland, has to information related to consent to discharge from the Magheramorne landfill project. [12954]

Mr. Moss: The officer engaged by the Environment and Heritage Service is not involved in water quality issues and has had no involvement with the Water Act consent consideration.

TRANSPORT

Parking Penalties

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations and operational guidelines govern the issuing of penalties in respect of (a) private car parks and (b) wheel clamping. [12559]

Mr. Watts: The charges levied and the terms and conditions of use that apply in private car parks are a contractual matter between owner and user.

Wheel clamping on the public highway by the police is authorised under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984. The charges for release are stipulated in the Vehicles (Charges for Release from Immobilisation Devices) Regulations 1992. Wheel clamping of vehicles in on-street parking places by local authority parking attendants is authorised under the Road Traffic Act 1991. Operational guidelines are contained in local authority circular 5/92 in respect of London and local authority circular 1/95 in respect of authorities elsewhere.

Wheel clamping on private land is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary. No regulations exist, but case law has helped to establish what might be regarded as reasonable practice.

Roads Programme

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the study undertaken by his Department into the total cumulative environmental impact of the national roads programme. [12456]

Mr. Watts: The Department of Transport commissioned the Transport Research Laboratory to produce a study on the assessment of the total and cumulative environmental effects of the trunk road programme. TRL has completed its study and it is now finalising its report for publication in due course.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the (a) first year and (b) full-year costs of reducing vehicle excise duty to £10 per annum for vehicles of engine size of 1500 cc and below. [12750]

Mr. Bowis: The most recent data for 1995, from vehicle licensing statistics, show around 9.29 million vehicles with an engine size of 1500 cc or below in the private and light goods vehicle tax class. Reducing the vehicle excise duty for these vehicles from £145 to £10 implies a revenue loss of around £1.25 billion. The losses in future years would depend upon the growth in the vehicle stock and the behavioural response to the change in the structure of vehicle excise duty. There would also be significant administrative and enforcement costs associated with implementing such a change in the tax system.

A74

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer from the Minister of State, Scottish Office, of 22 January, Official Report, column 608, what assessment he has made of the merits of including the construction of the A74 from the Scottish border to junction 44 on the M6 in the M6—design, build, finance and operate—contract; and when he expects construction to begin. [13002]

Mr. Watts: The bid from the private sector for constructing the improvements to the A74 between Carlisle and Guardsmill as part of the M6 DBFO is being assessed for value for money and affordability.

Local Roads and Transport (Capital Allocation)

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 13 December 1996, Official Report, column 365, if he will list for each eligible local authority in England (a) the spending approvals and (b) the transport supplementary grant awards made for local transport capital expenditure for 1997–98 for (i) major highway schemes, eligible for TSG, (ii) major highway schemes, not TSG eligible, (iii) structural maintenance on carriageways, (iv) structural maintenance on bridges, (v) major public transport projects, (vi) minor works: packages, (vii) minor works: non-packages and (viii) minor works: local safety schemes and for each authority the total amounts. [12487]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 24 January 1997]: Department of Transport support for local authority capital expenditure on transport infrastructure is mainly given as transport supplementary grant, grant under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968, or credit approvals—annual capital guideline and supplementary credit approval.

TSG is given for major highway schemes on roads of more than local importance, structural maintenance on the carriageways of principal roads, and assessment, strengthening, and structure maintenance of bridges and highway structures. It is payable at a rate of 50 per cent. of accepted expenditure. Credit approvals are given to fund the other 50 per cent. Credit approvals are also allocated in association with section 56 grant. Additionally, they may be applied to schemes and programmes where grant is not suitable.

Allocations for minor works in 1997–98 are restricted to transport packages, and local safety schemes.

Relevant details are set out in the table:

GP Fundholders

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been paid in information technology allowances to general practitioner fundholders in each of the last five years. [12044]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: All GPs are reimbursed a proportion of the costs incurred through purchase, lease, upgrading and maintenance of computer systems. Information relating to the reimbursement of GP fundholders specifically is not separately identified centrally.

Powered Wheelchairs

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many indoor or outdoor powered wheelchairs have been provided by the NHS in Scotland; and how many wheelchairs have been provided in each health board area, in each financial year since 1992–93 and for the 1996–97 financial year so far. [11922]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is not possible to provide the information in the form requested but the table sets out the total number of powered indoor-outdoor wheelchairs issued by each providing centre in each financial year since 1992–93.

[1] For nine months from April to end December 1996.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much funding the Scottish Office has made available in each financial year since 1993 to provide indoor or outdoor powered wheelchairs. [11923]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In February 1992 special funding was made available from the Scottish Office for the provision of powered indoor-outdoor wheelchairs. The information is as follows:

1995–96: £956,000

The scheme remains in place but since April 1996 funding is included within the general allocations to health boards for the provision of artificial limb and appliance centre services. The detailed information is no longer available centrally.

Acute Beds

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many acute beds there were in each health board area in Scotland in each year since 1989–90. [12047]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is in the table.

Overseas Travel (Diseases)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many laboratory-confirmed cases of disease acquired in tropical countries there were in Scotland in each year from 1991 to 1995; and when he expects the comparable figures for 1996 to be available. [12138]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is in tables. The first table gives the total figures for Scotland 1991 to 1996. The second table gives the information by health board for 1996.

[1] From Scottish centre for infection and environmental health. Figures relate to the health board to which notification was made, which may differ from the patient's health board of residence.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1996, Official Report, column 285, what factors underlay the rate of confirmed diseases acquired from tropical countries relative to population in the Grampian health board area; and what studies have been undertaken to explain this situation. [12137]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The figures given in the answer to the hon. Member's previous question reflect the numbers of patients treated in each health board area. Some of these patients may be resident in other health board areas or may be resident abroad. It may not therefore be valid to make comparisons of incidence between health board areas on the basis of the boards' resident populations. We are not aware of any studies carried out on the number of cases notified to Grampian health board, but the Scottish centre for infection and environmental health continues to monitor the position across Scotland.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1996, Official Report, column 285, concerning tropical diseases, what diseases are covered by the figures given in his answer. [12139]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Included in the figures given in my answer to the hon. Member's previous question were all diseases which are exclusively tropical—ascaris, ancylostoma, shistosoma, strongyloides and trichuris among the worm infections, and plasmodium (malaria) in the protozal infections. Also included were other organisms which were known to have been acquired abroad, but which may also be acquired within the United Kingdom, namely, blastocystis, cyclospora, endolimax, entamoeba among the protozoa, and taenia in the worm category, and also salmonella typhi and salmonella paratyphi, which cause typhoid and paratyphoid respectively.

Self-governing Schools

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 154, if he will make a further statement on the tendering exercise resulting in the appointment of Ian Dutton as a consultant on self-governing matters; in what manner tenders were invited for this work; how many and which companies applied for the work; what is the (a) value of and (b) duration of the contract under which Mr. Dutton is employed; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which his Department's tendering guidelines were complied with. [12140]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: In June 1996 Thomson Partners, a recruitment agency engaged by the Scottish Office, submitted a list of nine possible candidates for this consultancy. Departmental officials interviewed six of those candidates, including Mr. Dutton in August 1996. Four candidates were subsequently invited by officials to tender in writing, on the basis of a one-year contract, renewable by mutual agreement, on a part-time equivalent to a maximum of three days per week. Each was invited to identify a fee as a daily rate, and to submit a plan for the work involved and proposed working methods and priorities.

Mr. Dutton was subsequently appointed on 7 October 1996 on a one-year contract, extendable subject to ministerial approval. Standard Scottish Office terms and conditions for consultancy services apply, together with Scottish Office subsistence rates.

Specialist staff were involved at all stages of this process, and I am satisfied that in all respects the Scottish Office followed the appropriate procedures in this appointment.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate for each health board area in Scotland in 1996 (a) the number of cases of food poisoning and (b) the population resident in the health board areas. [12142]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is in the tables. The first table indicates notifications of cases of food poisoning to the Common Services Agency for the Scottish health service.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 6 December 1996, Official Report, column 798, if he will indicate for each health board area in Scotland for each year from 1986 to 1996 the incidence of food poisoning relative to population. [12143]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information in the table shows the rate of food poisoning notifications per 100,000 population by health board over the period. Notifications reflect the health board area of treatment rather than of residence.

Road Building

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 2 December 1996, Official Report, column 551, on the Scottish Office's roads programme, when he expects to be able to announce the programme; and if he will include in his announcement a list of the parliamentary constituencies in which the proposed works lie. [12130]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office roads programme, in terms of new starts of schemes costing above £3 million, for 1996–97 and 1997 to 2000 is in the table. The table includes details of the parliamentary constituencies within which the projects lie.

Year	Scheme	Parliamentary constituencies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 2 December 1996, Official Report, column 551, if he will list the parliamentary constituencies within which the roads projects undertaken by his Department over the past five years lie. [12131]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The motorways and trunk roads projects which were completed by the Scottish Office national roads directorate between 1991–92 and 1995–96, including the name of the parliamentary constituency in which each project, or the greater part of its length, lies, are in the table:

Motorways and trunk roads completed 1991–92 to 1995–96.

Fishing

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the proportion of the Scottish catch of spring fish taken by rod; and what proposals he has to limit the rod catch to conserve stocks. [12168]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: As netting catches of salmon and netting effort have declined over the years the proportion taken by anglers has increased and now represents about 80 per cent. of the overall catch of spring salmon. Any recommendations on the exploitation of spring fish contained in Lord Nickson's task force report, which is due shortly, will be considered fully.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the amount of grant-aided expenditure to each local authority for 1996–97 to support the provision of valuation for non-domestic rating. [11310]

Mr. Kynoch: The lands valuation grant-aided expenditure assessment is distributed in proportion to the number of non-domestic rateable subjects. The relevant GAE figures for each local authority for 1996–97 are shown in the table.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the amount of grant-aided expenditure to each local authority for 1997–98 to support the provision of valuation for non-domestic rating, valuation for council tax and electoral registration services. [11311]

Mr. Kynoch: The valuation for council tax and electoral registration grant aided expenditure assessments are each distributed in proportion to the number of dwellings valued for council tax. The lands valuation GAE is distributed in proportion to the number of non-domestic rateable subjects. The relevant GAE figures for each local authority for 1997–98 are shown in the table.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made for his consideration of the Lockerbie case of the acquittal of Juval Avir; and what notification he has received from the US authorities in respect of Juval Avir's previous employment by international intelligence services. [11309]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Juval Aviv was acquitted after trial in the United States of defrauding the General Electric Capital Corporation in 1991. The jury's verdict in that matter has no bearing on the validity of the case against the two Libyan accused in respect of the Lockerbie bombing. It is our understanding that in 1990 the adviser for countering terrorism to the Prime Minister of Israel stated in response to an inquiry from the United States President commission on aviation security and terrorism that

"Juval Aviv does not work and has never worked for the Intelligence Community of the State of Israel. Furthermore, he has never been attached or connected to it."

BSE

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate for the number of selective cull subjects which may already have been slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme; and if he will make a statement. [12462]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 2 December 1996, Official Report, column 568, to his earlier question on this subject. The position remains the same.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he intends to put forward to the European Commission on the staged removal of the export ban to ensure that (a) Scottish beef herds and (b) Northern Irish beef herds are included in the first wave of exemptions; and if he will make a statement. [12577]

Mr. Robertson: Proposals for a UK certified herds scheme will be presented to the European Commission shortly. The proposals are intended to facilitate exports of beef and beef products from animals in the UK whose movements are fully documented and which could be certified as having no association with BSE.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the results of his Department's study of maternal transmission of BSE will be published; and if he will make a statement. [12578]

Mr. Robertson: Interim findings of the long-running study on maternal transmission were released in August last year. These are now being given further consideration in view of subsequent evidence and it is expected that the final results will be made available soon.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if (a) hill livestock compensatory allowances, (b) beef and (c) suckler cow premium payments will be paid to those producers who will no longer be able to meet the animal retention conditions of those schemes due to the requirements of the over-30-months scheme or the selective cull; and if he will make a statement. [12644]

Mr. Robertson: We are consulting with the European Commission on the position of animals slaughtered under the selective cull while in a retention period for the schemes listed. The normal retention period rules apply to animals entering the over-30-months scheme.

Land Court

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce amendments to crofting law to require applications to the land court for the resumption of tenanted land to receive the same publicity as applications to the Crofters Commission to decroft vacant or untenanted croft land; and if he will make a statement. [13028]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Before approving an application for the resumption of tenanted land from crofting tenure, the Scottish land court must be satisfied that the land is required for a "reasonable purpose" as defined by the Crofters (Scotland) Act 1993. The land court may make such inquiries as it considers necessary before coming to a decision on any application.

Although the procedures differ somewhat from those specified for the consideration of decrofting applications by the Crofters Commission, they do, nevertheless, provide protection against land being unnecessarily removed from crofting tenure. My right hon. Friend has no plans to amend the Crofters (Scotland) Act 1993.

Public Bodies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what European legislation non-departmental public bodies have to abide by in awarding contracts; and what redress is available when these guidelines have not been met in the award of a contract. [12156]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 January 1997]: In circumstances where non-departmental public bodies are contracting authorities, they are, when awarding contracts, subject to the general provisions in the treaty of Rome—for instance, non-discrimination—and the EC procurement directives covering supplies, services, works and the associated remedies. These directives have been converted into the following UK regulations—the Public Supply Contracts Regulations 1995, the Public Services Contracts Regulations 1993 and the Public Works Contracts Regulations 1991.

The remedies directive, EC/89/665, requires that member states provide for national means of redress. In the UK this has been achieved through provisions in the UK regulations referred to above, which give aggrieved providers the right to bring an action in the High Court, or Court of Session in Scotland.

The European Commission also has powers under the treaty of Rome and EC/89/665 to challenge a contracting authority's actions in respect of the award of a contract in the event of a provider raising a complaint with it. The treaty of Rome also allows the Commission various other legal means by which an award procedure may be challenged.

District Councils (Rent Arrears)

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each district council area, up to 31 March 1996 (a) the number of council tenants, (b) the number of tenants in arrears, (c) the percentage of tenants in arrears, (d) the total amount of arrears and (e) the total amount of arrears as a percentage of (i) net and (ii) gross rental income. [12742]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 24 January 1997]: The available information, which is given in the following table, is derived from the returns submitted by local authorities to the Scottish Office.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Assisted Places Scheme

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children (a) are currently assisted under the assistance places scheme and (b) have been assisted under the scheme since it began; and what assessment she has made of the educational attainment of children assisted to date. [12610]

Mrs. Gillan: The number of children holding assisted places in England in the current academic year 1996–97 is estimated to be some 34,000. Over 80,000 children have been helped since the scheme's inception in 1981.

The Department's annual surveys point to outstanding achievements by assisted pupils in GCSE and A-level examinations. Last year, assisted pupils recorded pass rates of nearly 97 per cent. at GCSE grades A* to C and over 95 per cent. at A-level; some pupils achieved 100 per cent. pass rates. Over 92 per cent. of assisted pupils went on to university and other institutions of further and higher education. In addition, recent independent research has shown that assisted pupils do better than those of similar ability in maintained schools. They take more A and AS levels and get better grades per subject.

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average parental income of children currently assisted under the assisted places scheme. [12609]

Mrs. Gillan: The average family income under the scheme is England in academic year 1995–96, the latest for which information is complete, was £10,820.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her estimate of the Government's planned expenditure on the assisted places scheme for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02. [12743]

Mrs. Gillan: Planned expenditure on the scheme in England in 1997–98 is £140.5 million. Figures for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 will be published in the education and employment departmental report in March. Expenditure plans for 2000–01 and later years have not yet been made. Questions on the assisted places scheme in Scotland and Wales are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to alter the deadline for teachers seeking premature retirement before the implementation of proposed changes to the teachers' superannuation scheme; and if she will make a statement. [12660]

Mrs. Gillan: Under the Government's proposals, all teachers actually retiring prematurely before 1 April would fall under the current regulations. The Government do not impose a deadline by which teachers must seek premature retirement.

Teachers (Northamptonshire)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many full-time equivalent teachers were employed in Northamptonshire in (a) local education authority schools, (b) grant-maintained schools and (c) city technology colleges in the (i) nursery, (ii) primary and (iii) secondary sectors in (1) January 1996 and (2) January 1997. [12629]

Mr. Forth: The available information is in the following table.

Number of teachers in LEA maintained and grant-maintained schools[1] and city technology colleges[2] in Northamptonshire local education authority area

Position as at January 1996

	Number
LEA maintained
Nursery	18.8
Primary	2,087.5
Secondary	2,076.2
Grant maintained
Primary	151.8
Secondary	617.2
City Technology Colleges	68.0

[1] Full-time equivalent number of qualified teachers.
[2] Includes all teaching staff.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list in respect of her initiative for education paid for by vouchers for children under the normal school starting age (a) the additional extra resources to be made available as announced at the introduction of the scheme, (b) subsequent variations and (c) the approximate breakdown into amounts spent so far. [12411]

Mr. Robin Square: The estimated budget for the first year of full implementation of the nursery education voucher scheme was £750 million. It illustrated the order of magnitude of the sums involved. The budget has been revised using more up-to-date data on the number of four-year-olds in school.

The following table shows the estimated budget and the actual budget for 1997–98:

£ million

	Estimated	Actual
SSA deduction	565	529
Additional voucher money	165	125
Inspection and administration	20	20

As of mid-November, around £7.7 million had been paid in respect of vouchers redeemed in phase 1. The voucher scheme begins nationwide in April this year.

GCSE Grades

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) by local education authority in England and (b) in total, the number and percentage of 16-year-olds who left school with fewer than five GCSEs at grades A to C broken down by gender in the last five years for which figures are available. [12187]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is not available for 16-year-olds who left school. However, the following table shows the number and percentage of all 15-year-olds—at start of the year—in maintained schools in England who achieved fewer than five GCSEs at grades A* to C, whether they left school or not.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) the total expenditure so far incurred in publicity and information relating to the voucher scheme for educating the under fives and (b) the amount spent in respect of each principal objective of such expenditure, indicating the body which has spent the money. [12413]

Mr. Robin Squire: The total expenditure to date for publicity and information relating to the voucher scheme within the present financial year in both phase 1 and phase 2 is £1.8 million. This contrasts with a budgeted figure of £674 million in respect of nursery education in the first year of the scheme. All expenditure has been by the Department. There is only one principal objective for the total expenditure—to inform parents and providers about the scheme.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will undertake an appraisal of the principal aspects of the scheme of vouchers for payment for pre-school education that she has introduced in London and Norfolk. [12412]

Mr. Squire: The Department published a report on operation of phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme in November 1996. Copies of the report, and of a follow-up memorandum on voucher issue and redemption in the autumn terms 1996, have been placed in the Library. Chapter 11 of the report outlines our plans for assessment of the scheme over the longer term.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list, for each local education authority in England and in total, the adjusted education standard spending assessments for 1996–97 and the provisional standard spending assessment levels for 1997–98. [12188]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table sets out the information requested. Adjustments for the 1996–97 standard spending assessments take account of the introduction of nursery vouchers across the country from 1 April 1997.

Pupil Qualifications

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) by local education authority in England and (b) in total, the number and percentage of 16-year-olds who left school with no formal qualifications, broken down by gender, for the past five years, including 1996. [12192]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is not available for 16-year-olds who left school. However, the following table shows the number and percentage of all 15-year-olds—at start of the year—in maintained schools in England who failed to achieve a pass at GCSE, although some of them might have achieved a vocational qualification, for each year since 1992. The information is not yet available for 1996.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the cost (a) nationally and (b) to each local education authority in England of the teachers' pay award in 1996–97; and what is the projected cost in 1997–98 of the overhang arising from the 1996–97 award. [12190]

Mrs. Gillan: The total estimated cost in England of the staged teachers' pay increase in 1996–97 is about £320 million in-year; in a full year the cost is about £395 million. The following table illustrates the cost of the award by updating the 1994–95 expenditure recorded by local education authorities in England for teaching staff salaries in nursery, primary, secondary and special schools by the teachers' pay awards of 2.7 per cent. in 1995–96 and the staged pay award of 3.75 per cent. in 1996–97.

The 1994–95 expenditure figures are the latest available for local education authority schools in England. The figures in the table take no account of changes in teacher numbers or other factors that affect the teachers' pay bill.

School Leavers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many 16-year-olds left school before the end of the academic school year in 1996. [12061]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested was not collected centrally.

Liskeard School and Community College

Sir Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many representations her Department has received in support of the Cornwall local education authority's bid for funding for capital work at Liskeard school and community college under the school's renewal challenge fund; and if she will make a statement. [12407]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department has received five letters from the hon. Member in support of Cornwall LEA's schools renewal challenge fund bid for capital work at Liskeard school and community college; the Department has received two representations from Mr. Warwick Lightfoot in support of Cornwall LEA's bid and numerous correspondence from the local community. The decisions on the SRCF bids will be announced shortly.

School Inspections

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the number of (a) reporting inspections and (b) inspection visits, on independent schools that have been undertaken by the Office for Standards in Education or Her Majesty's inspectorate for each year since 1990. [12499]

Mrs. Gillan: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which her Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which her Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12708]

Mr. Robin Squire: This Department issued one booklet in 1996 which could give rise to significant environmental effects. This was entitled "Building Bulletin No. 83—School Environment Assessment Method". This was intended for local authorities and gave advice on how to carry out an audit to test the environmental friendliness of existing school buildings and recommended which materials to specify when commissioning new ones.

Care Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of care leavers (i) undertook and (ii) completed (1) GCSEs, (2) A-levels, (3) an undergraduate degree or equivalent and (4) postgraduate study in the last five years for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [12812]

Mrs. Gillan: This information is not collected centrally.

Income Support

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her estimate of the annual cost of restoring entitlement to income support to unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds; and what is her estimate of the present numbers of 16 and 17-year-olds who are not in education, training or employment. [12800]

Mr. Forth: The jobseeker's allowance has now replaced income support for unemployed men and women. Information is not available to calculate the cost of reintroducing JSA for unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds within normal estimating margins, due to behavioural factors. Illustrative costs, based on a range of assumptions are used instead.

Cost of introducing general entitlement to Jobseeker's Allowance to 16 and 17-year-olds

Assumptions	Benefit costs 1997–98 £ million
10 per cent. move from education to JSA	450
20 per cent. move from education to JSA	700
40 per cent. move from education to JSA	1,300

[1] Costs are derived from the movement of young people from education to JSA, plus the costs of those who are defined as unemployed (but not on benefits) under the International Labour Organisation definition.

[2] In addition to assumptions regarding the movement from education to JSA, it is assumed that (a) all 16 and 17-year-olds move into JSA from day one of the policy change; (b) 15 per cent. of the families of 16 and 17 year olds in education are on JSA (this assumption is the basis for an estimate of reduction in cost as a result of families losing entitlement to dependency and other family benefits); (c) half of the 16 and 17-year-olds who claim JSA move away from home and live independently and so receive Housing Benefit; (d) half of the 16-year- olds are the only children in their families.

[3] To ensure consistency, the number of 16 and 17-year-olds in education and other groups affected by this policy are all based on the Spring 1996 Labour Force Survey. Estimates of costs are rounded to the nearest £50 million.

Of the 1,401,000 16 and 17-year-olds in Great Britain in autumn 1996, 172,000—12 per cent.—were not in full-time education, training or employment. Ninety-one thousand of those were unemployed, and 81,000 were either unavailable for, or not seeking, work.

Labour Force Survey autumn 1996 "Rapid Release".

Notes:

1. The figure given in the answer is the number of 16 and 17 year olds who are not in full-time education, not in employment (full-time or part-time) and not on a government employment or training programme i.e. those who are not in full-time education and are either ILO unemployed or economically inactive. It includes a small number in part-time education as well as those who are sick, disabled or looking after the home/family. A fuller breakdown of young people's activities is in the table.

2. The figures are taken from the autumn 1996 Labour Force Survey (LFS) and were published by the Office for National Statistics in the LFS Rapid Release on 15 January.

3. All figures relate to young people who were 16 and 17 at the time of the survey.

4. The Labour Force Survey (LFS) is a sample survey of about 60,000 households in Great Britain conducted every quarter since spring 1992 and annually in the spring of each year between 1984 and 1991. As is the case with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to sampling variability.

Surplus Places

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the numbers and percentages of surplus places in each local education authority in England. [13261]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following tables set out the numbers of surplus places, by local authority area, and the proportion that these represent of total capacity, as at January 1996. The data are drawn from the returns made during 1996 by local education authorities in respect of their schools and by the Funding Agency for Schools in respect of grant-maintained schools in stage 2 and 3 authority areas: data on surplus places in the 359 grant-maintained schools in stage 1 authorities are not available.

These returns indicate that there were just over 815,000 surplus school places in January 1996, representing 11 per cent. of the total capacity of 7.6 million places. This represents a reduction overall of just under 68,000 places between 1995 and 1996—some 1 per cent. of total capacity.

This is encouraging. But the tables illustrate considerable variation in numerical and proportionate levels of surplus across the country. In some cases, combinations of pupil population growth and rationalisation are expected to reduce high levels of surplus to more acceptable levels.

Where there is no indication of significant reduction in high levels of surplus the Department will consult the authorities concerned about the extent to which any of that surplus is in practice removable. In the light of is consultation my right hon. Friend will decide whether surplus place removal targets should be set for any of those authorities.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud Hotline

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls have been received by the benefit fraud hotline and how many (a) investigations and (b) convictions these calls have stimulated; and if he will make a statement. [9835]

Mr. Heald: The national benefit fraud hotline has received in excess of 125,000 calls up to 12 December 1996.

Preliminary results are only now emerging and show that cases referred for fraud investigation from these calls have so far resulted in 11,180 completed investigations for fraud, and 14,762 investigations in progress up to 30 November. Fraud investigations take some time to follow through, depending on the complexity of the investigation. Therefore in time the volume and rate of investigations completed will increase until a steady state is achieved.

Whilst a number of cases are being prepared for prosecution, as yet none has reached the stage of a court hearing.

Contributions Agency

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what factors underlay the decision of the Contributions Agency to set up a separate national inquiry centre to handle customer inquiries; [11901]

(2) if he will make a statement on the decision of the Contributions Agency to set up a separate national inquiry centre; [11902]

(3) what assessment he has made of the private finance initiative's ability to fund the buildings and equipment needed by the Contributions Agency's new national inquiry centre; [11903]

(4) if the work of the new national inquiry centre being set up by the Contributions Agency will be conducted by civil servants; [11904]

(5) what is the estimated public cost to the Contributions Agency for setting up the national inquiry centre to handle complaints. [11905]

Mr. Heald: The Contributions Agency is currently undertaking a study examining the feasibility of a national enquiry centre. This study is looking at a number of options.

As yet no decision has been made.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Contributions Agency management board has put to him to privatise the network of field officers and inspectors. [11906]

Mr. Heald: As part of the competition strategy within the departmental change programme, the Contributions Agency is seeking to establish the most efficient and cost effective means of delivering its business. Work continues within the agency to identify which parts of the agency's work undertaken by its field operations should be submitted to competition. No decisions have been taken by the Contributions Agency management board in respect of field operations.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what targets the Contributions Agency has been set for each of the next three years for revenue collection; and how these differ from previous targets. [13033]

Mr. Heald: The Secretary of State's targets are agreed annually. Targets for 1997–98, including the Contributions Agency's revenue collection target, are currently being negotiated. The Contributions Agency will publish targets in its business plan in March, a copy of which will be available in the Library.

Social Fund

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the planned expenditure on the social fund for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [12753]

Mr. Roger Evans: Planned expenditure on the social fund will be made available in the social security departmental report, which will be published in March 1997.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the savings resulting from application of the shared residence requirement for housing benefit for those people aged under 25 years in the last year for which figures are available. [12805]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information on the actual savings resulting from the changes is not available. Estimated savings for the financial years 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 are £13 million, £57 million and £62 million respectively.

An exercise is currently under way to monitor the effect of and collect statistical data related to the changes to housing benefit for single childless claimants aged under 25, introduced in October 1996.

National Insurance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the additional revenue which would be raised by extending employers' national insurance contributions to all taxable benefits in kind if this includes provision for the avoidance of national insurance contributions on certain forms of bonus payments made by businesses; and if he will make a statement. [12799]

Mr. Heald: An estimated £250 million would be raised by extending employer national insurance contributions to all taxable benefits in kind. This figure is based on the estimated total of taxable benefits in kind reported to the Inland Revenue and is therefore inclusive of NICs on any bonuses paid in kind with the intention of avoiding NICs. Employers are not required to identify bonus payments separately from other payments.

Income Support

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the annual cost of restoring the full rate of income support to all persons in the 18 to 24-year-old age group. [12801]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated annual cost in 1996–97 of raising the income support rate for 18 to 24-year-olds to that payable for people aged 25 and above is £305 million.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based upon the 1995 "Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry" and the 1994–95 "Family Resources Survey" uprated to 1996–97 levels.

2. The estimated figure assumes jobseeker's allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit levels are similarly increased.

3. Expenditure is rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12705]

Mr. Roger Evans: The impact on the environment of our core business has always been considered to be less than significant. This opinion has been supported by Department of the Environment consultants in phase 1 of its on-going review of the policy appraisal and environment initiative which has ranked the Department of Social Security in the low-impact category. Accordingly any White, Green or consultation papers, draft regulations and circulars issued by this Department in 1996 are not considered to have an impact, either directly or indirectly, on the environment to any material degree.

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the savings resulting from the habitual residence test in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [12804]

Mr. Roger Evans: The habitual residence test is expected to save £15 million across the income-related benefits in both 1997–98 and 1998–99.

Revenue Support Grant

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what basis the figures for income support claimants and dependants were compiled which were used by the Department of the Environment for calculating revenue support grant; and what method was used to determine the local government area to which these were allocated. [12575]

Mr. Roger Evans: The figures were based on a 100 per cent. count of all income support claims registered on the income support computer system on a single day in August 1995. The local government area was determined mainly with reference to the postcode of each claimant according to the Office for National Statistics central postcode directory.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the annual savings accruing from the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [12802]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

We estimate that jobseeker's allowance will save £60 million in 1996–97 and £240 million in a full year of operation.

These figures are being adjusted in line with the latest economic assumptions which my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, set out in the Budget. I will write to the hon. Member with the adjusted figures in due course.

Benefits Agency (Computers)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice he has received on the capability of the Benefits Agency computer system to achieve the data matching requirements of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Bill. [13025]

Mr. Heald: The technical solution for the generalised matching service enables data that have been extracted from any computer system to be loaded on to the database for matching purposes. In addition to existing resources, extra funding will be made available to the GMS to enable it to carry out the additional data-matching exercises envisaged under the provisions of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Bill.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the difficulties experienced by caring parents refused application for family credit in consequence of a child maintenance assessment having been determined against the absent parent but never collected by the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [13027]

Mr. Roger Evans: Applications for family credit are not refused under these circumstances.

Prime Project

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what savings are projected from the Prime project in the Yorkshire area in the first two years of operation. [13030]

Mr. Roger Evans: It is not possible at this stage to reveal the detail of any potential savings in view of the commercial sensitivity of this information. The contract will not be awarded unless value for money has been demonstrated.

Prime Programme

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultation process is planned to take place on the implementation of the Prime programme. [13034]

Mr. Evans: The Prime—private sector resource initiative for management of the estate—project is undertaking the procurement of a private sector provider of serviced accommodation to the Department of Social Security. The departmental trade union side was consulted on the decision to implement the project and on progress of the project since that date. Tender bids are due on 31 January, followed by a detailed evaluation and further negotiations. Contract awards will be subject to value for money being demonstrated. Consultation following the selection of a preferred supplier will be in line with agreed departmental procedures, as will any subsequent implementation.

Social Security Administration (Fraud) Bill

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received in respect of the consistency of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Bill with United Kingdom obligations under the European convention on human rights; and if he will make a statement. [11192]

Mr. Heald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received no such representations. However, departmental officials met Liberty on 4 December when these issues were discussed. I am satisfied that the proposals in the Bill comply with European convention on human rights requirements.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 11 November, Official Report, column 88, what was the outcome of his discussions with the NHS executive concerning the fees for access to medical records which may be charged to contractors who will be running the Benefits Agency medical services. [10972]

Mr. Burt: Discussion between departmental officials and the NHS executive have concluded that access to hospital records will continue to be provided free of charge to the successful contractor or contractors.

All Work Test

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) medical members of disability appeal tribunals and (b) doctors appointed to sit as medical assessors in appeals involving the all work test are employed by the Benefits Agency; and in what capacity. [11086]

Mr. Burt: No doctor who is currently employed by Benefits Agency medical services, in a full-time or part-time capacity, may be appointed as a medical member of a disability appeal tribunal or as a medical assessor.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from the Data Protection Registrar concerning the protection for individuals in the provisions of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Bill; and if he will make a statement. [11347]

Mr. Heald: Department officials met the Data Protection Registrar during the development of the disclosure provisions in the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Bill. The registrar wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 10 January about the scope of the disclosure of information powers contained in the Bill, advocating the introduction of a statutory code of practice for DSS data-matching activities. A reply will be sent shortly.

HEALTH

Mental Illness

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients with (a) mental illness admitted before 1 June 1971 and (b) learning difficulties admitted before January 1970, were still receiving care in (i) hospital-based accommodation and (ii) community-based accommodation on 1 April 1996 broken down by region. [10734]

Mr. Burns: The number of patients with mental illness admitted before 1 January 1971 and patients with learning difficulties admitted before 1 January 1970, who were still receiving care in hospital or community-based accommodation on 1 April 1996, as reported by health authorities, is shown in the table.

Cannabis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the legalisation of cannabis and its derivatives for medical use when prescribed by a qualified medical practitioner. [12415]

Mr. Malone: We have received a number of representations on this issue from Members of Parliament, the public and the medical profession.

E. Coli

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the incidence of verocytotoxin-producing escherichia coli in each of the last five years by region. [12038]

Mr. Horam: The information for England and Wales is provided in the following table:

Royal Free NHS Trust

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the provision of additional in-patient facilities at the Royal Free NHS trust. [12313]

Mr. Malone: In order for the Royal Free Hampstead national health service trust to respond to planned service changes, additional facilities are being put in place including 65 in-patient beds, a five-bedded high-dependency unit and an operating theatre.

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the provision of high-dependency beds (a) at the Royal Free NHS trust and (b) in London. [12311]

Mr. Malone: To meet the additional demands arising from planned service changes, the Royal Free Hampstead national health service trust has built a new surgical high-dependency unit. Two of the new beds have opened, and the remaining three beds are expected to be available from April. In 1996–97 additional funding of £0.65 million has been made available in London to fund an increase in the provision of intensive care and high-dependency facilities.

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many in-patients were treated by the Royal Free NHS trust in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1990–91. [12310]

Mr. Malone: The Royal Free Hampstead national health service trust was established on 1 April 1991. The number of in-patient treatments provided by the trust rose from 34,378 in 1991–92 to 36,894 in 1995–96.

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about changes in the accident and emergency facilities at the Royal Free NHS trust. [12312]

Mr. Malone: Over the past three years the Royal Free Hampstead national health service trust has been undertaking a phased programme of works to upgrade its accident and emergency department and to enable it to respond to planned service changes. Clinical areas for adults have recently been completed, and paediatric facilities are expected to be brought into use in May 1997.

Rehabilitation and Support Services

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the success of the pilot projects funded in 1992 to develop the rehabilitation and support services for people with brain injury; and if he will make a statement; [12167]

(2) what action he is taking to ensure the continued funding for the 12 pilot projects set up to develop the rehabilitation and support services for people with brain injury after March 1997; [12170]

(3) what plans he has further to develop the rehabilitation and support services for people with brain injury on a national basis as a result of the 12 pilot projects which are due to end in March 1997. [12169]

Mr. Burns: In 1992 we commissioned the centre for health service studies at the university of Warwick business school to evaluate the cost-effectiveness and organisation of services at the 12 pilot sites for people with brain injury. The report will be published later this year. The aim has always been that the national health service trusts involved would seek funding from their local health purchasers to continue and develop the services which have been shown to be effective.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to make CJD a notifiable disease; and if he will make a statement; [12670]

(2) what instructions have been issued by his Department to (a) neurologists and (b) other medical specialists treating people with CJD or suspected CJD to ensure such cases are brought to the attention of the CJD surveillance unit; [12669]

(3) what plans his Department have to make compulsory post-mortems on people who are suspected of dying from CJD; and if he will make a statement; [12668]

(4) what steps his Department has taken to ensure that relatives of people suspected of having died from CJD are notified of the need for a post-mortem to confirm CJD as the cause of death; [12695]

(5) how many of the CJD cases confirmed by his Department in 1996 fell into the age ranges (a) 0 to 20, (b) 21 to 30, (c) 31 to 40, (d) 41 to 50, (e) 51 to 60, (f) 61 to 70 and (g) over 70 years at the time of death; [12696]

(6) how many cases have been brought to the attention of the CJD surveillance unit where people have died under the age of 60 years from suspected CJD but have not had a post-mortem; [12694]

(7) pursuant to his Department's press release of 6 January, by what means his Department's scientists have been able to confirm that two living people have CJD. [12697]

Mr. Horam: The national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit was established in 1990 to monitor the incidence of CJD and investigate the epidemiology of the disease, paying particular attention to occupation and eating habits so that any change in the pattern of CJD following the advent of BSE could be detected.

Regional neurologists were notified when the unit was set up. The unit has established good informal contacts with neurologists throughout the United Kingdom, which allow thorough investigation of a wide range of individual cases during the course of the illness. The clinical indications of classic CJD are well documented and understood by neurologists. The director of the national CJD surveillance unit wrote to all members of the Association of British Neurologists on 21 March 1996 describing the clinical and neuropathological features of the new variant CJD, and requesting that any case with this clinical or neurological profile be referred to the unit. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Cases of suspect CJD are mainly referred to the CJD surveillance unit directly from professional groups including neurologists, neuropathologists and neurophysiologists, and occasionally other sources. Given the present level of awareness of this disease we think it unlikely that any cases are missed. As a safety net, details are sought from all death certificates coded under the specific rubrics for CJD. There is no evidence to suggest that ascertainment would be improved by making CJD notifiable; indeed, because of the difficult nature of clinical diagnosis of CJD and the consequent difficulty of defining what should be notified, an attempt to make the disease notifiable might lead to fewer suspected cases being referred to the unit. The Government therefore have no plans to make CJD a notifiable disease.

Definite confirmation of CJD is possible only by microscopic examination of brain tissue. Normally this is conducted post-mortem. The team from the unit discusses the importance of the post-mortem with the clinician concerned, and also with the family if they raise the issue during epidemiological investigations. However, the decision of whether a post-mortem is carried out is a matter between the clinician and the relatives. Post-mortem examination has been carried out in 85 per cent. of cases where the patient is aged under 60. Of the 124 patients involved since 1990, only 18 have not had a post-mortem. Of these, seven, including one new variant case, were classified as "probable" according to clinical criteria and so are included in the published statistics.

The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee has considered the issue of the role of the coroner in relation to CJD deaths, and recommended that:

- it was appropriate to report deaths from iatrogenic CJD to the coroner;
- there was no need to report deaths from classical sporadic or familial cases;
- deaths from new variant CJD should not normally be reported. However, the reporting officer (either the medical consultant or the Registrar of Deaths) would need to consider whether the information available suggest the death could be "unnatural"; the coroner may decide to hold an inquest where there appeared to be doubt or dispute as to whether CJD, in any form, was the actual cause of death.

Post-mortems are not compulsory for any other clinical condition, and the Government have no plans to make them so for people who are suspected of having died from CJD. This is a matter in which the wishes of relatives must be paramount.

Diagnosis of CJD can occasionally be confirmed by positive brain biopsy while the patient is still alive. Biopsy is an invasive procedure which is potentially distressing for relatives, carries some risk of complication for the patient, may not always provide evidence of the diagnosis—a negative biopsy does not rule out the disease—and necessitates special precautions to be taken by the staff involved. Whether a biopsy is carried out is a clinical decision and we have no plans to change this.

A breakdown of deaths from CJD in 1996 by age at time of death is set out in the table.

Breakdown of definite and probable CJD deaths in 1996 by age at time of death

Mental Health

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish his Green Paper on mental health. [12571]

Mr. Burns: We intend to publish the Green Paper shortly.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists since 1979 have undergone a period of retraining following criticisms made to the British Dental Association of their (a) clinical performance and (b) clinical judgment. [12465]

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for the General Dental Council.

Long-term Care (Pensions)

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to require social services departments to disregard 50 per cent. of the income from a personal pension when a person whose spouse lives in the family home enters long-term care. [12990]

Mr. Burns: Regulations are being amended with effect from 7 April 1997 so that local authorities will be required to ignore 50 per cent. of any personal pension or retirement annuity contract of a person who enters long-term residential care who has a spouse who is not living in the same residential care or nursing home.

General Chiropractic Council

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will announce the designate membership of the first General Chiropractic Council. [13260]

Mr. Dorrell: I am pleased to announce that the designate membership of the first General Chiropractic Council is as follows:

Chairman (lay member):

Mrs. Norma F. Morris MA: visiting fellow at University College London currently engaged in research and consultancy in the field of science policy and research management.

Chiropractic members (all practising chiropractors):

Mr. Michael C. Copland-Griffiths

Ms Dana Green

Dr. Carla How

Mr. Nigel Hunt

Mr. Ian Hutchinson

Ms Susan King

Mr. Anthony M. Metcalfe

Mrs. Barbara Minter

Mr. Richard G. Rumary

Ms Susan L. Steward

Education members

Mr. Alan Breen

Ms Karen Flintoff

Mr. Timothy C. Jay

Mr. R. Brian Mouatt CBE BDS MGDSRCS.

Lay members

Mrs. Peaches Golding BA MCIM MIMgt: director of marketing and public relations company and regional co-ordinator of a Prince's Trust initiative to boost ethnic minority economic activity.

Mr. A. Robin Hodgson: retired chief executive of Hampshire county council and qualified solicitor.

Lady Peston (Helen): voluntary worker with particular interest in people with disabilities and communication impairments.

Mrs. Linda J. Stone FRPharmS: community pharmacist and former president of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain.

Professor Iain McCall FRCR: Professor of radiological science at the University of Keele, and consultant radiologist at the Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt orthopaedic hospital.

The chairman and membership will meet shortly to begin the preliminary work of drawing up a business plan for the new GCC and the outline of the necessary structures for the administration of the statutory registration scheme for chiropractors. As soon as this preliminary work is complete, the first of the commencement orders will be made to bring the essential elements of the Chiropractors Act 1994 into force, and the members of the GCC will be formally appointed.

Government Policy (Children)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the co-ordination of Government policy relating to children. [11118]

Mr. Burns: Many mechanisms, both formal and informal, are in place to ensure cross-Departmental co-operation in areas of shared interest. There are also arrangements for talking to and consulting both charities and voluntary organisations with an interest in children's issues. These arrangements work well, especially as they have been expanded by the forming of the children's services strategy group.

Deregulation (Medicinal Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the results of deregulation measures involving medicinal drugs. [11132]

Mr. Malone: Deregulation measures involving medicinal drugs have helped remove unnecessary or costly burdens on business without compromising the need to protect public health. The Government keep these measures under review and take further action as appropriate to maintain necessary safeguards.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his planned timetable for legislation on the ethics of xenotransplantation. [12184]

Mr. Horam: Legislation to regulate xenotransplantation will be introduced following due consideration, taking into account the results of the consultation exercise, and when parliamentary time allows. Until then the United Kingdom xenotransplantation interim regulatory authority will be established on a non-statutory basis to oversee xenotransplant developments. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has given a commitment to introduce legislation promptly should he be persuaded that any particular development creates a risk to public health.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will place in the Library the representations it received during the consultation period on his Department's advisory group on the ethics of xenotransplantation report. [12720]

Mr. Horam: Unless confidentiality is requested, responses to the consultation exercise will be publicly available and copies will be placed in the Library.

NHS Employment Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the average annual cost to the Exchequer from the employment of (a) a nurse and (b) a doctor within the national health service. [12789]

Mr. Malone: The estimated annual average pay cost to the Exchequer of a nurse and a doctor employed in the hospital and community health service is £18,500[1] and £44,800[1] respectively. Other costs associated with employment cannot be identified separately.

[1] Rounded to the nearest hundred.

Eye Tests

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the annual cost of abolishing all charges for eye tests; and what estimate he has made of the number of people who presently make some payment for such tests. [12787]

Mr. Malone: We estimate that, on the basis of the trend in the number of national health service free sight tests apparent before the announcement of the restrictions in November 1987 and with NHS sight test fees at 1996–97 levels, removing the restrictions on the availability of NHS sight tests would cost about £120 million. Results from surveys suggest that in 1995–96 some 6 million people received private sight tests.

Child Migrants

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes he proposes in his policy towards former British child migrants in response to the interim report of the Western Australia Legislative Assembly Select Committee into child migration; and if he will make a statement. [12461]

Mr. Burns: None. As the report does not come to any firm conclusions and its major recommendation is for an honorary royal commission, a response at this time would not be appropriate.

Insulin

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the Bellagio report of April 1996 on human insulin unawareness; [12679]

(2) how many United Kingdom insulin-dependent diabetics currently use animal insulins; and how many were doing so in 1990; [12673]

(3) what is the policy of his Department with regard to making known to newly diagnosed diabetics the choice between human and animal insulin; [12677]

(4) what steps his Department is taking to assure insulin users that animal insulin will continue to be available; [12676]

(5) if he will encourage manufacturers to make animal insulin available for insulin pens. [12678]

Mr. Horam: Manufacturers have confirmed that animal insulin will continue to be available in the United Kingdom until at least the year 2000. It is for them to decide whether or not to make animal insulin available for insulin pens. Clinical decisions on the most suitable type of treatment for a patient must be made by the individual's clinician. The Department of Health does not collect information on the number of insulin-dependent diabetics who use animal insulin. The Department of Health and the Medicines Control Agency are aware of the Bellagio report of April 1996, and will continue to monitor closely the safety of all insulins.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what records are kept of the number of complaints made by insulin users who have been adversely affected by human insulin. [12674]

Mr. Malone: Complaints by users of medicines are received by many different routes, for example by general practitioners, hospital clinicians, health authorities and the Department of Health. Records of the number of complaints made by users of a particular medicine are not collated centrally. Complaints about medicines are handled on an individual basis and, when it is suspected by the patient's doctor that an adverse reaction to a medicine has occurred, the doctor is requested to report it through the yellow card scheme to the Medicines Control Agency.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has evaluated into the responses of patients who have used human insulin. [12672]

Mr. Malone: As for all medicines, the quality, safety and efficacy of human insulins have been subjected to detailed scrutiny by the Medicines Control Agency and Committee on Safety of Medicines at the time of licensing. Subsequently, as part of the normal monitoring of marketed medicines, all post-marketing information and published research has been evaluated as it has become available.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of maintaining prescription charges at present levels in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [12785]

Mr. Malone: We estimate the loss of income from maintaining prescription charges at their present level of £5.50 rather than raising them to £5.65 from 1 April 1997 would be approximately £9 million per annum for the next three financial years.

Service Provision

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he intends to take to keep pace with extra demands on the national health service from (a) demographic trends and (b) health-specific cost pressures; and if he will make a statement on the impact of such extra demands on health service provision. [12788]

Mr. Horam: The Government's commitment on funding for the national health service is set out in the White Paper "The National Health Service: A Service with Ambitions", presented to Parliament in November 1996. The White Paper discusses fully the implications of demographic change, the public's expectations of the NHS and of medical and technical advances. The Government keep the totality of cost pressures on the NHS, and the scope to deliver improved value for money, under review in reaching their decisions on public expenditure, year by year.

Dental Checks

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the annual cost of abolishing all charges for dental checks; and what estimate he has made of the number of people who presently make some payment for such checks. [12786]

Mr. Malone: The annual cost of abolishing charges for dental examinations in England, based on 1995–96 prices and charges, is estimated to be about £60 million, at current levels of demand. The number of courses of treatment where patients pay some charge for dental examinations is estimated to have been approximately 14.5 million in 1995–96.

Nurse Education

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the pre-registration nurse education intake in each year from 1987–88 to 1995–96. [12688]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is published English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting annual reports 1991–92 and 1995–96, copies of which are available in the Library.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12710]

Mr. Horam: The Department's major areas of policy responsibility do not have a significant environmental impact and we are not aware of any documents, issued in 1996, which have given rise to either direct or indirect environmental effect. However, the Department has worked in collaboration with the Department of the Environment to produce the United Kingdom national environmental health action plan and a consultative document on the inclusion of the environment as a key area in "The Health of the Nation" strategy, both of which would lead to improvements in environmental quality with parallel benefits to health.

Care Leavers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department has undertaken to ensure local authorities provide adequate support for young people leaving care; and if he will make a statement. [12811]

Mr. Burns: The Department of Health issued comprehensive guidance to local authorities on after care to accompany the Children Act 1989. It has further reinforced messages about the need for social services to work collaboratively with other agencies in guidance on children's services planning. The Government have commissioned, and continue to fund, research on leaving care and provides funding to a number of voluntary organisations to promote developments in services. The social services inspectorate will be disseminating widely the findings of its recent inspection of leaving care services.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health according to what criteria young people leaving care are identified as vulnerable; and if he will make a statement. [12810]

Mr. Burns: The assessment of the individual needs of young people about to leave care is the responsibility of local authority social services departments on a case-by-case basis. Social services departments have a duty to draw up a care plan for each young person they are looking after. Comprehensive guidance on planning and reviewing children's cases and on the after care responsibilities of local authorities was issued to accompany the Children Act.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of young people leaving care are identified as vulnerable; and if he will make a statement. [12808]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not held centrally.

Children's Rights (UN Report)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the UN committee report on the rights of the child. [12813]

Mr. Burns: We received the concluding observations of the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child on 27 January 1995. The UN convention on the rights of the child does not require us to publicise the report or to respond.

Meningitis

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the conditions that have to be met before a decision is taken to vaccinate (a) children in a primary school and (b) students living in halls of residence against the C strain of meningitis. [13014]

Mr. Horam: Guidelines on the control of meningococcal infection, including the use of antibiotics and vaccine, have been issued by the public health Laboratory Service since 1989. These are regularly updated and published and copies are sent to all directors of public health and consultants in communicable disease control. The most recent guidelines on the control of meningococcal disease were issued on 8 December 1995 in the PHLS's "Communicable Disease Report Review"; additional guidance on the management of clusters of meningococcal disease was included in a letter sent to all doctors from the Chief Medical Officer on 3 January and published in the CDR on 10 January, which was also sent to directors of public health and consultants in communicable disease control. These publications have been placed in the Library. Those with local expertise must make decisions about the detailed arrangements for the handling of outbreaks of meningococcal infection within these guidelines.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of vaccination programmes to protect against type C meningitis that were conducted in (i) 1976, (ii) 1977, (iii) 1978, (iv) 1979, (v) 1994 (vi) 1995 and (vii) 1996. [13016]

Mr. Horam: These data been collected for the period since April 1995 only. We are aware of three community and 10 schools meningococcal immunisation programmes in the period 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996. Data are collected each March for the preceding full year.

Pharmaceuticals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) quantity and (b) percentage of pharmaceuticals for (i) human and (ii) animal use produced in the United Kingdom were donated overseas; and if he will make a statement. [12717]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the safety implications of companies donating pharmaceuticals for (a) human and (b) animal use; and if he will make a statement; [12719]

(2) what regulations his Department has set for the (a) quantities, (b) content, (c) labelling and (d) life span of pharmaceuticals for donation overseas; and if he will make a statement. [12718]

Mr. Malone: Medicines licensed for human and animal use within the European Community are assessed against criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. Countries outside the EC may have particular requirements for the import of pharmaceuticals for human or animal use. The World Health Organisation has issued detailed guidelines for donors and recipients relating to drug donations for international humanitarian relief. The code of ethics of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain provides guidance for pharmacists on the redirection of unwanted medicines to developing countries.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial incentives his Department gives to companies to donate pharmaceuticals overseas; and if he will make a statement. [12716]

Mr. Malone: None.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Policy

12. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times the Cabinet Committee on the Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy meets each week. [11124]

Mr. Bates: Consistent with the principle of collective responsibility, it has been the practice of successive Governments not to make public information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees.

17. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people are employed in his Department to assist with the co-ordination of Government policy. [11130]

Mr. Bates: The co-ordination of Government policy is a ministerial activity. No staff are employed to support my right hon. Friend in this area.

18. Mr. Miller: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the role played by civil servants in the co-ordination and presentation of Government policy. [11131]

Mr. Bates: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my earlier answer to the question from the hon. Member for Barrow and Furness (Mr. Hutton).

Magistrates (Bolton)

14. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations he has received on the appointment of new magistrates in Bolton and their working conditions. [11126]

Mr. Freeman: I have recently approved the appointment of six ladies and eight gentleman to the Bolton bench. The only representation I have had regarding the working conditions of Bolton magistrates is from the hon. Member.

Political Advisers

15. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many political advisers are attached to his office; and what services they carry out in relation to identifying supporters of Government policy. [11127]

The Deputy Prime Minister: One; my political adviser provides appropriate research and information.

Civil Servants

16. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations he has received concerning the impartiality of civil servants. [11128]

Mr. Bates: This Government are committed to a politically impartial civil service, as my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister made clear in response to representations made to me by several members of the Public Service Committee on 10 December.

Deregulation

19. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are his main targets for deregulation during the lifetime of the Parliament. [11133]

Mr. Freeman: We will continue our successful programme of measures which, among other achievements, has already repealed or amended 1,000 regulations; set us on course to reduce the burden of paperwork by 26 per cent. by the year 2000; and introduced new business rights in enforcement actions.

22. Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what further deregulatory measures he plans during the next three months, in respect of UK legislation and EU regulations. [11136]

Mr. Freeman: Among many planned measures, we are consulting on an increase in the audit threshold from £90,000 to £350,000. We will also be bringing forward further orders under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, including an extension of the new business-friendly enforcement rights to building regulations, fire safety, consumer legislation and environmental health. In Europe, we will be launching a second round of the simpler legislation in the internal market—SLIM—initiative.

Safety (Young People)

20. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement regarding the recommendation he has received from the deregulation task force regarding safety of young people. [11134]

Mr. Freeman: The Government have rejected the deregulation task force recommendation to delay implementation of the young persons' activity centre licensing regime. The Government are implementing the scheme with minimum bureaucracy and will review the scheme thoroughly in 1999.

Millennium Exhibition

21. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a progress report on the provision of appropriate (a) public and (b) private funding of the millennium exhibition. [11135]

Mr. Freeman: The Millennium Commission has approved a grant of £200 million for the millennium exhibition at Greenwich; £150 million is the target for sponsorship, with the balance of the budget coming from receipts and other commercial income. More than half the £150 million sponsorship has already been identified. Negotiations are continuing in confidence with a number of major sponsors and it is hoped that the full target will be achieved in due course.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of the cost to Government departments of the changes necessary to prepare their computers for the millennium date change. [12752]

Mr. Freeman: I have nothing to add to the supplementary reply my hon. Friend the former Paymaster General made to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 9 December last year, Official Report, columns 4–5.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12698]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12714]

Mr. Freeman: A chapter in the 1996 White Paper "Competitiveness: Creating the Enterprise Centre for Europe" considered the relationship between economic growth and the environment. Among other things, it set out how companies can benefit from understanding and minimising the environmental impact of their activities.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Cautions

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cautions have been administered by police forces to (a) adults, (b) young persons and (c) juveniles in each of the last five years. [13023]

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of persons cautioned by age group is published in the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", table 5.1 of the 1993 and 1995 editions. Copies are available in the Library.

Breathalysed Drivers

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers were breathalysed in the Christmas period in each of the past five years; how many of those tests were positive; and if he will make a statement. [11033]

Mr. Maclean: Figures collected by the Home Office do not enable the Christmas and new year period to be separately identified. The Association of Chief Police Officers, however, has collected figures on the number of positive breath tests during this period in each of the last five years, with the total number of screening breath tests required for 1992 to 1994. They are:

Breath tests over the Christmas and new year period, England and Wales 1992–93 to 1996–97

	Number of breath tests	Number positive
1992–93	59,069	4,248
1993–94	65,522	4,470
1994–95	78,009	4,706
1995–96	n/a	4,411
1996–97	n/a	[1]5,209

n/a = not available.

The Home Office does, however, collect and publish figures for the month of December, and they are given in the table. Figures for 1996 are not yet available, but will be published in the spring. I will send the hon. Member a copy of the statistical bulletin when it is published.

Breath tests during December, England and Wales 1992 to 1995

	Number of breath tests	Number positive/refused	Percentage positive/refused
1992	110,100	8,500	8
1993	105,800	8,600	8
1994	129,100	8,700	7
1995	141,400	8,900	6

Police Accommodation

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers of 11 December, Official Report, columns 266–67, on Vauxhall police division and Grafton square and 13 January, Official Report, column 46, on police accommodation in Lambeth, what is the relationship between the strategic review of the provision of police accommodation and the on-going review of the long-term police accommodation needs. [12375]

Mr. Maclean: The review of the long-term police accommodation needs refers to a five-yearly rolling review of the Metropolitan police's operational building strategy. The strategy is due to be updated by September 1997. Each area contributes to the review of the operational building strategy. The on-going strategic review into police accommodation needs in Lambeth will inform 5 Area's submission to the review process for the operational building strategy.

Ticket Touts

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal proceedings involving alleged ticket touting at football matches under section 166 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 have been pursued to date; and how many convictions have been secured. [12359]

Mr. Maclean: In 1995, 210 defendants were prosecuted for the offence of "sale of football tickets by unauthorised person on day of match" under section 166 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. Of these, 188 were convicted.

Female Police

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of women by rank within the police forces in Wales on 31 December in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [12869]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The information requested is shown in the table:

Football Matches (Policing)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total number of police officers on duty at Premiership and Football League matches in England and Wales and the total cost of these officers for the seasons (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [12356]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police (Court Attendances)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the police man hours spent in court attendance for each of the last five years. [11054]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 January 1997]: This information is not held centrally.

Young Offenders

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to bring section 60 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 into operation; and if he will make a statement. [12488]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Sufficient secure local authority accommodation is required before section 60 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 can be brought into operation. The Government are funding an expansion of the local authority secure estate.

Police (Increased Strength)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the annual cost of providing an additional 3,000 police officers. [12806]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The additional cost of 3,000 extra police constables in 1997–98 is an estimated £60 million, which the Government have made available.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid and Trade Provision

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, by company and country, all projects granted assistance from the aid and trade provision in the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97. [12924]

Dr. Liam Fox: The following new projects were approved for funding under the aid and trade provision in the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97:

Country	Company	Project
1995–96
China	Purac Ltd.	Liuzhou water
China	Siemens Plessey	Nanjing airport
Indonesia	Clough Smith	Samarinda transmission line
Indonesia	GEC Alsthom	Java power transmission
Indonesia	G. Cussons Ltd.	Piston engines research laboratory
Indonesia	Phillip Harris Ltd.	Science and technology, Java universities
Pakistan	Reynolds Boughton	Fire crash tenders
Ghana	Biwater International	SE districts water supply
Zimbabwe	Landrover Exports Ltd.	Supply of 300 Landrovers
1996–97
China	Balfour Beatty	Guangzhou Metro overhead catenary system
China	GEC	Guangzhou Metro ventilation system
Philippines	Mabey and Johnson	Steel bridging
Ghana	TecQuipment Ltd.	Support to the national vocational training institute centres

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will release the correspondence and minutes of the meetings between the Overseas Development Administration, Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Department of Trade and Industry, relating to the television studios rehabilitation project, referred to in paragraph 2.6 of the National Audit Office report on "Aid to Indonesia" (HC 101 of Session 1996–97). [12594]

Dr. Liam Fox: I will write to the hon. Member.

TRANSPORT

Waste Management

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what proposals he has for the development of port and ship waste management plans; [12493]

(2) if he will make provision of port waste reception facilities a statutory duty. [12494]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Government attach considerable importance to the provision of waste reception facilities in ports. Harbour authorities are already under a statutory duty to provide adequate waste reception facilities under the Merchant Shipping (Reception Facilities for Garbage) Regulations 1988 and the Prevention of Pollution (Reception Facilities) Order 1984. In January 1996, the Government announced the introduction of port waste management planning to improve the provision and use of waste reception facilities. Waste management plans were introduced initially on a voluntary basis, in advance of the introduction of the Merchant Shipping and Maritime Security Bill, which seeks to make port waste management planning mandatory. International regulations requiring ship waste management plans will be implemented from July 1997 for new ships and July 1998 for all ships.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of the Merchant Shipping Regulations 1988 in reducing marine debris. [12492]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Surveys by and on behalf of the Marine Safety Agency have shown that the waste reception facilities provided by harbour authorities pursuant to the Merchant Shipping (Reception Facilities for Garbage) Regulations 1988 are generally adequate. It is therefore difficult to make a specific assessment of the effect of the Merchant Shipping(Prevention of Pollution by Garbage) Regulations 1988 in isolation from other legislation relating to pollution of the marine environment from both shipping and land-based sources.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set up a public register of legal notices, offences and fines relating to pollution of the marine environment from shipping. [12496]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Government already publish details of vessels prosecuted for marine pollution offences and vessels which have been reported to their flag states for suspected pollution offences. We do not intend to introduce a public register.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it a statutory obligation for port authorities to keep garbage record books. [12495]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Garbage record books have been developed by the International Maritime Organisation as a means to assess the compliance of ships with regulations on the discharge of garbage from ships. They will be required on new ships from July 1997 and on all ships from July 1998. It would be inappropriate for a similar requirement to be applied to port authorities.

Baggage (Airliners)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports his Department receives on unaccompanied, unchecked, unaccounted for and unexplained baggage in airliners; and what action he can take. [11233]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Regular monitoring of compliance with the direction relating to the accounting and authorisation of baggage is carried out by my Department's inspectors. Where a deficiency is found, it is normally rectified on the spot. If this is not possible immediately, a deficiency notice is served requiring the aircraft operator to comply at the earliest opportunity. Should compliance not be achieved thereafter, formal enforcement powers are available.

Air Traffic Control Services

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Channon) of 16 January, Official Report, column 317, on air traffic control services, if he will make a statement on the selection of the preferred bidder for the proposed services. [12957]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Civil Aviation Authority is now discussing with my Department and the Treasury the handling of tenders for the new Scottish centre, against the background of the strategy for future provision of air traffic control services on which they are consulting airlines and other interested parties.

Dangerous Substances

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what precautions currently required by his Department apply in respect of the transport of (a) plutonium, (b) other radioactive materials and (c) polychlorinated biphenyls by air; what plans he has to introduce more stringent measures; and if he will make a statement. [12214]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: United Kingdom legislation requires that all dangerous goods carried by air, including radioactive materials, and thus plutonium and PCBs, must comply with the very stringent standards and requirements of the International Civil Aviation Organisation's "Technical Instructions for the Safe Transport of Dangerous Goods by Air", which are updated biennially. This legislation, enforced by the Civil Aviation Authority, ensures that the UK fulfils its safety obligations under the convention on civil aviation. The technical instructions set the standards for the classification, packing, marking, labelling and documentation of all dangerous goods. We intend to continue with our current policy of requiring compliance with the up-to-date edition of the technical instructions.

Overweight Vehicles

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many operators have been prosecuted in each of the last 12 months for operating overweight heavy goods vehicles over 38 tonnes. [13194]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 28 January 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the number of operators prosecuted in each of the last 12 months for operating overweight heavy goods vehicles over 38 tonnes.

Information on overweight heavy goods vehicles (HGVs) is not available in the format requested. However during the 1995/96 financial year there were 3,740 convictions for HGV overloading offences.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is his Department's policy in respect of prosecution of overweight heavy goods vehicle operators facing gross train weight charges of less than 10 per cent. who have not been prosecuted before; and if he will make a statement; [13193]

(2) if he will make it his policy to pursue prosecutions of all heavy goods vehicles which are found to be overweight; [13192]

(3) if he will list the ministerial directives he has issued to the Vehicle Inspectorate concerning overweight heavy goods vehicles in each of the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement; [13190]

(4) if he will place in the Library a copy of the ministerial directive issued to the Vehicle Inspectorate to the effect that only heavy goods vehicles over 10 per cent. or 2 tonnes over the 38 tonnes weight would be prosecuted; and who was responsible for issuing the directive. [13191]

Mr. Bowis: There have been no ministerial directives as such on this subject in the past 12 months. In order to promote consistency, Ministers agree guidelines for the prosecution of overloading offences by the Vehicle Inspectorate, but the final decision on whether to prosecute in individual cases rests with the inspectorate, in the light of all the circumstances. It is normal for the Vehicle Inspectorate to prohibit clearly overloaded vehicles whether or not it intends to take prosecution action.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter from the Vehicle Inspectorate prosecution and legal services relating to the threshold below which prosecutions against overloaded lorries should not be pursued. [13189]

Mr. Bowis: The Vehicle Inspectorate's prosecution and legal services unit has a standard letter which it uses to advise defendants and clerks to the courts in cases where selected offences are not proceeded with. Copies of these standard letters have been placed in the Library.

In November 1996, a small number of incorrect versions of these letters were sent out, copies of which have also been placed in the Library. As soon as the mistake was detected, the erroneous versions were stopped.

A46/A47

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if discussions to date between his Department and Leicestershire county council in respect of the A46/A47 link road constitute routine discussions about funding under the TPP—transport policies and programmes—process. [13250]

Mr. Watts: Yes.

Motorways (HGVs Overtaking)

Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions have been made in the last few years of heavy goods vehicle drivers for using the overtaking lane of motorways; and if he will make a statement. [12290]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not collected centrally.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12711]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The information requested is not kept centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Speed Cameras

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what authorities are responsible for installing speed cameras (a) on motorways and (b) on other roads; what measures his Department takes to ensure that the appropriate police authorities have time to prepare prosecutions; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of this means of curbing speeding. [13041]

Mr. Bowis: Highway authorities are normally responsible for installing the equipment in which the cameras are housed: these are the Highways Agency for motorways and trunk roads, and local authorities for other roads. The police are normally responsible for the purchase and operation of the cameras.

Section 1 of the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 requires that a summons or notice of intended prosecution must be issued within 14 days of the commission of a speeding or other road traffic offence. It is for individual chief constables to make arrangements to ensure that this requirement is met.

A study by Price Waterhouse of the costs and benefits of traffic light and speed cameras, commissioned by the Home Office, reported in August 1996. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Fuel Tax and Vehicle Excise Duty

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much fuel tax and vehicle excise duty on (a) goods vehicles over 3.5 tonnes, (b) cars and (c) motorcycles was paid in each of the last five years. [12342]

Mr. Bowis: The information is as follows:

1991–92: £10,816 million

1992–93: £11,227 million

1993–94: £12,490 million

1994–95: £13,960 million

1995–96: £15,436 million

A breakdown of fuel duty by types of vehicles is not available.

Vehicle excise duty (net of refunds) collected was:

£ millions

Tax class	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Goods vehicles over 3501 kgs	499	505	508	538	555
Private and light goods	2,354	2,695	3,055	3,242	3,407
Motorcycles	24	23	25	25	25

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how his Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans they have to extend their use in future within the Department. [12269]

Mr. Bowis: Indicators are broad brush, aggregated statistics which provide the policy making process with information about trends in transport use and the associated impact on the environment and the economy. My Department has taken account of the statistics contained in the "UK Indicators for Sustainable Development" in formulating the transport policies set out in the Department's annual report and in the Green paper, "Transport: The Way Forward", published in April 1996. Those polices are developed in accordance with the principles of sustainable development.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

EU Directives

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many legislative measures have been enacted to implement EU directives in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) each EU country in each year since 1992; and in each year what was the EU average. [11808]

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The table shows the number of statutory instruments, including amending instruments, made each year since 1992 to implement EC directives currently in force.

1993. 134

1995: 294

Source:

Butterworth's EC Legislative Implementator 1997, Issue 1. The figures are based on material collated up to 31 October 1996. Directives for which no implementing material has been identified, or which have been repealed or spent, have not been included. No Acts of Parliament were listed as implementing directives during the period in question.

Figures are not available for the number of legislative measure through which directives have been implemented in other member states. However, the Commission's 13th annual report on the monitoring of the application of Community law, COM(96)600 final, contains information about the application by member states of EC directives in force on 31 December 1995. This document is available in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Cement and Lime Kilns

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the (a) cement kilns and (b) lime kilns at each plant in the UK combusting (i) coal alone, (ii) coal in combination with petroleum coke, (iii) coal in combination with solvent waste, (iv) coal in combination with other high calorific wastes, (v) petroleum coke alone, (vi) petroleum coke in combination with solvent waste, (vii) petroleum coke in combination with other high calorific wastes and (viii) other high calorific wastes alone, showing in each case which other high calorific wastes are being combusted. [11664]

Mr. Clappison: I understand from the Environment Agency that the cement kilns and lime kilns in England and Wales burning fuels in the categories listed are:

(a) Cement kilns

(i) Coal alone

Blue Circle Industries plc, Plymstock, Devon (also burns coal with petroleum coke)

Blue Circle Industries plc, Barnstone, Nottinghamshire

Blue Circle Industries plc, Hope, Derbyshire

Castle Cement Ltd., Ribblesdale Works, Clitheroe, Lancashire (three kilns) (also authorised to burn coal with petroleum coke in all kilns, though rarely do so, and coal with solvent waste in two kilns)

(ii) Coal in combination with petroleum coke

Blue Circle Industries plc, Plymstock, Devon (also burns coal alone)

Blue Circle Industries plc, Westbury, Wiltshire (two kilns)

Blue Circle Industries plc, Claydon, Suffolk

Blue Circle Industries plc, Aberthaw Works, Vale of Glamorgan

Blue Circle Industries plc, Weardale, Co. Durham

Blue Circle Industries plc, Northfleet, Kent

Blue Circle Industries plc, Cauldon, Stoke on Trent (also burns petroleum coke with tyre chips)

Buxton Lime Industries, Tunstead, Buxton, Derbyshire

Castle Cement Ltd., Ketton, Lincolnshire (also burns this combination with Cemfuel, and also burns this fuel in combination with Cemfuel and waste tyres)

Castle Cement Ltd., Padeswood Works, Alyn and Deeside

Castle Cement Ltd., Ribblesdale Works, Clitheroe, Lancashire (three kilns) (three kilns, though rarely use this fuel. Also authorised to burn coal alone in three kilns and coal with solvent waste in two of the kilns.)

Rugby Group plc, Chinnor Works, Oxon (three kilns)

Rugby Group plc, South Ferriby, Barton upon Humber, South Humberside

Rugby Group plc, Rochester, Kent

Rugby Group plc, Rugby, Warwickshire

Rugby Group plc, Southam, Warwickshire (also burns coal with dycal)

(iii) Coal in combination with solvent waste

Castle Cement Ltd., Ribblesdale Works, Clitheroe, Lancashire (two kilns) (also burns coal alone in both kilns and coal with petroleum coke)

Rugby Group plc, Southam, Warwickshire (also burns coal with petroleum waste)

No other cement kilns are currently burning any of the other fuels listed.

(b) Lime kilns

(ii) Coal with petroleum coke

Buxton Lime Industries, Tunstead, Buxton, Derbyshire

Redland Aggregates, Whitwell, Worksop, Nottinghamshire (also burns petroleum coke, petroleum coke with solvent waste and coal with petroleum coke and solvent waste)

(v) Petroleum coke alone

British Sugar, York (two kilns)

Redland Aggregates, Whitwell, Worksop, Nottinghamshire (also burns coal with petroleum coke, petroleum coke with solvent waste and coal with petroleum coke and solvent waste)

Redland Aggregates, Thrislington, Co. Durham (T1 and T2 kilns)

(vi) Petroleum coke in combination with solvent waste

Redland Aggregates, Whitwell, Worksop, Nottinghamshire (also burns coal with petroleum coke, petroleum coke alone and coal with petroleum coke and solvent waste)

Redland Aggregates, Thrislington, Co. Durham (T3 kiln)

No other lime kilns are currently burning any of the other fuels listed.

The information relating to Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and the information relating to Northern Ireland a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Teesside Development Corporation

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which developments or proposals by the Teesside development corporation have been opposed by (a) Stockton borough council and (b) Cleveland county council. [11874]

Sir Paul Beresford: Since 1987, Stockton borough council has opposed three planning applications initiated by Teesside development corporation. The applications were for developments at Teesside retail park, phase 2, the Rowing Course at Teesdale and a fenland village at Cowpen Bewley. Cleveland county council also opposed the Teesdale retail park phase 2 development.

EU Environmental Protection Schemes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful attempts have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the last four years to obtain funds from the EU's (i) Altener, (ii) LIFE II: nature protection, (iii) Urban, (iv) Leader II, (v) Regis II, (vi) Save II and (vii) LIFE II: environmental protection schemes; and what funds have been allocated to the United Kingdom under each of these schemes. [12341]

Mr. Clappison: My Department is responsible for the Urban, English Leader II, and Save II schemes and the LIFE II: nature protection and LIFE II: environmental protection schemes. The President of the Board of Trade is responsible for Altener. Regis II does not apply to the United Kingdom.

LIFE II: Nature protection and LIFE II Environment protection:

These two schemes have been in operation since 1996; therefore, only one round of applications has been made. In 1996, there were two successful applications and one unsuccessful application to the LIFE II nature scheme, and 4.3 million ECU received in funding. With regard to the LIFE II environment scheme, there were seven successful and 36 unsuccessful applications in 1996, and 1.8 million ECU received in funding.

URBAN:

Urban is a three-year programme in operation from 1996 to 1999 and is worth 80.25 million ECU to the United Kingdom, excluding Northern Ireland, over the programme period. Ten areas have been approved for funding.

LEADER II:

LEADER II is a five-year programme running from November 1994 until 31 December 1999. My Department is responsible only for the English LEADER II programme, which has been allocated 31.82 million ECU in funding for the five-year period. This money was distributed among 17 targeted local development groups within England. The information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for the relevant Secretaries of State.

SAVE II:

This information is not centrally available, as levels of funding for specific projects supported under the SAVE programme are a contractual matter between the European Commission and those carrying out each project.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how his Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans he has to extend their use in future within the Department. [12268]

Mr. Clappison: The UK indicators of sustainable development published last March are primarily intended to stimulate discussion about how we measure whether our development is sustainable. The indicators were developed to address and monitor the key sustainable development issues highlighted in the UK sustainable development strategy published in 1994. As such, they have been used to inform decisions about the priorities for action and work programmes in the year ahead, which will be reported in the annual White Paper on sustainable development and the Department's annual report, both of which are to be published shortly. The indicators are also used as appropriate to inform consideration of the environmental implications of policy options.

We have been consulting widely on the preliminary indicator package and we hosted a one-day seminar in November last year, inviting views from a wide range of interested parties—local authorities, the business community, non-governmental organisations, research institutes and academics, as well as international indicator experts. A report on the seminar's findings is to be published shortly. A copy will be placed in the House Library.

A programme of work is in hand to review and improve the preliminary indicator set with a view to publishing a revised set in 1998. Expert groups will be set up, comprising people from within and outside Whitehall, to consider priority areas for improving the indicators package.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the Commission response of 4 December 1996 to the European Parliament's proposed amendments to the "Commission Proposals to the Council" (COM(95)647 final) on the review of the European Community programme of policy and action in relation to the environment and development, titled "Towards Sustainability" (COM(96)648 final). [12640]

Mr. Gummer: The Government see no particular difficulty with the proposed amendments. However, these have not been subjected to detailed discussion by the Council.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what initiatives his Department has (a) financially sponsored and (b) encouraged local authorities to take in the implementation of Agenda 21; and what resources his Department has committed in each year since 1992 to support Agenda 21. [12371]

Mr. Gummer: The Government are committed to sustainable development, and the principles of Agenda 21 are intrinsic in much of the spending and policies of my Department, most notably in areas of waste management and energy efficiency. Money available through the single regeneration budget and supplementary credit approval has often been used by local authorities to undertake initiatives in line with Agenda 21. The Government have consistently encouraged initiatives taken by local authorities to implement local Agenda 21. My Department's national level commitments to Agenda 21 can be found in the 1996 Environment White Paper, "This Common Inheritance UK Annual Report". Spending in particular areas is listed in my Department's annual report 1996. Copies of both of these are in the House Library.

Castle Cement, Clitheroe

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has received from Castle Cement in Clitheroe in respect of its plans to burn (a) shredded tyres and (b) waste products other than Cemfuel. [12469]

Mr. Clappison: None.

Organic Pollutants

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent United Nations Economic Commission for Europe discussions on limiting the use of persistent organic pollutants as they affect the United Kingdom. [12406]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The first formal negotiations on a United Nations Economic Commission for Europe agreement for reducing emissions of persistent organic pollutants took place last week in Geneva. They affirmed that the proposed protocol should be based on the sound scientific assessment of the environmental and health risks associated with the long-range air transport of these substances. The United Kingdom has been actively involved in developing this scientific underpinning over several years. Within the United Kingdom, the pollutants identified for inclusion in the protocol are already strictly controlled or banned.

Water Directives

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the timescale for the full implementation by the United Kingdom of the urban waste water treatment directive. [12489]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Member states are required to implement the urban waste water treatment directive on a phased timetable. The earlier deadlines are the end of 1998 for the provision of sewerage and tertiary treatment for sewage discharges to sensitive areas and for the cessation of disposal of sewage sludge at sea; and the end of 2000 for the provision of both sewerage and the relevant degree of treatment to larger sewage discharges. The final deadline is 31 December 2005 for the provision of both sewerage and the relevant degree of treatment to all other sewage discharges.

Plastics Recycling Scheme

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to encourage a national plastics recycling scheme. [12491]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Government strongly support the efforts of the plastics industry on recycling. A number of organisations have been set up to increase the amount of plastic waste recovered from a number of sectors. For example, a national industry organisation, Recoup, was set up in 1989. It has the support of over 80 companies, including major plastics producers, containers manufacturers, soft drinks and household product suppliers, retailers and recyclers. Recoup works closely with local authorities to develop plastics recycling facilities. It estimates that over the last year more than 110 million plastic bottles—5,500 tonnes—were recovered. The material was collected from over 165 local authorities, which now offer collection facilities for plastic bottles. Other useful work on recycling is being done by the save-a-cup scheme, the Farm Films Group, the Polystyrene Recycling Association, and by ICER (electronic equipment). We encourage all companies in the plastics industry to back such organisations.

The plastics industry has also set up its own materials organisation—Valuplast—to co-ordinate its activities in response to the obligations placed on the whole packaging chain as a result of the recovery and recycling targets in the EC packaging and packaging waste regulations.

Badgers (A30)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action is being taken to protect a badger sett at footpath 7, Langland lane, Fairmile, Devon from A30 construction work. [13219]

Mr. Clappison: There is no intention to disturb or remove any badger sett. However, it has been necessary to carry out work on a tree in the vicinity of a sett, in connection with the A30 construction work. Disturbance to the badger sett has been minimised by removing only parts of the tree.

Kent County Council

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information is available to his Department as to the amount of debt that Kent county council had outstanding in each of the financial years 1992–93 to 1996–97, inclusive. [13175]

Mr. Curry: The available information for Kent county council is as follows:

Outstanding debt at end of financial year

	£ million
1992–93	355.4
1993–94	394.1
1995–96	451.6

The figures include both long-term and short-term borrowing. Longer-term borrowing by authorities can be undertaken only to finance capital expenditure and is regulated by Government through the issue of credit approvals. The data for 1992–93 and 1993–94 are obtained from special surveys conducted by the Department of the Environment seeking information on the amount of outstanding longer-term debt and investment, and the later figures are estimates based on public works loan board data and transactions reported to the Department in the regular monthly and quarterly borrowing and lending inquiries.

Air Quality (Bexley)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received about air quality in the London borough of Bexley. [13157]

Mr. Clappison: The Department has received a response from Bexley council to the consultation on the draft national strategy for air quality, which the Government are preparing in accordance with the Environment Act 1995.

Radon

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue more invitations for free radon measurements to householders living in areas where there are high radon levels. [13439]

Mr. Clappison: Following two successful campaigns conducted last year, we intend to offer a further quarter of a million invitations to have a free radon measurement this year. Invitations will be sent to all homes in England where there is a greater than 5 per cent. chance of being above the Government's radon action level, and which have not already received an invitation. Maps have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses showing these areas.

The invitations will complete a two-year programme to ensure that all households in the most radon-affected parts of the country have received an invitation to have a free measurement. The results obtained will allow clearer identification of localised areas where radon is a particular problem. Future measurement programmes will concentrate on these within the areas with a greater than 5 per cent. chance of being above the action level.

Water and Sewerage Services

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the action he proposes to take to increase competition for water and sewerage services. [13440]

Mr. Gummer: In answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 1 April 1996, Official Report, column 12, I set out a number of proposals for extending competition in water and sewerage services in England and Wales. These would: introduce common carriage arrangements to allow companies to use an existing supplier's pipe network to provide individual customers with a choice of water supply; introduce similar provisions for sewerage services; extend the scope of inset arrangements, under which a new water or waste water undertaker can be appointed in respect of an area within an existing undertaker's area of appointment, to allow appointments to be for limited periods and in respect of co-located premises; remove restrictions on cross-border supply to enable water undertakers to supply water for non-domestic purposes to customers in another undertaker's area; and remove the water undertaker's monopoly on making connections to the water main.

I also announced the issue of a consultation paper in which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I sought views on these proposals.

Responses to the consultation paper were received from the water industry, commercial and industrial users, representative bodies, professional institutions and individual customers. They showed a broad measure of support for all our proposals and made a number of useful points about the way in which they could be put into operation. In the light of the positive response, it is our intention to proceed with these proposals with a view to bringing forward legislation in the next Parliament.

In developing this legislation we shall seek to provide a basis for competition both in waste water and clean water services, and to ensure that water quality continues to be safeguarded and that the charging regime continues to be fair and non discriminatory. We also intend to go further than our original proposals by following up suggestions made during consultation for extending the scope of common carriage and inset appointments to smaller users. We will look again to see whether a lower limit, perhaps in the 100 to 200 ML range, would be practicable and appropriate.

Meanwhile, we would urge users to take full advantage of those provisions for competition which already exist, in particular those which allow large users to seek water supplies from other sources and which allow flexibility in the provision of sewerage services.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Garel-Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has selected a preferred purchaser for the Building Research Establishment; and if he will make a statement. [13455]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Following our consideration of the two final offers for the Building Research Establishment, we have decided to select the BRE management bid team as the preferred purchaser. We were grateful for the work done by the Built Environment Research Foundation in preparing its bid, but have decided not to proceed with it further. We are now firmly on course to transfer BRE to the private sector by the end of February as planned.

The Government's objectives for the sale are: to secure the provision of high-quality, independent and impartial research and development and advice, at good value for money, that meets the requirements of Government and industry and is responsive to the commercial needs of industry; to transfer the establishment to the private sector by the end of February 1997; and to optimise the net proceeds to the taxpayer.

The BRE management team bid was the one which best demonstrated that it met all the sale objectives. Overall the management team bid offers the best value for money for the taxpayer.

One of the Government's objectives from the outset has been to privatise BRE in a way that would secure wide support from the industry and the research world. I believe that the Foundation for the Built Environment model has this wide support. I am pleased to say that the Construction Industry Council has indicated that it will support it, as have an impressive number of organisations from all sections of the industry, and the major university interests.

We have looked very carefully at the preferred purchaser's proposals for safeguarding impartiality and independence in the private sector. In our view, the management bid team has demonstrated that the structure of ownership it proposes for BRE within the Foundation for the Built Environment will protect the impartiality and independence for which BRE is renowned. We believe that the organisation will continue to be able to provide high-quality, independent and impartial research and advice under its new ownership.

Industry Environmental Compliance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the United Nations Environment Programme technical report "UNEP 36" on industry environmental compliance, in respect of its application to the United Kingdom. [12395]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 23 January 1997]: The report in question provides guidance primarily for countries that are in the process of setting up a system for environmental compliance and enforcement. The United Kingdom has a well-developed enforcement regime that, for major industrial processes, is now administered by the Environment Agency in England and Wales, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency in Scotland and the Environment and Heritage Service in Northern Ireland.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Police Forces (Government-sponsored Training)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the police forces that have received training as part of a scheme sponsored by Her Majesty's Government since 1988, detailing where and when the training took place and how much the training for each force cost; [11887]

(2) if he will list the foreign police forces trained by private companies under the scheme sponsored by Her Majesty's Government since 1988, indicating where and when the training took place, the name of the companies involved and the nature of the training provided; [11886]

(3) if he will list the police forces which, as part of a scheme sponsored by Her Majesty's Government, (a) received counter-terrorist or counter-insurgency training and (b) have been trained by the British Special Forces since 1988, in each case indicating where and when the training took place and how much the training of each force cost. [11888]

Mr. David Davis: Police and security forces receiving training sponsored by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing, and Overseas Development Administration assistance for police training, were listed in the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short) on 31 October 1996, Official Report, columns 218-19, and in the answers given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the hon. Member for Cardiff, Central (Mr. Jones) on 14 May 1966, Official Report, columns 386-87, and on 28 February 1996, Official Report, columns 546-47. Details of overseas police training sponsored by the Ministry of Defence were provided in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to the hon. Lady on 12 December 1996, Official Report, columns 343-44. Serving police officers from foreign forces have occasionally undertaken periods of academic study sponsored by Her Majesty's Government, but it would involve disproportionate cost to try to establish a record of this additional police study in the United Kingdom.

The training of police and security forces sponsored by Her Majesty's Government took place during the period 1988 to 1996 at the Bramshill police college, other training establishments in the United Kingdom and in the countries concerned.

The Overseas Development Administration employs some retired police officers, some of whom have established themselves as private companies, to provide consultancy advice and training. They have also employed the Royal Institute of Public Administration. Prior to 1996, there was no other Foreign and Commonwealth Office-sponsored training of police and security forces by private companies. In 1996, the FCO diplomatic wing sponsored a pilot project involving private sector training of police forces from Malaysia and Cyprus.

On the basis of the figures for financial years 1994 to 1996, we estimate that about 1,200 overseas police and security force personnel have received training sponsored by the FCO diplomatic wing. It would not be possible for the whole period, except at disproportionate cost, to separate the costs of this police training from the costs of the UK military training and assistance scheme as a whole. However, in 1995–96, the average cost of such training was £1,886 per person.

Hitherto, the nature and content of bilateral military and associated police training programmes have been regarded as confidential between Governments because it has been judged that their disclosure would risk damaging our international relations. This practice is now being reviewed against the background of the Government's commitment to openness. The House will be informed of the results of the review in due course.

Gold (Restitution)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the latest discussions by the member Governments of the Tripartite Commission for the Restitution of Monetary Gold regarding the residue of gold and its possible distribution to individuals. [12996]

Mr. David Davis: The Tripartite Commission for the Restitution of Monetary Gold last met in Brussels on 17 December. In the light of suggestions from Jewish organisations that part of the commission gold be made available to benefit individual victims of Nazism, the tripartite Governments have decided to continue the technical and administrative preparations for the final distribution of the residue of gold, but not actually to begin the distribution. One factor that the tripartite Governments will take into account when considering the final distribution of gold will be the outcome of research currently being undertaken by the US presidential task force on Nazi gold, and separately by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, into the origin of the commission gold pool.

British Residents Overseas

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens are currently resident in other European Union countries. [13165]

Dr. Liam Fox: According to our latest estimates, on 31 December 1995, there were 960,000 British citizens resident in other European Union countries.

TREASURY

Venture Capital Trusts

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue loss to the Exchequer in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 from tax reliefs on venture capital trusts. [12790]

Mr. Jack: Total tax relief for venture capital trusts is tentatively estimated to cost about £50 million for 1997–98. The cost for 1998–99 is not available, but would depend on future levels of take-up and rates of investment return.

Income Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) first year and (b) full year cost of raising the personal income tax allowances in 1997–98 by (i) £175, (ii) £190 and (iii) £200; and if he will estimate in each case the number of individuals who would cease to be liable to pay income tax as a consequence of such a change. [12747]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Available information is given in the table.

Increase in non-aged and aged personal tax allowances £	Full year cost at 1997–98 income levels[1] £ million	First year cost at 1997–98 income levels £ million	Number of taxpayers taken out of income tax (thousands)
175	1,050	790	400
190	1,150	850	440
200	1,200	900	470

[1] Based on the Budget forecast.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact on revenue of ending the tax reliefs on (a) new personal equity plans and (b) new tax-exempt special savings accounts in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [12796]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The reduction in the cost of tax relief from not permitting any further investment in personal equity plans is tentatively estimated at £40 million for 1997–98.

The estimated reduction in the cost of income tax relief from not allowing new tax-exempt special savings accounts is about £50 million for 1997–98. The estimated reduction in the cost of tax relief from not permitting any further investment in TESSAs is approximately £80 million for 1997–98.

These estimates do not allow for any behavioural consequences as a result of changes to these tax reliefs, and follow the conventional assumption that the current interest rates remain unchanged.

Estimates for later years are not available, but in each case the effect would build up over time.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the additional revenue which would be raised by the Exchequer in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 by introducing a new marginal tax rate of 50 per cent. on taxable incomes of £100,000 per annum and over; and what is his estimate of the number of individuals who would be affected by such a policy. [12746]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The estimated full year yield at 1997–98 income levels of introducing a new rate of 50 per cent. on taxable incomes above £100,000 is £1.4 billion. The yield includes the consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax after allowing for likely changes in the volume of disposals. It does not take account of any other behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of the new rate of tax. About 140,000 taxpayers would be affected.

The yield for future years would depend on levels of income, tax reliefs and allowances in those years.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the additional revenue which would be raised by the Exchequer in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000 by increasing the basic rate of tax by one penny in the pound. [12745]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The estimated full year yield would be about £1.7 billion at 1997–98 income levels. The yields for future years would depend on the levels of incomes, tax reliefs and allowances in those years.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional revenues which would be generated by a top rate of income tax of (a) 50 per cent. and (b) 60 per cent. on incomes over (i) £50,000, (ii) £60,000, (iii) £70,000, (iv) £100,000 and (v) £150,000. [12377]

Mr. Jack: Estimated full year yields at 1997–98 income levels are given in the table. The yields include the consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax after allowing for likely changes in the volume of disposals. They do not take account of any other behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such changes. It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the effect of introducing the higher tax rates for taxable incomes over £100,000.

Lower limit of taxable income £	Full year revenue yield at 1997–98 income levels Top rate
	50 per cent. £ billion	60 per cent. £ billion
50,000	2.7	5.4
60,000	2.3	4.5
70,000	2.0	3.9
100,000	1.4	2.7

Pensioners (Tax)

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of people aged 65 years or over who will (a) not pay any tax, (b) pay tax at 20 per cent. only, (c) pay tax at 23 per cent. and (d) pay tax at 40 per cent. in 1997–98. [12993]

Mr. Jack: Latest estimates for 1997–98 are given in the table. The estimates are based on information projected from the 1994–95 survey of personal incomes and population estimates from the Government Actuary's Department; they are therefore provisional.

Individuals aged 65 or over	Number (millions)	Percentage
Not liable to income tax	6.20	67
Lower rate	1.75	19
Basic rate	1.20	13
Higher rate	0.15	1
All	9.30	100

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of new claims for mortgage interest tax relief from first time claimants in the most recent year for which figures are available. [12793]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: About 10.5 million single people or married couples benefited from mortgage interest relief in 1995–96. An estimated 400,000 of the beneficiaries were first time buyers with new mortgages.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy in respect of future levels of mortgage interest tax relief at source over the next five financial years; and if he will make a statement. [12795]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his 1995 Budget speech, interest relief will remain unchanged for the lifetime of this Parliament. Beyond that, the level of mortgage interest relief is a matter to be considered each year in the Budget.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue which would be raised by the Exchequer in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 by ending capital gains tax reinvestment relief. [12744]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The cost of capital gains tax reinvestment relief is tentatively estimated to be £65 million for 1997–98. Costs for later years would depend on future levels of capital gains and qualifying investment. In practice the yield from withdrawing the relief may be significantly different to the existing cost due to changes in taxpayers' behaviour.

Environmental and Social Costs

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the development of a progress indicator to take account of the environmental and social costs of economic activity as an alternative to gross domestic product; and if he will make a statement on the desirability of developing such an alternative measure. [10539]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The Office for National Statistics has examined the genuine progress indicator, but does not regard it as a good indicator; it sees more value in the preparation of a broad range of indicators such as those in the Department of Environment's "Indicators of Sustainable Development for the United Kingdom", and environmental accounts of which a pilot was published in Economic Trends in August 1996.

National Lottery

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumptions he has incorporated about capital expenditure from the proceeds of the national lottery for each of the years covered in table 5.4 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" 1997–98. [10852]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 16 January 1997]: The amounts of capital expenditure financed from proceeds of the national lottery included in table 5.4 of the FSBR were:

National lottery capital expenditure

	£ million
1995–96[1]	130
1996–97	480
1997–98	960
1998–99	1,200
1999–90	1,440

[1] Outturn. These figures are for NLDF payments and exclude additional capital spending from the partnership contribution to lottery schemes.

Bank of England

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 606, what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of independence for the Bank of England. [13188]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Chancellor carefully considered the case for granting greater autonomy to the Bank of England at the time of the Treasury and Civil Service Committee's report on the role of the Bank of England. The Government, in response to that report, said that we believed the current institutional arrangements for monetary policy—including publishing the minutes of the Chancellor's monthly meetings with the Governor—were fully capable of meeting the targets that the Government have set for inflation. We also said that we remained concerned about the questions of accountability to Parliament, and to the public, that a move towards greater autonomy for the bank would raise.

Inflation

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the consequences for the United Kingdom's future rate of inflation of the acceleration in the monetary—M4—growth between 1995 and 1996. [12926]

Mrs. Angela Knight: M4 is one of many indicators that the Chancellor considers when making his assessment of inflation prospects. Underlying inflation is currently just over 3 per cent. and is forecast in the Financial Statement and Budget Report, which is published with the Budget, to fall to 2½ per cent. by the second quarter of 1997.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions since 1978 (a) British, (b) German and (c) French GDP has dropped by more than the limits prescribed by the stability pact agreed at the Dublin summit in any one year. [12474]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The principles for the stability and growth pact agreed at the Dublin summit are intended to ensure that the Council of Ministers will assess deficits over the 3 per cent. reference value of participants in the single currency on a case by case basis. In the procedure, the Commission would as a rule consider an excess over the reference value to be exceptional only if there is an annual fall of real GDP of at least 2 per cent. The number of occasions when GDP has fallen by 2 per cent. or more since 1978 are (a) two (b) nil and (c) nil respectively.

The Council's assessment, however, will also take into account observations by a member state showing that an annual fall of less than 2 per cent. is nevertheless exceptional. The proposed European Council resolution contains an undertaking by the member states, in evaluating whether the economic downturn is severe, as a rule to take as a reference point an annual fall in real GDP of at least 0.75 per cent. The number of occasions when GDP has fallen by 0.75 per cent. or more since 1978 are (a) three (b) two and (c) one respectively.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the percentage of (a) workless non-pensioner households and (b) workless households with children together with the employment rate for (i) each European Union state and (ii) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country for each year for which the figures are available since 1992; [10932]

(2) what are the most recent available percentage figures for (a) workless non-pensioner households, (b) workless households with children and (c) the unemployment rate for (i) each European Union state and (ii) each OECD country; and what are those figures for each year for which they are available since 1992. [11629]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Hain, dated 28 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent questions (10932 and 11629) on the employment rates and the percentage of workless households in European Union and OECD countries.

Information about employment and population for the European Union countries is published in Table 18 and Table 10 of Eurostat's Labour Force Survey Results for each year between 1992 and 1995.

Information about employment and population for the OCED countries is published in OECD's annual Labour Force Statistics 1974–1994 and in Quarterly Labour Force Statistics; Number 4

The available information for the United Kingdom about the percentage of non-pensioner household with no one in employment and non-pensioner households with children with no one in employment is shown in the attached table. This information is not available for the other countries requested.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the percentage change in employment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (a) each European Union state and (b) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; [10933]

(2) if he will list, as percentages, (a) the level and (b) the change in youth employment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (i) each European Union state and (ii) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; [10934]

(3) if he will list, as percentages, (a) the level and (b) the change in youth unemployment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (i) each European Union state and (ii) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; [10935]

(4) if he will list, as percentages, (a) the level and (b) the change in those unemployed for more than a year between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (i) each European Union state and (ii) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; [10936]

(5) if he will list, as percentages, (a) the level and (b) the change in part-time employment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (i) each European Union state and (ii) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; [10937]

(6) if he will list, as percentages, (a) the level and (b) the change in full-time employment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (i) each European Union state and (ii) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; [10938]

(7) what was the percentage change in employment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (a) each European Union state and (b) each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; [11630]

(8) what were the percentage figures for (a) the level and (b) the change in (i) youth employment and (ii) youth unemployment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available in (1) each European Union state and (2) each OECD country; [11631]

(9) what were (a) the percentage figures for those unemployed for more than a year and (b) the percentage change in these figures between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (i) each European Union state an (ii) each OECD country; [11632]

(10) what were the percentage figures for (a) the level and (b) the change in (i) part-time employment and (ii) full-time employment between 1992 and the latest year for which figures are available for (1) each European Union state and (2) each OECD country. [11633]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Hain, dated 28 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent questions (10933, 10934, 10935, 10936, 10937, 10938, 11630, 11631, 11632 and 11633) on full-time employment, part time-employment, youth employment, youth unemployment and long term unemployment in the European and OECD countries.

Employment information for the European Union (EU) countries is published in Eurostat's Labour Force Survey Results at 1992 and 1995. Information by age group is published in Table 18 and information by full-time and part-time status in Table 50.

Employment information for the OECD countries is published in OECD's Labour Force Statistics 1974–1994 and in Quarterly Labour Force Statistics; November 4 1996. However, these publications do not provide a breakdown by age group or by full-time and part-time status.

International Labour Organisation (ILO) unemployment levels and rates by age and duration in each EU country are published in the Eurostat Labour Force Survey Results publication.

For those OECD countries who are not members of the EU the available information is limited to unemployment rates analysed by age. These are published in the OECD's annual Labour Force Statistics 1974–1994. Because of minor technical differences in the detailed compilation of the figures, the statistics published by OECD may not exactly match those published by Eurostat. However, like Eurostat, the OECD follows the ILO guidelines on definitions.

Copies of these publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

D'Oyly Carte

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement about the future funding arrangements for the Gilbert and Sullivan D'Oyly Carte opera company. [13145]

Mr. Sproat: I am pleased to inform the House that the Arts Council of England announced on 23 January a significant new step in its relationship with the D'Oyly Carte company, by offering the company a grant of £100,000 immediately, and the opportunity to apply for further funds to mount a national tour. In making the announcement, the Arts Council drew attention to the strong case that had been made for the council to support a touring light opera company, and to the demand for it on the part of audiences throughout the country. I hope that both parties will now be able to build on this, to develop a productive long-term relationship.

Accounts of Exempted Charities

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage to which format the accounts of exempted charities are required to conform in order to comply with the requirements of section 47(2) of the Charities Act 1993. [12860]

Mr. Sproat: Section 46(1) of the Charities Act 1993 requires charity trustees of any exempt charities to keep proper books of account with respect to the charity and, if not required by or under the authority of any other Act, to prepare consecutive statements of account consisting of an income and expenditure account relating to a period of not more than 15 months and a balance sheet relating to the end of that period. The statement of recommended accounting practice accounting by charities, published by the Charity Commission, applies in relation to all charity accounts unless a more specific statement of recommended practice applies. Section 47(3)(d) of the Act provides that the statement of accounts of an exempt charity to be provided on request is the most recently audited, if the accounts are required to be audited, or otherwise the most recently prepared accounts.

National Lottery Outlets

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many representations she has received from independent newsagents concerning the distribution of national lottery outlets. [12367]

Mr. Sproat: The Department has received a total of 29 representations from independent newsagents concerning the distribution of national lottery outlets, including 19 accompanied by letters from hon. Members.

Digital Transmissions

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will meet the costs of self-help groups converting their analogue receivers to accept digital transmissions before the introduction of the new BBC digital service; and if she will make a statement. [12544]

Mr. Sproat: Under section 33 of the Broadcasting Act 1996, the Government will consider how long it would be appropriate for television broadcasting services to continue to be provided in analogue form after the new digital terrestrial television services begin to be broadcast. The conversion of analogue self-help installations to the digital format and the basis for that conversion are among the issues which will be considered during the course of that review.

National Lottery Charities Board

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what amount and what percentage of the total awarded by the National Lottery Charities Board since its inception has been allocated to organisations representing older people and pensioners; and if she will list the recipients and the amounts received. [12992]

Mr. Sproat: The National Lottery Charities Board has so far made 6,925 grants worth £478 million. Of these, 620, 9 per cent. of grants, worth £33.7 million, 7 per cent. of the money, have been to charities and voluntary organisations for projects working specifically with older people and pensioners. The list of awards has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Many other grants will benefit people of all ages, including older people and pensioners.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Sight and Sound

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she has received the report from the National Council for Vocational Qualifications into the alleged irregularities in the award of qualifications at Sight and Sound, south London; what further investigations are continuing; and if she will make a statement. [13054]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 27 January 1997]: As a police investigation is currently being undertaken in relation to alleged irregularities at Sight and Sound, it would be inappropriate to make a statement about any aspect of these allegations or NCVQ's or other inquiries.

Manufacturing Apprenticeships

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of apprenticeships in British manufacturing industry; and if she will make a statement. [12995]

Mr. Paice: In summer 1996, there were around 44,000 people doing apprenticeships in manufacturing industry in Great Britain, according to the labour force survey.

Further Education

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from further education colleges regarding the funding of the further education sector. [12945]

Mr. Paice: Twenty-one representations have been received between the announcement in the Budget on 26 November 1996 and 27 January 1997.

International Labour Organisation Conference

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the Government's objectives and priorities for the forthcoming ILO conference in Geneva. [12553]

Mr. Paice: The Government's objective will be to promote UK employment and labour market interests in all conference discussions, and particularly in the formulation of possible new international standards on contract work and on job creation in small and medium-sized enterprises.

EU Funding

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful attempts have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the last four years to obtain funds from (i) the EU's promotion of training and mobility of researchers, (ii) Youth for Europe, (iii) Leonardo da Vinci, (iv) Socrates, (v) NOW, (vi) Youthstart, (vii) Integra, (viii) Adapt and (ix) Horizon schemes; and what funds have been allocated to the United Kingdom under each of these schemes. [12339]

Mr. Paice: The information is not available in the exact form requested. The tables set out the information that is available for each scheme. However, full information on projects funded in individual member states by the framework programme, including the training and mobility of researchers programme, is held only by the Commission. Thus, information on the numbers of successful and unsuccessful applications and the precise funds allocated to each member state are not available.

The current programme "Youth for Europe III" started in 1995 and the following information is available. Information on the funding of the centralised part of the programme is available from the Commission. The decentralised part of YFE III is administered on a national basis.

Youth for Europe III

1995: 1.273 MECU for youth exchange activities; .158 MECU for youth worker training.
1996: 1.290 MECU for Youth Exchange activities; .174 MECU for youth worker training.

Figures for the Leonardo da Vinci programme are available from 1995, when the programme began, and are as follows:

Leonardo da Vinci

Combined totals	1,492	503	989	34	34,751,854

[1] The majority of funds are allocated on the basis of successful projects being approved. A small proportion of the funding is allocated as a block grant.

Figures for the SOCRATES programme are available from 1995, when the programme began, and are as follows:

SOCRATES

Programme funding	Total applications	Successful projects	[1]in £000
1995
Centralised	[2]134 projects	68	2,962
Decentralised	[3]2,429 participants	1,795	1,741
Decentralised	[4]26,933 mobility grants	11,734	7,668

Decentralised	3,507 participants	2,824	[5]4,403
Decentralised	26,259 mobility grants	[6]—	7,447
			16,151

SOCRATES projects are transnational and can be divided into centralised and decentralised actions. For decentralised actions the UK is allocated a block sum by formula to distribute amongst UK participants. For centralised actions there is no separate UK allocation, rather the funding for the projects is shared between participant organisations. The figures shown for SOCRATES centralised actions represent the funding made available for transnational projects co-ordinated by UK organisations.

In 1995 the new EMPLOYMENT Community Initiative was launched with HORIZON, NOW strands and a new YOUTHSTART strand. For the first round (1995–1997) there were these three strands with the HORIZON, strand being further divided into Disadvantaged and Disability. For the second round (closing date for applications 11 April 1997) the HORIZON Disadvantage strand has been replaced by INTEGRA.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful attempts have been made by his Department in the last four years to obtain funds from the European social fund; and what funds have already been allocated to the United Kingdom under this fund. [12418]

Mr. Paice: The Department obtains funds from the European social fund within the overall allocations for the structural funds agreed in advance with the European Commission. In the years 1993 to 1996, 729 separate payments were received. There has been only one occasion in the last four years when we were not sent the money requested, due to a misunderstanding with the Commission: the sums have since been received.

The following table shows the sums allocated to UK for the European social fund over the last four years:

Technology College Initiative

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the criteria for bids for the technology college initiative. [13101]

Mrs. Gillan: The criteria for applications for technology college designation are set out in "Technology College Applications: A guide for Schools". A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools that were successful under the technology college initiative were members of the Technology Colleges Trust. [13095]

Mrs. Gillan: Of the 180 technology colleges so far operating or announced, 154 are members of the Technology Colleges Trust.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what feedback was given to those schools whose bids for the technology college initiative failed to be accepted. [13096]

Mrs. Gillan: Letters to schools unsuccessful in their applications for designation as technology colleges give a general indication of the reasons. Schools which contact the Department are given some further feedback but the Department does not enter into detailed discussion about applications.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the role of the Technology Colleges Trust in advising on submissions for the initiative. [13097]

Mrs. Gillan: Applicants for technology college designation may request advice from the Technology Colleges Trust about seeking sponsorship, drawing up development plans and preparing applications. This carries no commitment that a school's application will be approved or that it will be given preference over applications from other schools. Information about this is set out in the guidance document available to all schools from the Department.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many grant-maintained schools were awarded technology college initiative status. [13098]

Mrs. Gillan: Of the 180 technology colleges so far operating or announced, 92 are grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the geographical distribution of schools awarded the technology college initiative status. [13099]

Mrs. Gillan: An analysis by Government office area of the 180 technology colleges so far operating or announced is given in the table.

Government office region	Number of technology colleges
Eastern	18
East midlands	18
London	18
Merseyside and north-west	33
North-east	12
South-east	32
South-west	17
West midlands	19
Yorkshire and Humberside	13
Total	180

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools achieved technology college initiative status. [13100]

Mrs. Gillan: One hundred and fifty-one schools are now operating as technology colleges under the specialist schools programme. A further 29 technology colleges were announced on 3 January to operate from September 1997.

Grant-maintained Schools, Kent

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the proportion of state (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in Kent that are grant maintained. [13173]

Mr. Robin Squire: Five per cent. of primary schools and 54 per cent. of secondary schools in the Kent local education authority area are grant maintained.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the number of grant-maintained (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools for which the Kent local education authority no longer had financial responsibility as at the end of the 1992–93 financial year; and in respect of how many grant-maintained (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools Kent local education authority has ceased to have financial responsibility since the beginning of the 1993–94 financial year. [13172]

Mr. Squire: At 31 March 1993, there were three primary and 33 secondary grant-maintained schools in the Kent local education authority area. Since 1 April 1993, 25 primary and 35 secondary schools in Kent have become grant maintained. Since 1 April 1994, the recurrent budgets for these schools have been determined and paid by the Funding Agency for Schools, with their annual maintenance grants being recouped from the local education authority.

WALES

BSE

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish evidence that he has evaluated on whether BSE-infected meat is currently present within the human food chain in Wales. [12162]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government have put in place a number of measures to protect the public health from any risk from BSE. These include the destruction of all cattle suspected of suffering from BSE and the removal of specified bovine material to ensure that issues in which BSE infectivity might be found do not enter the human food chain. No infectivity has ever been found in meat.

Returns for BSE enforcement measures show continuing high compliance rates. Full details of all measures and compliance are published on a regular basis in the BSE enforcement bulletin. This is widely available and copies are placed in the Library.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his policy concerning BSE as it affects farms in Flintshire. [12287]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The control measures introduced by the Government have put the BSE epidemic into sharp decline. The number of new cases is currently at the lowest level for over six years.

We announced on 16 December 1996 that we would be moving ahead with the selective cull throughout the UK. We will have fulfilled all the Florence preconditions by implementing the cull; we shall be pressing for early progress on lifting the ban. We have listened carefully to the views of the farming industry on this matter, and have undertaken consultations both on the selective cull and on proposals for certified herds.

Deaf People (Funding)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to safeguard the existing funding of those voluntary organisations devoted to supporting deaf and profoundly deaf people in Flintshire and other locations in the former county of Clwyd. [12283]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The future funding of voluntary organisations which work in support of deaf people in Flintshire is a matter for the local authority and the health authority.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what amounts of cash he gave to the former county of Clwyd for the support of deaf and profoundly deaf people in the former county of Clwyd. [12284]

Mr. Evans: Between 1992–93 and 1996–97 grants of over £182,000 were allocated under the flexible forms of community care and support for people with disabilities grant schemes to projects supporting deaf people in the former county of Clwyd. This includes £30,000 allocated to the North Wales Deaf Association.

Dual Carriageway (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the mileage of dual carriageway in the county of Flintshire. [12280]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: According to the latest estimates provided by the local authority based on Ordnance Survey maps published in 1990 the length of dual carriageway in Flintshire, measured in one direction only, was 35.7 miles.

Assisted Places Scheme

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average parental income of children currently assisted under the assisted place scheme in Wales. [12607]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Details of gross parental incomes are not held centrally. However, currently 46 per cent. of parents of children participating under the scheme pay no fees at all because their relevant annual incomes are below the contribution threshold of £9,783.

Dental Services

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the (a) percentage and (b) number of dental practices in Wales which do not currently treat children under the national health service. [12481]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not held centrally.

Agri-environment Schemes

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was allocated to agri-environmental schemes in Wales other than Tir Cymen and environmentally sensitive areas in the last year for which figures are available; and how much has been allocated to farmers whose land is designated as severely disadvantaged within the less favoured area. [12645]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The provision in 1996–97 is:

Scheme	£000
Habitat scheme	610
Moorland scheme	1,280
Organic aid	382
Countryside access	2
Total	2,274

There is no separate allocation for less favoured areas. These schemes are voluntary and the amount paid in less favoured areas depends on the number of farmers from those areas who choose to enter the scheme.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total amount allocated by the Countryside Council for Wales for the Tir Cymen scheme during the current financial year; and how much has been allocated to farmers whose land is designated as severely disadvantaged within the less favoured area. [12646]

Mr. Evans: In 1996–97, £5.36 million has been allocated. A number of farmers whose land has been designated as severely disadvantaged within the less favoured areas have entered the scheme, although there is no separate record of how much has been allocated to them.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total sum allocated under the environmentally sensitive area scheme for the current financial year; and how much has been allocated to farmers whose land is designated as severely disadvantaged within the less favoured area. [12647]

Mr. Evans: The provision for 1996–97 is £6.76 million. There is no separate allocation for less favoured areas. The scheme is voluntary and the amount paid in less-favoured areas depends on the number of farmers from those areas who choose to enter the scheme.

Schools (Performance)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the costs of (a) publishing and (b) distributing the booklet, "School Performance Information 1996". [12648]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The costs of making these booklets ready for publication and for distributing them to parents, schools and others amounted to £113,815—just under 80p per copy.

Baglan Hospital

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when it is now proposed to approve the construction of the Baglan hospital; and if he will make a statement. [13035]

Mr. Hague: My Department informed the Glan-y-Mor NHS trust and Lechyd Morgannwg Health on 24 January 1997 that the outline business case has been approved. This enables the trust to seek funding under the private finance initiative.

Inward Investment (Aberavon)

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the new industries that have been brought to the Aberavon constituency from abroad in each of the past five years. [13036]

Mr. Hague: Since 1 January 1992, there have been 12 inward investment projects recorded for the Aberavon constituency promising 405 new jobs, 420 safeguarded jobs and capital investment of £75.6 million. One of these involved investment by an overseas company new to the area and that was recorded in 1993.

I am also pleased to announce today that Sumitomo will be setting up a new subsidiary in Baglan creating over 80 new jobs in a project of almost £3 million to manufacture flat flexible cables.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) when he (a) encouraged the Welsh ambulance policy advisory group to develop an expression of interest to reconfigure the Welsh ambulance services and (b) requested it to submit its proposals to him by June; [13197]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of correspondence between his Department and the Welsh ambulance policy advisory group concerning the group's outline expression of interest of 1996 and subsequent correspondence referring to future expressions of interest on ambulance service mergers. [13195]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Any proposals to reconfigure ambulance trusts are matters for the trusts themselves in conjunction with respective commissioners. They have not been asked for an expression of interest or set a timetable for its submission. I welcome the work being undertaken by the Welsh ambulance policy advisory group and I am aware that the group's objective is to submit joint proposals for the future provision of ambulances in Wales by June 1997. If the proposals include a possible reconfiguration of trusts, that would be subject to public consultation in the usual way.

Correspondence between the Department and NHS trusts is treated as management in confidence.

Local Government Finance

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce his decisions on the 1997–98 local government revenue settlement; and if he will make a statement. [13385]

Mr. Hague: I have given careful consideration to the representations that I have received on my provisional settlement proposals. I chaired a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance on 16 December, at which settlement matters were discussed; and my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State met representatives of police authorities in Wales on 10 January.

Having taken account of all the representations, I have decided to confirm total standard spending at £2,931.3 million and aggregate external finance at £2,577.9 million for 1997–98. The increase in TSS is £66.3 million or 2.3 per cent. on 1996–97. The increase in AEF is £64.1 million or 2.6 per cent. TSS includes £169.2 million for community care and £340.6 million to fund police services. I believe that my proposals provide local authorities with a fair level of funding in 1997–98 given the overall level of resources available and other spending needs.

AEF will comprise £1,732.7 million in revenue support grant; £584 million in distributable non-domestic rates; £244.5 million in specific grants, including police grant; £0.2 million for Dyfed-Powys police authority to damp the effect on council tax payers in its area of a reduction of over 2 per cent. in its police grant and SSA allocations resulting from methodology changes in the police funding formula; and £16.5 million to damp council tax increases to ensure that no council tax payer in Wales faces an increase in their bill of more than 15 per cent., excluding community council precepts and discretionary non-domestic rate relief. Actual council tax levels will depend on the budgetary decisions of individual local and police authorities.

The £16.5 million within AEF for council tax reduction is less than the provisional amount of £18.3 million announced to the House on 12 December. Changes to local authority standard spending assessments from provisional to final stage and adjustments to local authorities' base budgets resulting from consultation mean that less money is needed to maintain the 15 per cent. threshold. The balance of £1.8 million is added to revenue support grant.

I propose to lay the local government finance report (Wales) 1997–98 before the House on 3 February. At the same time, I shall be laying the special grant report (Wales) 1997 and the limitation of council tax (relevant notional amounts) report (Wales) 1997–98.

I am placing final settlement details for individual local authorities and police authorities in the Library. My decisions are subject to the approval of the House of Commons.

PRIME MINISTER

Arms Exports

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 25 November, Official Report, column 1, when he expects to be able to report to Parliament the results of his review of export licensing controls. [12628]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough (Mr. Sykes) on 22 January, Official Report, columns 600–01 on progress on the Government's response to the recommendations made by Sir Richard Scott following his inquiry into the export of arms and arms-related goods to Iraq.

European Council

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Prime Minister where the European Council at the end of the United Kingdom's presidency of the European Union in 1998 will be held. [13499]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to announce his decision on the location of the June 1998 European summit conference. [13058]

The Prime Minister: The European Council will be held in Cardiff.

Derek Bentley

Miss Lestor: To ask the Prime Minister what decision he has made in respect of a pardon for Derek Bentley. [13155]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary is considering carefully the latest request for a posthumous free pardon. He will make an announcement as soon as a decision has been reached.

Minister for Children

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if he will appoint a Minister for Children. [12721]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 27 January 1997]: I have no plans to do so. The Under-Secretary of State for Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns), has ministerial responsibility for children's services at the Department of Health. However, all Government Departments are aware of the need to consider children's interests and there are many mechanisms in place, both formal and informal, to ensure inter-departmental co-operation on children's issues. These arrangements work well, especially now they have been expanded by the forming of the children's services strategy group which brings together central and local government and the major voluntary organisations to look at key issues. This group is co-ordinated by the Department of Health.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 28 January. [11691]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

HEALTH

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the current arrangements for patients giving consent to dental work. [12380]

Mr. Malone: We have no plans to review these arrangements. The General Dental Council, in its guidance on professional conduct and fitness to practise, advises that dentists must obtain valid consent prior to treatment and have a duty to explain what treatment they propose to provide. The form that the patient signs before treatment and the general dental services regulations reflect this.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve NHS oversight of courses of treatment proposed by dentists. [12466]

Mr. Malone: The dental reference service provides independent professional dental patient examination and related services in response to requests from general dental practitioners, national health service managers, health departments and the Dental Practice Board, by which it is managed. Funding was provided in 1996–97 for the expansion of the DRS to 60 dentists.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the trends in the incidence of dental caries among school children (a) in Bolton and (b) nationally since 1979. [12470]

Mr. Malone: The British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry conducts annual surveys of dental caries prevalence in children within a four-yearly cycle comprising those aged five, 12 and 14, throughout Great Britain. BASCD began these surveys in 1985–86 in England and Wales. The tables show the mean number decayed, missing and filled in the deciduous teeth only of five-year-old children, in the permanent teeth only of 12 and 14-year-old children in Bolton, and the figures for five, 12 and 14-year-olds in England.

Mean number of decayed, missing and filled teeth of five-year-olds[1] in Bolton and England since 1987–98.

	Bolton	England

n/a = no data available.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the largest national health service payment to a single dentist in 1995–96 working alone. [13158]

Mr. Malone: The largest gross fee payment in 1995–96 to a national health service dentist who had no other dentists working for him was £546,000.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list his Department's grants awarded since 1986 to the British Fluoridation Society indicating the purpose of each grant. [12633]

Mr. Malone: The British Fluoridation Society is an organisation of charitable status which exists to promote the artificial fluoridation of water and has assisted the Department in its objective of improving the oral health of the population. The table gives details of grants to the British Fluoridation Society by the Department of Health since 1986.

Department of Health grants to the British Fluoridation Society for the period from 1986 to 1996

Year	£
1996–97	[1]17,609
1995–96	[1]74,000
1994–95	63,000

1989–90	31,000
1988–89	30,000
1987–88	20,000
1986–87	20,000
1985–86	30,000

[1] Additional funding made available to finance individual projects.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the scientific work published since 1990 upon which the Government's advisers have based their recommendations to fluoridate water. [12440]

Mr. Malone: It is not possible to provide a full list of scientific publications used in support of the Government's policy of water fluoridation, given that the policy is based on advice obtained from a variety of sources, some external to the Department of Health, each with its own area of expertise and source material on fluoridation.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on departmental staff secondments to the British Fluoridation Society since 1986. [12634]

Mr. Malone: No departmental staff have been seconded to the British Fluoridation Society.

Eye Tests

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 3 December, Official Report, column 640, if he will separately identify the number of NHS eye tests carried out on people aged over 65 years in each year since 1989. [12560]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is as follows:

The estimated number of national health service sight tests received by people aged over 65 years in Great Britain.

1993–94: 1.428 million

1994–95: 1.773 million

1995–96: 1.711 million

Information on the age of people who received NHS eye tests between 1989 and 1992 is not available.

Mental Health Services

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what means the NHS executive monitors the implementation of the care programme approach for those patients discharged from psychiatric hospitals in under one week. [12604]

Mr. Burns: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 11 December 1996, Official Report, column 227.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide additional funding to the NHS for hospital care and aftercare for mentally disordered prisoners. [12603]

Mr. Burns: We have provided an additional £15 million for health authorities for 1997–98 for the care of mentally disordered offenders. Health authorities will be expected to provide support on the basis of £1 for every £2 of central funding, making £22.5 million in total. In addition, an extra £5 million has been allocated to health authorities for the current financial year for acute mental illness and this will include care for mentally disordered offenders.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many extra-contractual referrals of mentally ill patients to private hospitals (a) for England and (b) by region there were in each year since 1986. [12601]

Mr. Burns: This information is not available centrally.

Hospital Long-stay Beds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of long-term continuing care beds per health authority in the Northern and Yorkshire region separately identifying long-stay (a) geriatric and (b) medical beds. [12479]

Mr. Horam: Information is not available centrally in the form requested. The information that is available centrally is contained in "Bed availability in England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Breast Cancer Screening

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy towards the availability of mammograms for persons aged 50 years and over within the national health service; and if he will make a statement. [12558]

Mr. Horam: The national health service breast screening programme invites women aged 50 to 64 years for breast screening by mammography once every three years. Women aged 65 and over may continue to be screened every three years on request. In 1994–95—the latest available figures—more than 1 million women in England aged 50 and over were screened by the programme with over 5,000 cases of cancer detected.

We have no plans to extend the programme to include men, in whom there are a very small number of cases of breast cancer—under 200 per year.

Symptomatic women of any age can request a mammogram at any time, in discussion with their general practitioner.

Paediatric Intensive Care

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatric intensive care beds are currently available in the Northern and Yorkshire region; and how many there were in 1992. [12946]

Mr. Horam: Information on the availability of paediatric intensive care beds is being collected routinely for the first time in 1996–97. Such data are not available for 1992. A recent special bed survey identified 17 general and 14 specialist paediatric intensive care beds in the Northern and Yorkshire region. This includes three additional general paediatric intensive care beds opened this winter.

Doctors

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) career grade doctors in hospital service and (b) general practitioner principals there were in each year since 1988. [13215]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is provided in the following tables:

Hospital career grades staff 1988 to 1995 in England as at 30 September each year

Whole-time equivalent

	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995

Note:

An unrestricted principal is a practitioner who provides the full range of general medical services and whose list is not limited to any particular group of persons. The figures provided for unrestricted principals are not whole time equivalents and include part-timers, returners and salaried partners.

Medical Services (Commercial Organisations)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many commercial organisations have expressed an interest in involvement in the provision of general medical services under the proposals of the Primary Care Bill. [13214]

Mr. Malone: The Department has received one informal expression of interest from a commercial organisation.

Breast Implants

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what clinical trials he (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on silicone gel-filled breast implants, prior to their being made available on the national health service. [13080]

Mr. Horam: No clinical trials on silicone gel-filled breast implants were commissioned or evaluated by the Department of Health prior to their being made available to the national health service.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many British women have received breast implants filled with silicone gel (a) in private practices and (b) on the national health service; [13075]

(2) how many breast implants filled with silicone gel have been implanted since their introduction to Britain (a) in private practices and (b) on the national health service. [13074]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department made of the decision by the United States Food and Drug Administration in April 1992 to restrict the use of breast implants filled with silicone gel. [13073]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health made no assessment of the decision by the United States Food and Drug Administration, but independently set up an expert advisory group in 1992 to examine all evidence relating to breast implants and connective tissue disease. The group concluded that, on the basis of all data available at that time, there was no evidence of an increased incidence of connective tissue disease associated with silicone gel breast implants. It therefore saw no reason to alter current practice or policy in the UK, and endorses these conclusions following an updated review of all data available in 1994.

Silicone Poisoning

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many British women have been diagnosed with silicone poisoning in each of the last four years. [13072]

Mr. Horam: No figures are held on women diagnosed with silicone poisoning since no distinct clinical disorder characterised by a particular profile of symptoms and linked to silicone exposure has been identified by relevant specialists in the United Kingdom.

Human Prostheses

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) legislative measures and (b) guidance govern the safe use of human prostheses. [13071]

Mr. Horam: Human prostheses come within the scope of the Medical Devices Regulations (SI 1994 No. 3017) which came into force on 1 January 1995, with a transition period which runs until June 1998. No additional guidance has been issued on the safe use of the products.

Alpha-l-antitrypsin Deficiency

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the national distribution of sufferers of the disease alpha-l-antitrypsin deficiency; and what assessment he has made of the pattern of distribution; [13079]

(2) what estimate he has made of the average lifespan of sufferers of the disease alpha-1-antitrypsin deficiency; and how this relates to the average lifespan of non-sufferers; [13078]

(3) how many consultants in Britain are specialists in the disease alpha-l-antitrypsin deficiency; [13077]

(4) how many British people suffer from the disease alpha-l-antitrypsin deficiency. [13076]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not collected centrally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Companies House

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what is his policy in respect of consultation with Companies House unions; [12933]

(2) if he will list the locations, time scales and cost of establishment of regional satellite offices for Companies House; [12931]

(3) if he will list in respect of the projects which are being undertaken in Companies House, Edinburgh, in relation to the five-year development plan, the (a) name of the project, (b) cost, (c) time limits, (d) terms of reference, (e) number of staff involved and (f) consultants involved; [12939]

(4) what is the number of full-term, agency, fixed-term and casual staff employed at Companies House, Edinburgh; and if he will make a statement on future staffing levels under the agency's five-year development plan; [12930]

(5) if he will make it his policy that there will be no (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory redundancies in the Edinburgh office as a result of the proposed Companies House five-year development plan; [12923]

(6) what is the estimated cost of the new technology with specific reference to electronic filing and image database to be employed at Companies House, Edinburgh, Cardiff and London; and what estimate he has made of the number of staff affected at these localities. [12932]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am asking the chief executive of Companies House to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Nigel Griffiths, dated 28 January 1997:

You recently tabled a number of questions to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the future of Companies House Executive Agency, particularly as it relates to our Edinburgh Office. I have been asked to reply to you direct. Before I address your specific questions, it might be helpful if I set out a number of points by way of background.

The Five Year Development Plan is an internal working document which we are using as a tool to help us plan our way ahead to a fully electronic era for Companies House. Although there has been extensive internal debate on the Plan, the document is still in a draft form and has not been shown to Ministers or approved by them. The figures in the Plan relating to IT projects, staffing levels, timing and expenditure are all indicative only.

We have invested a considerable amount of time involving staff in discussions about the Plan, giving them opportunity to air views, ask questions and become involved in taking the Plan forward. Trade union representatives have been involved in discussions from an early stage.

I will turn now to the particular questions which you raise:

PQ 96/960: Companies House's employees and the unions which represent them have been briefed on proposed developments and consultation on relevant areas has been initiated. Companies House management expect to continue the communication and consultation process.

PQ 96/961: In addition to Cardiff, Edinburgh and London offices: Companies House operates what it terms regional satellite offices in Manchester. Leeds and Birmingham. An outlet is also maintained on behalf of Companies House in Glasgow. There is no present intention to expand their number. No firm plans have been made for their future. Employees in the four locations together amount to under ten and establishment costs are correspondingly small.

PQ 96/962: None of the projects identified in the Five Year Development Plan is specific to Companies House Edinburgh, although that location is affected by many of the planned projects for Companies House overall. In view of the status of the Development Plan, no worthwhile definition of individual projects can be given at this time.

PQ 96/963: At end-December 1996, Companies House Edinburgh employed 30 (full time equivalent) permanent staff and 8 (full time equivalent) on short term contracts. It is expected that future levels in Edinburgh will be lower than present numbers.

PQ 96/964 The Five Year Development Plan referred to is an internal working document intended to chart the way to achieving the strategic objectives of the Ministerially-approved "Strategy 2000" for Companies House. It is likely that their achievement will require voluntary redundancy. It is hoped that compulsory redundancy can be avoided although no commitments to that effect have been given.

PQ 96/965: It is anticipated that Companies House will expend around £10 million on new technology projects over the next four years. Electronic filing is likely to cost around £0.5 million. The image database embraces a number of projects, some of which have yet to be fully defined, so it is impossible to give an accurate estimate of cost at this time. The work of most of the 900 staff within the Agency will be affected to a greater or lesser degree at the transition is made to new technology.

If I can be of any further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the delay which has occurred in relation to the staff pay rise in the Insolvency Service; and if interest has been paid on the late pay. [12017]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have asked the chief executive of the Insolvency Service to reply.

Letter from Desmond Flynn to Mr. Nick Harvey, dated 28 January 1997:

You asked the President of the Board of Trade for a statement about the timing of the staff pay rise in The Insolvency Service and whether interest has been paid; and, separately, you have written to the Minister, John Taylor MP, about this. These are matters which fall within the operational responsibility of Peter Joyce as Chief Executive of The Insolvency Service and I have therefore been asked to reply in Mr Joyce's absence form the office.

Pay awards in the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and its Agencies are always put into effect as quickly as possible. The existing pay system incorporates a settlement date which is used for calculation purposes as soon as any award is finalised.

DTI pay administration staff and the Chessington Computer Centre implement pay awards individually once they have been initiated by Insolvency Service management. Within The Insolvency Service, we have recently experienced problems arising from a backlog of recruitment and promotion boards following decision on the Options exercise on contracting out certain areas of our work. The timetable for processing and paying awards depends on the negotiating timetable, the reporting cycle, and the need to adjust systems and to train staff to ensure accurate implementation of each pay settlement. In a performance-based system, the performance box marking and the negotiated settlement must both be known before action is taken on individual awards.

In 1996 DTI established a standard reporting cycle of April-March, but the settlement date for most staff remained at 1 April; in 1997 DTI plans to standardise the settlement date at 1 August. Under the new delegated arrangements on pay awards our intention will be to try and process staff reports, negotiate the collective awards and implement the individual awards nearer to the settlement date. Under the existing arrangements however calculating back to a settlement date has been unavoidable. Although it was not possible to predict exactly how long the whole process will take, DTI management has of course been aware of this position and took it into account in calculating and negotiating pay offers. There is no right to interest on pay increases in the pay system.

In the coming year, 1997/98 transitional provisions relating to the question of pay awards will be needed to move to common settlement date and because a new pay system is being introduced on 1 August. The new system is being developed to be simpler to administer and more stream-lined than the old one bringing closer together in time settlement reference dates and the finalisation of any award of a pay increase for individuals.

Airbus Project

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what launch aid he proposes to make available to British Aerospace plc for the Airbus C XX project. [12994]

Mr. Greg Knight: The Government will consider fully any application for launch aid. No such applications have been received from British Aerospace plc in respect of new Airbus projects.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to introduce national legislation designating Sunday as a day of rest following the Government's challenge to article 5 of the working time directive. [13208]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have no plans to do so.

The Court of Justice of the European Communities accepted our application to annul the second sentence of article 5 of the working time directive, which said that the minimum weekly rest period should in principle include Sunday.

Exports

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of exports from the Yorkshire and Humberside region for each of the past three years; and if he will make a statement. [12835]

Mr. Page: This information is not officially collated on a regional basis and is therefore unavailable.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set up an inquiry into the conduct of the liquidation of BCCI and the fees charged by the liquidators prior to the payment of the first dividend. [12938]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No. The fees payable to the UK joint liquidators are a matter for the liquidation committee of creditors.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will investigate the factors underlying the non-distribution of assets retained by the BCCI liquidators since 1992. [12929]

Mr. Taylor: I have discussed progress on the liquidation of BCCI with the UK joint liquidators and am satisfied that the delay in paying a first dividend was caused by the need to resolve litigation in the UK and other jurisdictions.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total amount of funds which have been recovered by the BCCI liquidators since 1992; and what amount of funds is now held by them. [12937]

Mr. Taylor: Total realisations by the UK liquidators in the period from their appointment as provisional liquidators to 15 January 1996 were US $961.3 million, with other receipts of US $215.3.

Funds in hand as at 20 January 1997 totalled £205.7 million and US $266.7 million.

A report by the liquidators covering the fifth year of the liquidation and made up to 15 January 1997 will be made in the near future.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will ask the liquidators to report progress to his Department in respect of their attempts to recover BCCI assets held by the United States Department of Justice; and what sums are being claimed; [12927]

(2) if he will make a statement on the agreement entered into by the BCCI liquidators with the United States Department of Justice in respect of recovery of BCCI assets; and if he will investigate the factors underlying the delay in recovering those assets. [12928]

Mr. Taylor: The UK liquidators, then the provisional liquidators, were not a party to the plea agreement with prosecuting and regulatory authorities in the United States under which all BCCI assets within US jurisdiction were forfeited to the US Department of Justice. Under the terms of the agreement, but subject to the exercise of the US Attorney-General's discretion, the liquidators estimate that between US $350 and US $750 may be received by them once all claims within the United States have been determined. To January 1996 they had received some US $244 million.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what will be the total amount distributed in the first dividend declared by the BCCI liquidators. [12936]

Mr. Taylor: The initial dividend payment by the principal estates was 24.5 per cent. and totalled US$1.35 billion.

Packet Radio

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances United Kingdom radio amateurs are permitted to (a) send and (b) receive E-mail letters through the USA via packet radio. [11294]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The use of E-mail via packet radio is not currently provided for under the amateur radio licence. The Radiocommunications Agency is reviewing the position, in consultation with the Radio Society of Great Britain.

Out-of-town Supermarkets

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to restrict the number of out-of-town supermarkets in rural areas. [12011]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

We have published revised versions of PPG13 (transport) and of PPG6 (town centres and retail developments), which encourage the location of town centre uses, including retailing in existing centres. Additionally Government have undertaken a wide variety of regeneration and redevelopment projects which will also encourage development in town centres, including the single regeneration budget and English Partnerships.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Special Schools

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the special schools in Northern Ireland indicating the number of pupils attending each and specifying those providing a full-time nurse; and if he will make a statement about the criteria for provision of full-time nurses. [11701]

Mr. Ancram: Available data, at 31 October 1995, are as follows. An asterisk indicates schools with a full-time nurse.

In addition there are three hospital schools in Altnagelvin, Londonderry (27), Belfast (130) and Lindsay, Newtownbreda (19).

The provision of nurses is a matter for the local health and social services board based on its assessment of need in individual cases.

Joyriding

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the number of people convicted of joyriding over the last five years, (b) the number of cars stolen, (c) the clear-up rate, (d) the range of sentences imposed and (e) the bail rules for this offence; and what assessment he has made of the value of custodial sentences in respect of this offence. [12175]

Sir John Wheeler: Information for 1991 to 1995 in relation to the offence of taking a vehicle without the owner's consent is given in the following tables.

In Northern Ireland, statutory criteria for the granting of bail apply only in relation to offences which are scheduled under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1996. Decisions on the granting of bail for the offence of taking a vehicle without the owner's consent are the responsibility of the court and are based on common law precedents.

The sentence imposed for taking a vehicle without the owner's consent is a matter for the discretion of the court, taking into account the circumstances of individual cases. Custodial sentences are imposed when the court is of the opinion that the serious nature of the case and the need to protect the public require such a sentence. The Government are currently conducting research into the effectiveness of different court disposals which will enable an assessment to be made of their value.

New House Completions (Belfast)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new house completions there have been in each of the last six years (a) in the Belfast city council area, (b) in the greater Belfast urban area excluding the city council area, (c) in east Belfast excluding south-east Belfast, within the city council area and (d) in the greater east Belfast excluding the city council part of east Belfast; and if he will set out the boundaries used for these statistics. [12177]

Mr. Moss: Information is not available in the exact form requested by the hon. Member. It may, however, be possible to provide available information in a form which is useful to the hon. Member and I will write to him accordingly.

Murders

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each year since 1968 the number of murders recorded in Northern Ireland which have been cleared up and how many remain under investigation; how many people have been convicted in connection with these murders; how many have been convicted of murder and how many convicted of a lesser offence; and how many convicted of murder have subsequently been released. [12338]

Sir John Wheeler: This information is not available in the form requested and to obtain it would incur disproportionate cost.

The Chief Constable's annual reports provide details of offences—including murder—the number cleared and persons proceeded against and convicted. The reports from 1970 are held in the House of Commons Library.

Power Supply (Newry and Mourne)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on each incident which resulted in a power supply failure, in the Newry and Mourne district in each of the past 10 years, indicating the length of time power was off, the estimated number of houses involved, the electoral wards affected and the nature of the fault. [11689]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 24 January 1997]: I am informed by Northern Ireland Electricity plc that the detailed information requested is not readily available. However NIE is required under regulation 35 of the Electricity Supply Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1991, which came into effect on 3 February 1992, to notify the Department of Economic Development of major failures of supply. The following failures in the Newry and Mourne district have been notified under regulation 35:

Date	Number of customers affected	Duration Hours	Duration Minutes	Change of failure
30 March 1993	5,300	2	50	Gale damage
10 June 1993	4,200	1	43	Conductor fault
12 September	3,900	1	55	Overhead line fault
16 October 1993	5,300	2	05	Third party damage to conductor
6 February 1994	4,355	1	27	Gale damage
17 August 1994	25,000	0	08	Inadvertent trip during protection testing
1 June 1995	25,900	3	10	Conductor fault
9 April 1996	11,000	0	20	Fault following malicious damage

I understand that NIE is currently engaged in a major long-term capital investment programme in the Newry and Mourne district with the aim of improving the security and quality of electricity supply in the area.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12706]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The information is not available in the specific form requested but papers, draft regulations and circulars issued by the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office in 1996 which could give rise to significant environmental effects are as follows:

(a) White papers: None

(b) Green papers: None

(c) Consultation papers:

Extradition

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make representations to the Irish Government to repeal Irish extradition legislation preventing outward extradition unless bilateral arrangements exist; and if he will make a statement. [12449]

Mr. Kirkhope: I have been asked to reply.

The provision in question relates to the extradition by Ireland of its own nationals. It is the policy of the United Kingdom not to refuse extradition on the ground of nationality, and it continues to urge other Governments to re-examine their policy and legislation if it prohibits the extradition of their own nationals. The 1996 European Union extradition convention requires of all member states that they examine their domestic legislation on the question of extradition of own nationals during the ratification process.

SCOTLAND

Food Safety

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many incidents of food poisoning have been investigated by food enforcement authorities in each year since 1993. [11327]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: This information is not held centrally. Since the beginning of 1996, the Scottish centre for infection and environmental health has collated and published data relating to outbreaks of infectious intestinal disease which includes outbreaks due to food poisoning although these are not shown separately.

The SCIEH weekly reports which contain information relating to the first three quarters are: 12 April 1996 (volume 30 No. 96/15), 26 July 1996 (volume 30 No. 96/30) and 4 October 1996 (volume 96/40).

Inward Investment (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each overseas company, by sector, which has located business in Glasgow in each of the last five years and the total number of jobs created in each category as a result. [11864]

Mr. Kynoch: All our dealings with inward investors are undertaken on a commercially confidential basis and it would not therefore be appropriate to publish details of individual projects except in cases where details of the project have been announced by the company itself.

The following table contains details of the inward investment projects attracted to Glasgow during the last five years where the company in question is overseas-owned and where the project has been the subject of a public announcement.

Date of announcement	Company	Ultimate ownership	Planned new jobs	Sector
November 1992	Depenova Development AB	Sweden	20	Healthcare
August 1994	Atlantic Information Systems	Iceland	25	Software
June 1995	MIC Textiles UK Ltd.	Turkey	30	Textiles
May 1996	Mabbett and Associates Inc	United States	12	Environmental services
December 1996	Polaroid (U)K Ltd.	United States	150	Shared service centre

The job figures are based on information provided by the companies concerned at the time of the investment decision and take no account of subsequent developments.

In addition, there were a further 14 projects by overseas-owned companies which were not publicly announced. These projects involved the planned creation of over 700 new jobs and the safeguarding of nearly 900 existing jobs.

There has of course also been a significant level of inward investment in Glasgow by companies based in other parts of the United Kingdom. TSB bank, BT and Abbey National, for example, have all announced the establishment of major new call centres in the city.

The figures for total inward investment in Glasgow—both by overseas-owned and UK-owned companies—show that, over the past five years, the city has attracted nearly 50 projects involving the planned creation or safeguarding of over 5,000 jobs.

Public Appointments

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1996, Official Report, column 281–84, what factors underlay the extension of the period of office of the Scottish Office appointees to each of the non-departmental public bodies listed. [12141]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is common practice for individuals to be offered re-appointment where they have achieved a satisfactory standard of performance and this was the case in each of the extensions concerned. The Commissioner for Public Appointments has confirmed this practice in the case of first re-appointments but has advised that second re-appointments should be exceptional and normally subject to a scrutiny process, including consideration of other candidates.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for the last two financial years and for the current financial year the names of public relations companies employed by Ayrshire and Arran health board and the cost of these contracts to the health board during these periods. [12294]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not collected centrally. This is a matter for Ayrshire and Arran health board.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the effect on spending on public relations by the Ayrshire and Arran health board of the appointment by the board of a communications manager. [12295]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Public Relations

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much (a) Dunbartonshire Enterprise and (b) Grampian Enterprise spent on contracts with public relations and marketing companies during the financial years (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1996–97 to date; and if he will indicate the companies involved; [12151]

(2) if he will make a statement on the repeated refusal by Grampian Enterprise and Dunbartonshire Enterprise to supply information requested by the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South in respect of their expenditure on public relations and marketing contracts during the last two years; and what assessment he has made of (i) the reasons the hon. Member is denied the information and (ii) the consistency of this refusal with the new procedures put in place by the enterprise network to promote greater openness in its operations. [12431]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 January 1997]: This is a matter for Dunbartonshire Enterprise and Grampian Enterprise Ltd. respectively. I understand that they have now written to the hon. Member.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the normal tendering arrangements operated by his Department in respect of its non-departmental public bodies were fully implemented in respect of the recent contract awarded by Scottish Enterprise to Beattie Media; in what circumstances his Department is able to dispense with these procedures; and if he will make a statement. [12152]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 January 1997]: The award of this contract complied with departmental requirements and I understand that it also complied with Scottish Enterprise's detailed internal guidance on tendering.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information the Scottish Office received about Scottish Enterprise's contract with Beattie Media during the negotiations and before the award of the contract; and which individual within Scottish Enterprise took the decision to award its recent public relations contract to Beattie Media. [12153]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 January 1977]: Scottish Enterprise is not required to advise the Department of such contracts. Details of the decision making process are a matter for Scottish Enterprise and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the recent award of a public relations contract by Scottish Enterprise to Beattie Media, indicating the value of the contract, the period over which it will operate and what services are covered by the contract. [12154]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 January 1997]: This is a matter for Scottish Enterprise and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member directly.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements for tendering for public relations contracts are stipulated by the Scottish Office in respect of Scottish Enterprise and other non-departmental public bodies. [12155]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 January 1997]: Scottish Enterprise and other non-departmental public bodies are expected to comply with the relevant provisions of Government accounting, which require that purchasing should be based on value for money and that goods and services should be acquired by competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary. These provisions make no distinction between contracts for public relations and for other purposes.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ask for a report from Scottish Enterprise in respect of its recent contract with Beattie Media to clarify whether the contract was awarded outside of normal tendering procedures operated by Scottish Enterprise. [12302]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 January 1997]: I have already been informed that the award of this contract complied with Scottish Enterprise's internal guidance on tendering.

Scottish Enterprise Contracts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions during the current and previous financial year Scottish Enterprise has awarded contracts inconsistent with tendering arrangements stipulated by his Department; and if he will list the companies involved in these contracts and the values of the contracts. [12157]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 January 1997]: Scottish Enterprise is expected to comply with all relevant aspects of Government accounting which emphasises the importance of value for money and requires that goods and services be acquired by competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary.

I am not aware of any contracts awarded which failed to comply with that requirement, but this is an area subject to scrutiny by Scottish Enterprise's auditors.

Forestry Commission Land

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what area of Forestry Commission (a) land and (b) woodland has been sold in (i) England, (ii) Scotland and (iii) Wales in each year since 1979; and what area he proposes should be available for future sale. [12485]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 24 January 1997]: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Gordon Cowie, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Dr. Gavin Strang, dated 28 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Scotland has asked me to reply to your question about Forestry Commission disposals in England, Scotland and Wales since 1979.

I enclose a list showing the areas of all land and forest land sold in each year from 1979 for the three countries.

As announced in the Government's expenditure plans 1996–97 to 1998–99, the Commission plans to sell 13,000 hectares of forest land in each of the next two years.

Business Rates

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the financial gain to small businesses of his change in policy in 1997–98 regarding business rates; and how much and what share of that benefit accrues to businesses in west Dunbartonshire. [12760]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Office estimates that the benefits to small businesses from the measures on business rates announced in the November 1996 budget total some £8 million in 1996–97. Information is not held centrally on the precise benefits to small businesses in west Dunbarton. The Scottish Office model of the effects of these measures indicate that small businesses in the former Dunbartonshire district will benefit by approximately £90,000 in 1997–98 and businesses in the former Clydebank district will benefit by approximately £40,000. Together these represent a 1.6 per cent. share of the total estimated benefits to small businesses in Scotland.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage and amount of local government income has been uncollected in each year since 1979; and if he will indicate whether rates, community charge or council tax applied in each year. [12764]

Mr. Kynoch: Information is not available centrally on the amount of uncollected domestic and non-domestic rates in the period before 1989–90. Table 1 gives the amount and percentage of community charge income unrecovered for each year between 1989–90 and 1992–93, and the amount and percentage of council tax income unrecovered for each year between 1993–94 and 1995–96.

Between 1989–90 and 1992–93 local government income was not affected by unrecovered non-domestic rate income as any shortfall in non-domestic rate income was made up through revenue support grant. From 1993–94 the operation of non-domestic rate pooling ensures that local authority income is not affected by any unrecovered amounts of non-domestic rates.

Table 2 shows for each year from 1979–80 to 1988–89 the reduction to gross rate income recorded in authorities' accounts arising from rates written off as irrecoverable, the net cost of collection and the repayment of rates paid in error. This is not directly comparable to the figures given in table 1, particularly as it relates to amounts written off rather than amounts uncollected and covers both domestic and non-domestic rates.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the resource planning assumption on capital expenditure advised to West Dunbartonshire council in September 1994; what is the gross capital allocation to west Dunbartonshire for 1997–98; and what factors underlie the differences between the two sums. [12766]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: No resource planning assumptions for housing capital expenditure were issued to West Dunbartonshire council in September 1994; nor has the council received a gross capital allocation for 1997–98.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of West Dunbartonshire council's budget for 1996–97 was met by Scottish Office grant and business rates; and how much cash, in real and constant price terms, was allocated by him to west Dunbartonshire for (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [12759]

Mr. Kynoch: Around 83 per cent. of west Dunbartonshire council's planned level of revenue expenditure in the current year is being supported by a combination of (a) basic aggregate external finance—AEF—(b) additional AEF from the self-financed mismatch scheme, (c) supplementary mismatch scheme grant and (d) district equalisation scheme grant.

The following table shows the level of support to the council from these four sources for 1996–97 and 1997–98 in both cash and real terms.

Year	Cash £ million	Real terms £ million (1997–98 Prices)
1996–97
(a) Basic AEF[1]	111.3	113.5
(b) Additional AEF from self-financed mismatch scheme	2.4	2.4
(c) Supplementary mismatch scheme	1.2	1.2
(d) District equalisation scheme	0.3	0.3
1997–98
(a) Basic AEF[1]	109.2	109.2
(b) Additional AEF from self-financed mismatch scheme	1.9	1.9
(c) Supplementary mismatch scheme	0.9	0.9
(d) District equalisation scheme	0.15	0.15

[1] Adjusted to take account of phasing-out of local government re-organisation costs and the introduction of nursery vouchers.

Both the self-financed mismatch scheme which COSLA proposed and the supplementary mismatch scheme which is funded by the Exchequer were introduced on a transitional basis in order to give the councils concerned time to bring their expenditure levels more closely in line with their levels of Government support. In 1997–98, the councils will receive 50 per cent. of the assistance which they are receiving from these two schemes in the current year. The district equalisation scheme is being phased-out on the same basis.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage share of the total Scottish Office grant was allocated to each council in Scotland in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [12761]

Mr. Kynoch: The percentage share of total Government support, comprising aggregate external finance, supplementary mismatch scheme grant and district equalisation grant, allocated to each council in Scotland in 1996–97 and 1997–98 is shown in the table.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the expenditure by councils in Scotland, in (a) real and (b) constant price terms, in each year since 1979 on recovery of local government rates, community charge or council tax through sheriff officers; and if he will indicate for each of those years the amount recovered by sheriff officers. [12765]

Mr. Kynoch: My Department obtains information from local authorities about their total expenditure on collection of local taxation. However, data are not held centrally about either (a) expenditure on collection through sheriff officers or (b) amounts recovered by sheriff officers.

Capping Limits

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will exclude expenditure on redundancy payments from capping limits. [12758]

Mr. Kynoch: At its meeting with my right hon. Friend and me on 17 January, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities asked whether it would be possible for a council, if it so wished, to use part of its 1997–98 capital allocation to fund spend-to-save measures including redundancies. My right hon. Friend agreed to consider this proposal provided it was neutral in public expenditure terms. He will announce his conclusion as soon as possible.

Water Grants

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the amount given to each water and sewerage authority in Scotland in each financial year from 1990–91 to 1995–96, in respect of (a) first time water grant and (b) first time sewerage grant. [13059]

Mr. Kynoch: The information is not available in the form requested since no distinction was made between water and sewerage grants paid for first time provision and general improvement of the supply of the services. Details of the amounts paid to each water and sewerage authority for general improvement, from 1990–91 up to and including 1995–96, are set out in the tables.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how his Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans they have to extend their use in future within the Department. [12267]

Mr. Boswell: The Department's officials played an active part in the interdepartmental working group which prepared the UK indicators of sustainable development. We consider that the indicators are a valuable tool for helping us to monitor progress towards sustainable development.

However, most of the indicators relevant to agriculture track changes in the state of the environment. They do not identify precisely the extent and nature of agriculture's contribution.

In order to address these gaps in our knowledge, the Department announced plans to develop more detailed measures of agriculture's impact on the environment in "Rural England 1996"—jointly published by this Department and the Department of Environment in October 1996. The initial work will focus on indicators of pesticide use, emissions of ammonia and greenhouse gases, nutrient losses to water and soil quality. This work should help us to identify future priorities for action or new policy directions which will be recorded in future departmental annual reports.

Rabies

Sir David Steel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the review that he is conducting on rabies policy to be completed. [12588]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 15 January 1997, Official Report, column 288.

Cattle Breeds

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received and what research he has commissioned on the implications of a reduction in the genetic pool of cattle breeds in the United Kingdom. [12855]

Mrs. Browning: As I explained to the hon. Member on 21 March 1996, Official Report, column 314, the Ministry has commissioned work on the theory of genetics which included specific studies on the effects on the gene pool of selective breeding of farm animals. The research concluded that any potential negative effects can be avoided by targeted breeding.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud

13. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the use of traditional methods in combating benefit fraud. [11381]

Mr. Heald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State regularly receives correspondence on a range of fraud issues. The Government have made cracking down on fraud a top priority and this year fraud investigation and anti-fraud initiatives are forecast to result in the detection of about £1½ billion fraud.

Cold Weather Payments

14. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been paid out in cold weather payments since 1 December; and on which dates payments were triggered. [11382]

Mr. Roger Evans: Since 1 December 1996, payments amounting to over £43 million have been triggered on 16 days. The details of actual dates are available in the Library.

Pensioners

15. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect of the introduction of a higher guaranteed minimum income for pensioners on incentives to save. [11383]

Mr. Heald: Any means-tested income scheme for pensioners at a significantly higher level than income support would weaken any incentives for individuals to make their own provision for retirement and penalise those who do so.

Incapacity Benefit

16. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the effect on the Department's budget of the shift from invalidity benefit to incapacity benefit. [11384]

Mr. Burt: Incapacity benefit was introduced in April 1995 in order to simplify the structure of provision for the sick and disabled and improve the targeting of resources on the long term sick. It is estimated that the introduction of incapacity benefit will reduce expenditure in the long term by around £2.3 billion per year.

Child Support Agency

17. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to improve the administration of the Child Support Agency. [11385]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The Child Support Agency is performing well against its 1996–97 business plan. Further challenging targets seeking improvements in performance over and above that achieved this year will be set for 1997–98.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Child Support Agency has to restore the charging of fees for assessment of clients after 17 April. [13216]

Mr. Mitchell: There are no plans to restore fees from April 1997. Regulations came into force in January 1997 which suspended fees for both the assessment and collection services for a further two years until April 1999.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had on the involvement of the private sector in the running of the Child Support Agency; and which operations centre is under consideration for such involvement. [13031]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 27 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency and the private sector.

Consideration of the degree of scope for further private sector involvement in the provision of services is one of the components of the Agency's strategy to deliver efficiency savings in line with the Departmental Change Programme, but at the moment no decisions have been made and no individual business unit is under consideration.

The private sector has always been involved in providing facilities management and other support services within the Agency. It also works with the Agency on a partnership basis in providing our Audit and Computer services and, more recently, Royal Mail have been contracted to open the post for all Child Support Agency Centres. Where there are sound business reasons, we will take full advantage of the relevant experience and skills of the private sector to help us further improve our performance.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefits Spending

19. Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the increase in spending on social security benefits per head of population since 1979. [11387]

Mr. Burt: Average spending on social security benefits per head of population has increased by 79 per cent. since 1979.

Parent Plus Scheme

20. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to introduce the parent plus scheme; and if he will make a statement. [11388]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Parents plus will be piloted in 12 areas over a three-year period starting this April, offering advice and help to up to 100,000 lone parents on income support who wish to return to work.

This is further evidence of the Government's commitment to helping lone parents into employment—successive changes to the benefits systems have already helped over 200,000 lone parents to move off income support into work since 1992.

Income Support

21. Mr. Benton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current proportion of children living in households dependent on income support; and what it was in 1979. [11389]

Mr. Roger Evans: The latest estimate is that 25.3 per cent. of children in Great Britain live in families receiving income support. A direct comparison with 1979 is not possible.

Notes:

1. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.

2. Sample size 5 per cent.

3. Children are defined as aged 15 and under.

4. Percentages reflect the number of children in families receiving income support as a proportion of all children aged under 16 in Great Britain, based on ONS 1995 mid-term estimates of the population.

24. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the latest estimate of the numbers of senior citizens who may be eligible for income support and other allowances but who failed to claim these benefits. [11396]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) earlier today.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the level of waste in respect of income support payments. [11371]

Mr. Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer I gave the hon. Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Gapes) earlier today.

Christmas Bonus

22. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the amount of Christmas bonus paid to pensioners. [11390]

Mr. Heald: The Department has no plans to review the amount of the Christmas bonus. We have targeted help on those pensioners receiving income-related benefits, this extra help is now worth around £1.2 billion a year since 1988.

Means-tested Benefits

23. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently dependent on means-tested benefits; and what the figure was in 1979. [11393]

Mr. Roger Evans: The latest estimate is that 15.04 million people live in families receiving income support, family credit, disability working allowance, housing benefit or council tax benefit. It is not possible to make a direct comparison with the position in 1979.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

2. Beneficiaries are defined as claimants, their partners and dependants.

3. Means tested benefits are defined as income support, housing benefit, council tax community charge benefit, family credit, and disability working allowance.

4. Disability working allowance was introduced in April 1992.

5. Council tax benefit replaced community charge benefit from April 1993.

6. Housing Benefit and Council tax benefit figures exclude cases where there is no entitlement because of non-dependent deductions.

7. Council tax benefit cases do not include second adult rebate cases.

8. Income support replaced supplementary benefit in April 1988.

9. Family Credit replaced family income supplement in April 1988.

Benefit Recipients

25. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients there are of social security benefits; and how many of them are under 21 years of age. [11397]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Benefit[1]	All recipients	Recipients under age 21
Attendance allowance[2]	1,184,000	0
Child benefit[3]	6,980,700	83,500
Council tax benefit[4]	5,624,000	96,000

[12] Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand, and are based on a 5 per cent. sample at 9 May 1996.

Child Benefit

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on child benefit. [11692]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Child benefit contributes £560 a year to the cost of bringing up a child, and remains the cornerstone of our policies for family support. We believe that all families with dependent children should receive some help from either the tax or the benefit system, a principle recognised throughout Europe.

Proposals put forward by the Opposition would remove this help from more than a million families whose 16 to 18-year-olds choose to stay on in full-time education.

Disabled People (Council Tax)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultation (a) he has had and (b) proposes to have with the disablement income group in relation to the Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1997; and if he will make a statement on the responses he has received from organisations of and for disabled people to the regulations. [12723]

Mr. Roger Evans: The proposals for the Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1997 have been referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee for consultation. Comments have been invited from organisations and individuals who may have views on the proposals and there have been numerous responses including those from the disablement income group and other similar organisations. I shall be responding to the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee in a Command Paper which will be published in due course.

National Insurance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 1996, Official Report, columns 70-72, what was the total expenditure on national insurance benefits as a percentage of total income in each year from 1979–80 to 1995–96 at 1995–96 prices. [13020]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Year	National insurance benefit expenditure as a percentage of total income to the national insurance fund[1]
1979–80	92.1

Departmental Estate

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the preferred bidders in the Government's sale of the Department of Social Services's estate and indicate which have been fined for financial irregularities. [13094]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is as follows:

Mapeley Holdings Ltd.

Opus

Partnership Property Management Ltd. (PPM)

We are not aware that any of the above companies have been fined for financial irregularities.

War Pensions Agency

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to require claimants of the War Pensions Agency to pay for their medical and service records. [13029]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Mr. Kevin Caldwell, chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 27 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about charges to claimants of War Pension, for medical and service records.

The War Pensions Agency has no plans to charge claimants for the service and medical records it obtains when dealing with claims or appeals.

The Agency obtains service records from the Ministry of Defence, based on information supplied by the claimant. The Agency also obtains any medical evidence required by the Agency's medical advisors. This evidence may already exist: for example the claimant's hospital medical records are loaned to the Agency free of charge by National Health Service Hospitals under a long standing agreement.

In many cases, particular medical evidence is commissioned by the Agency. This may include medical examination of the claimant or a report from the claimant's General Practitioner. Payment for these services is made by the Agency.

Claimants may submit any evidence they consider will assist their claim. The Agency does not reimburse claimants for the cost of obtaining such evidence and this is made clear in claim forms.

I hope you find this information useful.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the impact of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 on the costs of social security payments to asylum seekers. [12116]

Mr. Roger Evans: It is not possible to measure the impact of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 on the costs of social security payments as no data are held on how many asylum seekers appealing against a refusal of refugee status were in receipt of benefit.

DEFENCE

Military Museums

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the regimental and corps museums which (a) have and (b) have not achieved registration from the Museums and Galleries Commission. [12874]

Low Flying

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations his Department has received against low-flying aircraft during each year since 1990. [12164]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer givne to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 3 February 1995, Official Report, column 885, for the years 1990 to 1994. The numbers of inquiries and complaints about military low flying received in 1995 and 1996 are as follows:

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will define the geographical area included in the central Wales tactical training area; what changes have been made to this definition since 1993; and if he will list the number of sorties carried out below 250 ft in this area in each year since 1992. [12166]

Mr. Soames: The central Wales tactical training area comprises the south-west proportion of Montgomery, the north-west corner of Brecon and Radnor, the north-east corner of Carmarthen and north Pembroke. The area, which is designated as low-flying area 7T, is shown on the map of the day low-flying system which is available in the Library of the House. There have been no changes to its boundaries since 1993. The numbers of operational low-flying movements authorised into the central Wales TTA in each year since 1992 are as follows:

1993: 192

1994: 89

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been paid to farmers in Wales for (a) loss of livestock, (b) abortions and (c) loss of production caused by low-flying aircraft in each year since 1992. [12165]

Mr. Soames: It is not possible to provide the detailed information required without disproportionate cost. However, the amounts paid to farmers in Wales in compensation for livestock and agricultural production losses due to military low flying since 1992 were:

Year	£
1992	35,811
1993	38,964
1994	65,723
1996	40,363

I regret to say that while preparing the answer to this question, it was discovered that the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 14 June 1995, Official Report, column 537, was wrongly calculated. The correct figure is £65,723.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will update his answer of 8 March 1995, Official Report, column 253, on the number of United States personnel stationed in the United Kingdom and the number of United Kingdom personnel stationed in the United States and their locations. [12662]

Mr. Arbuthnot: There are now no US employees stationed in the UK under the terms of the 1958 agreement. Four US employees are in the UK as part of the Polaris sales agreement, as amended for Trident; they are located as follows:

Barrow: 1

There are five British personnel stationed in the USA as part of the 1958 agreement and they are located in the British embassy, Washington DC; in addition, one atomic weapon establishment employee, on a short-term appointment, is stationed at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. A further 17 British personnel are in the USA as part of the Polaris sales agreement, as amended for Trident; their locations are as follows:

Crystal City, Arlington, Virginia: 13

Kings Bay, Georgia: 1

New London, Connecticut: 1

Laurel, Maryland: 1

Dahlgren, Virginia: 1

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will update his answer of 8 June 1995, Official Report, column 297, in respect of the list of projects on which his Department is working jointly with Los Alamos National Laboratory. [12667]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Details of areas of research involving the Los Alamos National Laboratory are as follows:

Warhead electrical components and technologies

Energetic materials

Test monitoring

Nuclear materials

Non-nuclear materials

Nuclear counter-terrorism technology

Facilities

Nuclear weapons engineering

Nuclear warhead physics

Computational technology

Laboratory plasma physics

Aircraft, missile and space system hardening

Manufacturing practices

Nuclear weapon accident response technology

Nuclear weapon code development

Nuclear weapon environment and damage effects

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 28 June 1995, Official Report, column 682, what estimate he has made of the total cost to public funds of the visits listed for each financial year. [12661]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Such information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Research and Development

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the planned expenditure by his Department, its agencies and public bodies on all forms of support for defence-related research and development in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [12777]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Information concerning expenditure on support for defence-related research and development is not held centrally and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost. However, under provisional plans, total departmental expenditure on actual research and development, for the years 1997–98 and 1998–99, is expected to be as follows:

	Expenditure (£ million)
Year	Research	Development	Total research and development
1997–98	549	1,687	2,236
1998–99	532	1,652	2,184

These data were published in the 1996 "Forward Look of Government-funded Science, Engineering and Technology", which also contains details of my Department's research and development activities.

Disciplinary Offences

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many disciplinary offences involving (a) men and (b) women of each service of HM forces were dealt with by (i) court martial and (ii) commanding officers in each of the last two years. [13163]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not available in the form requested. Central records of court martial convictions are maintained, but not of the individual offences brought before courts martial and acquittals. Information on the number of offences dealt with by commanding officers could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information on the number of men and women convicted by court martial, analysed by service and sex, in the past two years is available and is provided in the table.

Court martial convictions

Service	1995	1996
Navy
Total	78	51
Service men	77	48
Service women	1	3

[1] These figures cover the period 1 January 1996 to 1 September 1996.

Official Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each of the Ministers in his Department how many official ministerial visits they have undertaken since 1 January; and how many of these have been abroad. [9378]

Mr. Soames: All Ministers of this Department have made numerous visits to defence establishments and other organisations throughout the country; details of every ministerial visit are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, details of overseas visits are readily available, and the number for each Minister from 1 January 1996 to 13 December 1996 is:

Secretary of State: 31

Min (AF): 15

Min (DP): 7

USofs: 9

Note:

An overseas visit may include more than one country.

Smoking (Service Personnel)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the incidence of smoking-related diseases among service personnel and ex-service personnel; and how those figures compare with equivalent sections of the non-service population. [12408]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to discourage cigarette smoking among service personnel. [12410]

Mr. Soames: The Ministry of Defence does not encourage smoking within the armed forces; indeed the aim is to create a non-smoking working environment, insofar as this reflects the wished of staff. The dangers of smoking are emphasised in the services through lectures to recruits and trainee officers, and unit medical officers health education sessions. It is now a matter of policy for all medical officers to promote anti-smoking health advice, particularly at medical examination for new recruits and on an opportunistic basis for existing personnel. In addition, personnel have access to both service generated literature and Health Education Authority booklets on physical fitness in which the adverse effects of smoking are highlighted.

Duke of York (Helicopter Flight)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 452, on the flight path of the naval helicopter, if the head teacher and other senior staff at Cowarth Park school were informed beforehand of the visit of the naval helicopter. [12317]

Mr. Soames: Yes. The visit to Cowarth Park school had been prearranged with both school and local authority agencies, as is normal in such cases.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 452, on the flight plan of the helicopter, if there was a departure from the sortie plan. [12315]

Mr. Soames: No.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 452, on the cost of the training flight, what is the estimated cost of keeping the naval helicopter airborne for one hour. [12318]

Mr. Soames: The cost of operating a RN Lynx MK3 helicopter for one hour, excluding overhead costs, is approximately £1,300.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 452, on the flight plan of the helicopter, what type of helicopter was used in the training flight. [12314]

Mr. Soames: The helicopter used for this training flight was a RN Lynx MK 3.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 452 on the flight path of the naval helicopter, what was the training purpose of the visit to Cowarth Park school. [12316]

Mr. Soames: The overall purpose of the sortie was to provide navigation training.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times in 1996 a naval helicopter (a) on a training sortie and (b) for any other reason picked up HRH the Duke of York from his home in Sunningdale. [13226]

Mr. Soames: The only occasion in 1996 when HRH the Duke of York was picked up by a Royal Navy helicopter from his home in Sunningdale was on 13 November.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 452, what was the role of the Duke of York in the helicopter training sortie on 13 November 1996. [13...]

Mr. Soames: The training sortie on 13 November 1... included a prearranged visit to Cowarth Park school. The Duke of York was conveyed as a passenger during this leg of the overall sortie.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how his Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans they have to extend their use in future within the Department. [12270]

Mr. Soames: My Department conducts its activities in accordance with the Govnerment's overall policy on the environment, including sustainable development. Environmental considerations are taken into account in the development of defence policy, and where specific environmental targets or objectives, including sustainable development targets, impact on my department, appropriate action is taken by the responsible areas of management.

War Pensions

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of those documents available to service personnel in 1968 relating to possible entitlement to war pensions. [12561]

Mr. Soames: In 1968 responsibility for payment of war pensions rested with the then Minisury of Social Security. Copies of any documents which my Department made available to service personnel at that time relating to entitlement to war pension were not retained separately from our main departmental records and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Auxiliary Oilers

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the award of a contract for the design and construction of new auxiliary oilers for the Royal Navy. [12830]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I hope to be able to make an announcement in the near future.

Trafalgar Class Submarines

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to award a contract for the design and construction of the batch 2 Trafalgar class submarines; and if he will make a statement. [12831]

Mr. Arbuthnot: If we can achieve an acceptable price with GEC-Marconi, we hope to place the prime contract for three batch 2 Trafalgar class submarines around Easter.

Gulf War Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 630, on Gulf war syndrome, if he will list the other categories of illnesses suffered by Gulf veterans who have been examined as part of his Department's medical assessment programme. [13003]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the total running costs for the royal yacht Britannia for each year since 1990. [13218]

Mr. Soames: The total operating costs of HMY Britannia are:

Year	£ thousand[1]
1990–91	9,272
1991–92	12,458
1992–93	8,361
1993–94	8,397
1994–95	11,424
1995–96	8,423
1996–97[2]	7,575

[2] Estimate.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the duties performed by the royal yacht Britannia during Cowes week in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement; [13228]

(2) what was the total cost to public funds of the royal yacht Britannia's presence at Cowes week in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13227]

Mr. Soames: HMY Britannia's attendance at Cowes for the past five years has continued the traditional and popular royal patronage of this event. A list of individual duty engagements attended by and undertaken in Britannia is not held centrally, and information on the marginal costs of individual deployments could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) for the total annual running costs for Britannia since 1990.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total current annual cost for running the royal yacht Britannia; how many miles it has covered and at what average cost per nautical mile in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13232]

Mr. Soames: In the calender years 1992 to 1996, HMY Britannia covered the following distances:

Year	Distance (nautical miles)
1992	11,614
1993	36,062
1994	18,932
1996	16,716

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) for the total annual running costs for Britannia since 1990.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost to public funds of the (a) alcohol, (b) tobacco and (c) live entertainment provided on the royal yacht Britannia in each of the last five years. [13221]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, as a matter of policy, while the sponsors of commercial events are not charged for the use of HMY Britannia when she is used to promote British exports and attract inward investment, all additional costs incurred, over and above normal running costs, are paid for by the Government Departments and organisations concerned.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs will be created by the construction of the new royal yacht for citizens from (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the EU and (c) other countries broken down by type of employment; and if he will make a statement. [13225]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Government's decision to build a new royal yacht is expected to sustain 400 to 500 jobs in a British shipyard. No breakdown by type of employment is available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the total value of the royal yacht Britannia as (a) scrap, (b) sold with restrictions on its future use and (c) sold with no restrictions on its future use; and if he will make a statement. [13229]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made clear in his statement on 22 January that the Government do not believe that it is appropriate to sell Britannia to a new owner for private use when she is decommissioned in December. We are seeking proposals for a suitably prestigious future use which is in the public interest, within the United Kingdom and would guarantee that her excellent condition be maintained. Should this not prove possible we will then consider the option of scrapping Britannia. We do not at present have an estimate of her scrap value.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost per annum of cleaning the (a) outside and (b) inside of the royal yacht Britannia in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13231]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) dates of, (b) costs of and (c) guests at the last 10 receptions held on the royal yacht Britannia while docked; and if he will make a statement. [13224]

Mr. Soames: The dates, location, and nature of the last 10 events were:

Date	Location	Type of function	Number of guests	Host/sponsor
12 July	Amsterdam	Reception	150	HM Ambassador to The Hague; HM The Queen's Award Winners for Export Achievement
11 July	Amsterdam	Reception	150	HRH The Duke of Kent; British Invisibles

The costing information requested is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, as a matter of policy, while the sponsors of commercial events are not charged for the use of HMY Britannia when she is used to promote British exports and attract inward investment, all additional costs incurred, over and above normal running costs, are paid for by the government departments and organisations concerned.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries visited by the royal yacht Britannia in each of the last five years. [13222]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is:

Year	Countries visited
1992	Gibraltar, Italy, Malta, France, Scotland, Sweden.
1993	The Azores, Bermuda, USA, Mexico, Jamaica, Lesser Antilles, Windward Islands, Leeward Islands, Gibraltar, Malta, Greece, Turkey, Cyprus, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, UAE, India, Yemen.
1994	The Azores, Bermuda, USA, Belize, Grand Cayman, Jamaica, The Bahamas, France, Finland, Russia, Denmark.
1995	Grand Canary, Ivory Coast, Namibia, South Africa, Ghana, Senegal, Madeira, Germany, Greece, Balearic Islands, Portugal.
1996	The Azores, Bermuda, USA, Canada, The Netherlands.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many nights members of the royal family spent aboard the royal yacht Brittannia in each year since 1990. [13217]

Mr. Soames: Members of the royal family have spent the following numbers of nights aboard Brittannia since 1990.

Year	Number of nights
1990	30
1991	32
1992	24
1993	46
1994	24
1995	23
1996	23

Harrier Pilots (Redundancies)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 311, how many Royal Navy Harrier pilots have applied for premature voluntary release in each of the last 12 months; how many were turned down in each month; and for what reasons. [13161]

Mr. Soames: There have been no applications for premature voluntary release from Royal Navy Harrier pilots in the last 12 months.

Service Personnel

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) men and (b) women are currently serving in each service of Her Majesty's armed forces. [13164]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to tri-service personnel statistics 1 entitled "Strengths, Intake and Outflow of UK Regular Forces" dated 1 December 1996 a copy of which is held in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces (Employment Rights)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to implement section 31 of the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993. [13153]

Mr. Soames: The Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993 along with certain other employment legislation, has now been consolidated into the Employment Rights Act 1996 and the provisions of section 31 of TURERA are now contained in sections 191 and 192 of the 1996 Act. Section 26 of the Armed Forces Act 1996 amends the detailed provisions of section 192 of ERA. Once these amendments have been brought into force, an order will be made giving effect to section 192. Work is currently being undertaken on both these measures to ensure that section 192 is in force in the appropriate form as soon as practicable.

Private Lee Clegg

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects his Department to complete its consideration of whether to pay Lee Clegg's legal costs for his Court of Appeal hearing. [12859]

Mr. Soames: My Department will pay all reasonable legal costs incurred by Lee Clegg in respect of his forthcoming Court of Appeal hearing. Should there be any subsequent legal proceedings, we would wish to consider the matter in the light of the circumstances at the time.

Cadet Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the cost of (a) the combined cadet force in schools, (b) the sea cadet force, (c) the army cadet force and (d) the air training corps, in each of the last 10 years at current prices; how many children served in each of these forces in each of the last 10 years; what plans he has to increase the numbers serving in each of the forces; and what discussions he has had with representatives from the cadet forces about future changes to the cadet scheme. [13159]

Mr. Soames: The cost of the cadet forces to the Ministry of Defence for the last 10 years is as follows. The figures are in millions of pounds at current prices;

(a) Combined cadet force in schools

1987–88: n/a
1988–89: n/a

1992–93: 17.8
1993–94: 18.8
1994–95: 19.2
1995–96: 20.3

The number of young people in the cadet forces at the end of the last 10 financial years is as follows:

Combined cadet force

1987–88: 42,737
1988–89: 41,796
1989–90: 40,945
1990–91: 39,825
1991–92: 39,809
1992–93: 39,565
1993–94: 39,131
1994–95: 39,061
1995–96: 39,732

Sea cadet corps

1986–87: 16,663

1989–90: 35,285
1990–91: 34,201
1991–92: 35,020
1992–93: 35,381
1993–94: 35,474
1994–95: 35,343
1995–96: 34,528

Air Training Corps costs

During the preparation of this reply, it became clear that the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 14 May 1996, Official Report, column 400 and to the hon. Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans) on 27 November 1996 Official Report, column 237 were misleading. Both sets of figures provided relate to the cost of the Air Cadet Organisation, and therefore include the cost of the Air Training Corps plus the RAF element of the Combined Cadet Force. The relevant figures for the cost of the ATC, at in-year prices, should have been:

1991–92: £15.1 million
1992–93: £16.1 million
1993–94: £17.6 million
1994–95: £18.3 million
1995–96: £19.8 million

The Government wish strongly to encourage wider voluntary participation in all the cadet organisations. We are considering ways of increasing the scope of the cadet forces so as to allow even more young people the opportunity to enjoy the benefits of membership. Discussions with representatives of the cadet forces will take place as soon as it is appropriate.

Gulf War (Dosimeters)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British Army units were issued with personal dosimeters during the Gulf war; and if he will make a statement. [13160]

Mr. Soames: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Disciplinary Sentences (Salaries)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rules govern the payment of salary to (a) Royal Navy, (b) Army and (c) Royal Air Force personnel whilst they are awaiting confirmation of a disciplinary sentence. [13162]

Mr. Soames: The payment of salary in these circumstances is governed by (a) the Naval Discipline Act 1957 (b) the Army Act 1955 (c) the Air Force Act 1955, in conjunction with the single service pay regulations and Queen's Regulations. In the Royal Navy there is no confirmatory procedure: sentences, including those which affect pay, are effective immediately. At present, where individuals in Army and RAF cases are awaiting confirmation of a disciplinary sentence, all sentences, including those which affect pay, are also effective immediately. In the event of the sentences in Army and RAF cases being quashed, any sums deducted are of course, repaid. The Armed Forces Act 1996, however, provides for the abolition of confirmation procedures for the Army and RAF, thereby bringing arrangements in these services into line with those of the Royal Navy.

Food Supply Contract

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the competition for the food supply contract for the armed forces. [13384]

Mr. Soames: The supply of food for the armed forces was contracted to the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes—NAAFI—in 1994 for a three-year period. The contract expires on the 30 September 1997 and the Department have been running a competition for the follow-on contract. After careful evaluation of the tenders received, the decision has been taken to award the new contract to Booker Foodservice Group, which was judged to offer the best overall value for money for the Department. The contract will be for a five-year period commencing 1 October 1997 and is worth in excess of £400 million.

The recommendations of the recent NAO report on supply of food to the armed forces are fully reflected in this contract.

NAAFI will, of course, continue to provide its traditional range of retail and other services to the armed forces. My Department is in discussion with Booker Foodservice and NAAFI to ensure a smooth transition, and to assist NAAFI to achieve a successful outcome to the restructuring already under way following last year's independent review.

DEFENCE

Weather Centres

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the quality of the measuring equipment at (a) the Leeds, (b) the Nottingham and (c) the Waddington weather centres. [12962]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Meteorological Office. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Peter Hardy, dated 29 January 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the quality of measuring equipment at Meteorological Office weather centres, as this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office.

The observing equipment used at all three sites is SAMOS (Semi Automatic Meteorological Observing System), a system developed within the Meteorological Office.

Prior to acceptance for general operational use this system underwent detailed trials and evaluation to prove its viability as an accurate observing system suitable for replacing manual observations.

The sensors are calibrated in the Meteorological Office Quality Assurance laboratory before installation and as necessary in subsequent use. Leeds and Waddington are manned stations and staff there perform check climate measurements every morning against separate, calibrated sensors.

Nottingham (or more correctly Watnall) is co-located with a Meteorological Office maintenance centre. The duty technician on site checks the wet bulb reservoir and general condition/operation of the equipment, but routine caretaker observations are not carried out. Watnall and Waddington are well exposed sites giving a good representation of the local meteorological conditions. Leeds Weather Centre SAMOS is located on a roof top site within the city and may be subject to local effects particularly in respect of wind and temperature.

All data on receipt at HQ Bracknell go through automatic quality evaluation procedures.

I am confident that the equipment we use gives excellent results whilst making significant savings on the cost of a fully manned operation.

I hope this gives you the information you need.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from Lieutenant General Sir David Scott-Barrett on the subject of guardsmen Fisher and Wright; and when he plans to reply to those representations. [12185]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. Friend has received one representation direct from Lieutenant General Sir David Scott-Barrett. A representation from the hon. Member for Linlithgow is one of a number which have been received on behalf of a group of former Scots Guards, including Lieutenant General Sir David Scott-Barrett. Replies to these letters will be sent shortly, but will not address their substance, since that is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Cadet Force

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of his proposals to extend the cadet force in schools. [13181]

Mr. Soames: The Government are considering ways of increasing the scope of the cadet forces to allow even more young people the opportunity to enjoy the benefits of membership. Options and the costs associated with them are still under consideration.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Dentists (Prison Sentences)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many former dentists (a) have served and (b) are currently serving a prison sentence following conviction for assault arising from extensive and wholly unnecessary treatment. [12473]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking, how many former dentists (a) have served or (b) are currently serving a prison sentence following conviction for assault arising from extensive and wholly unnecessary treatment.

The information requested is not available centrally.

Prisons (Drugs Testing)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the total number of extra days which will be served in prison due to positive drug tests which have been taken since September 1996; [12383]

(2) if he will list the total number of extra days which will be served in prison due to positive drug tests which were taken before March 1996. [12382]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions concerning the total number of extra days to be served due to positive drug tests.

This information is given in the table.

Unsuspended additional days awarded for all drug test offences for the periods requested

Period of adjudication	Number of days	Number of punishments
Before March 1996	37,614	2,977
September–December 1996 (provisional)	56,205	3,738

(1) This table includes the offences of 'unauthorised use of a controlled drug', 'refusing to provide a drug test sample' and 'falsifying a drug test sample'.

(2) The 'unauthorised use of a controlled drug' offence is not exclusively provable by testing, as discovery of the physical act of drug use might also lead to the offence being proven. We are unable to distinguish between those offences discovered by testing and by other means.

(3) The offence of unauthorised use of a controlled drug was introduced in February 1995. Mandatory drug testing began in eight establishments at that time, and was extended to the rest of the estate between September 1995 and March 1996.

(4) Offences are grouped by the date of adjudication rather than the date of testing/discovery.

(5) A survey in 1994 indicated that about 17 per cent. of punishments of additional days are later remitted.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to commission independent research relating to the introduction of mandatory drugs testing in all prisons. [12210]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about plans to commission independent research relating to the introduction of mandatory drug testing in all prisons.

Two separate research projects have already been commissioned. The first project commenced in July 1996 and is being carried out by the University of Oxford Centre for Criminological Research. The study is qualitative in nature and focuses on five establishments and its purpose is to assess the impact of mandatory drug testing on the level and nature of drug misuse in prisons. The final report of this research is expected to be provided to the Prison Service before the end of April

The second project was commissioned in December 1996 and is being carried out by the National Addiction Centre. The study will use data available for all prisons and its purpose is to provide an evaluation of the impact of the mandatory drug testing programme on substance misuse in prison. The time frame for a report has yet to be finally determined.

The final report of this research is expected to be provided to the Prison Service before the end of April 1998.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if she will list (a) the number of prisoners (i) randomly tested for drugs, (ii) tested for drugs on suspicion, (iii) tested for drugs while on risk assessment, (iv) tested for drugs while on frequent testing, (v) tested for drugs on reception and (vi) voluntarily tested for drugs in each month prior to March 1996 and (b) the number of these prisoners who have tested positive for each type of drug for each of the above categories; [12420]

(2) if he will list the number of multiple drug positives from a single sample for the categories (a) randomly tested for drugs, (b) tested for drugs on suspicion, (c) tested for drugs while on risk assessment, (d) tested for drugs while on frequent testing, (e) tested for drugs on reception and (f) voluntarily tested for drugs since mandatory drug testing began; [12381]

(3) if she will list (a) the number of prisoners (i) randomly tested for drugs, (ii) tested for drugs on suspicion, (iii) tested for drugs while on risk assessment, (iv) tested for drugs while on frequent testing, (v) tested for drugs on reception and (vi) voluntarily tested for drugs in each month since September 1996 in each prison and (b) the number of these prisoners who have tested positive for each type of drug for each of the above categories. [12421]

Miss Widdecombe: I will write to the hon. Member.

Prisoners (Life Sentences)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of prisoners in England and Wales as of 1 January who were serving a life prison sentence for murder. [12171]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what was the number of prisoners in England and Wales as of 1 January who were serving a life prison sentence for murder.

The latest available provisional information is for 31 December 1996. On that date there were 2,964 persons in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales serving a life sentence for murder.

Immigration (Detention and Deportation)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those people detained in Birmingham prison under Immigration Act powers were deported during (i) October, (ii) November and (iii) December; and what were their nationalities. [12327]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking, how many of those people detained in Birmingham Prison under Immigration Act powers were deported during (i) October, (ii) November, and (iii) December; and what were their nationalities.

Provisional information shows that the number of persons discharged from Birmingham prison to the Immigration Service for removal under Immigration Act powers during October was 5 and during November was 12. Information for persons discharged from Prison Service establishments in December is not yet available.

A breakdown by nationality is given in the attached table.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women were detained in prisons, under Immigration Act powers, at the end of (i) October, (ii) November and (iii) December; what were their nationalities; how many were deported; and in which prison establishments they were detained. [12350]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of women detained in prison, under Immigration Act powers, at the end of (i) October, (ii) November, and (iii) December; what were their nationalities; how many were deported; and in which prison establishments they were detained.

The information requested on those detained is given in the attached table. Provisional information shows that between October and November, 8 persons were recorded as being discharged for removal by the Immigration Service.

Information on persons discharged from Prison Service establishments in December is not yet available.

Prison Sieges

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of prison sieges or hostage takings which took place in each prison in England and Wales during 1996. [12163]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question, about the number of prison sieges or hostage-takings which took place in each prison in England and Wales during 1996.

There were nine hostage incidents during the year 1 January 1996–31 December 1996 as detailed in the attached table.

Paedophiles

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the annual cost, in each of the last three years, of keeping convicted paedophiles in prison; how many such prisoners there were; what was the average cost per prisoner; what proportion of these prisoners were serving a second or subsequent sentence for such an offence; how much was spent in each year on treatment aimed at reducing the risk to the public of reoffending; and how much was spent in each year on research to improve the effectiveness of such treatment. [12198]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Peter Thurnham, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your Question about the costs of keeping convicted paedophiles in prison.

Cost per place figures relating specifically to paedophile offenders are not available. However, the average cost per prisoner for the financial year 1995–96 was £466 per week.

It is not possible to identify paedophiles from prison population statistics as neither Prison Service statistics, nor central databases record the age of the victim for all offences.

The overall cost of treatment programmes is not available but the cost of the staff time involved in delivering and supervising the Sex Offender Treatment Programme is estimated at £2,000 per prisoner.

Some monitoring of the Sex Offender Treatment Programme is built in to the cost per prisoner and cannot be disaggregated from the overall cost. The Home Office has commissioned independent research evaluating the Sex Offender Treatment Programme (The STEP Project).

Over the past three years the STEP Project expenditure totals £191,000, made up as follows:

1996–97: £52,000

Disabled Prisoners

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the prisons that have a disability officer to monitor prisoners with physical, sensory or mental disability; [12113]

(2) what plans he has to ensure that there is a disability officer to monitor prisoners with a physical, sensory or mental disability in each prison. [12114]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions asking if he will list all the prisons which have a disability officer to monitor prisoners with physical, sensory or mental disability and what plans he has to ensure that there is a disability officer to monitor prisoners with a physical, sensory or mental disability in each prison.

Prison Service establishments are not at present required to appoint disability officers for monitoring such prisoners. Prison Service policy and practice in relation to disabled prisoners is currently being reviewed, with the assistance of an advisory group on which organisations representing people with sight, hearing and other disabilities are represented. The provision of having in each establishment an officer with specific responsibility for matters relating to disabled prisoners is a suggestion which has arisen in consultation and will be duly considered.

Prisons (Drugs Misuse Report)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 5 November, Official Report, column 431, when he expects to respond to the recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs "Drug Misusers and the Prison System—An Integrated Approach". [12115]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. and learned Friend wrote to Lady Runciman and Professor Grahame-Smith on 13 January 1997, thanking them for their very useful report and enclosing some detailed comments on its recommendations. I am arranging for the detailed comments to be placed in the Library.

Vivisection

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications his Department has received under article 5(6) of the animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and how many and what percentage of the applications resulted in a licence being granted. [13085]

Mr. Sackville: Since 1 January 1995, 128 project licences have been granted which involve the use of species listed in article 5(6) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Applications to use these species may not be granted for a number of reasons. The application may be refused and the applicant may decide to withdraw the application prior to formal refusal, or authority to use an alternative species may be granted instead. The number of applications in each of these categories is not recorded centrally.

Police Grant

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he plans to allocate police grant in 1997–98. [13628]

Mr. Maclean: I have laid before the House the Police Grant Report 1997–98. This should be read in conjunction with, for England, the Local Government Finance Report and the Special Grant Report (No. 23) and, for Wales, with the Local Government Finance Report (Wales) 1997–98 and the Special Grant Report (Wales) 1997.

Funding figures for each police authority are set out in the table.

[2] Figure for the Metropolitan police does not include funding allocated to the Receiver under the other services block SSA for school crossing patrols, magistrates courts and the probation service.
[3] Figure for the City includes police SSA and grant, but excludes other SSAs such as capital financing which are allocated to the common council of the City of London as a whole in respect of all its functions.

Police Scientific Development Branch

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what decision he has made about the future status of the police scientific development branch. [13629]

Mr. Howard: The prior options review found that the functions performed by the police scientific development branch are needed and that it should remain in the public sector as an integral part of the Home Office. The review concluded, however, that in order to enhance the customer focus of the branch, a number of further managerial improvements should be adopted. The director of PSDB will put these in place as soon as possible.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is also making a general statement today on the overall outcome of the prior options review programme of public sector research establishments.

Mr. Barry Horne

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) for how long Mr. Barry Horne has been detained on remand at Bullingdon prison; [12613]

(2) what counselling is being made available to Mr. Barry Horne, currently in Bullingdon prison; [12614]

(3) what information he has obtained about the objectives of Mr. Barry Horne's hunger strike at Bullingdon prison; and if he will make a statement; [12615]

(4) if he will make a statement on the hunger strike currently being undertaken by Mr. Barry Horne at Bullingdon prison. [12616]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 24 January 1997]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 29 January 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about Mr. Barry Horne who is being held, on remand, at Bullingdon prison and is at present on hunger strike.

Mr. Horne, was first remanded into custody on 27 July 1996. He was transferred to Bullingdon from Bristol on 23 December. He was returned to Bristol Prison on 28 January.

He began to refuse food on 6 January, claiming this was in protest against the policy of the Government in respect of vivisection. Mr. Horne has stated his action is not connected with his treatment at Bullingdon and that he has no complaints against the prison.

Mr. Horne remains on normal residential location but visits the prison health care centre on a regular basis, where he is examined and counselled by medical staff and a doctor on the dangers of continuing his refusal of food. His medical condition, which at present is not considered to be life threatening, is closely monitored.

Although Mr. Horne refuses to take food, he does take fluids. There is no evidence of him becoming dehydrated and he remains physically mobile.

Breathalysed Motorists

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of motorists breathalysed during the pre-Christmas period proved positive; and what was the proportion during the same period in 1995. [13081]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Figures collected by the Home Office do not enable the pre-Christmas period to be separately identified. The available information relates to the total number of screening breath tests required, and the number which proved positive or were refused, in each calender month.

The latest such information was published in table 3 of the Home Office statistical bulletin "Breath Test Statistics, England and Wales 1995", issue 7/96, a copy of which is listed. Figures for 1996 are not yet available, but will be published in the spring.

ENVIRONMENT

EU Town Twinning Scheme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful applications have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the last four years to obtain subsidies from the EU's town twinning scheme; and what funds have already been allocated to the United Kingdom under this scheme. [12347]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department does not collect this information.

Thames Gateway Initiative

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the projects under consideration under the Thames gateway initiative, indicating the likely start and completion dates, the estimated costs and the number of jobs he estimates will be created. [12567]

Mr. Curry: There are many proposals for a variety of investments in Thames gateway, to be made by different organisations in the public and private sectors, and in partnership between the two. Data are not held centrally, but it is clear that, in the 18 months since publication of the Thames gateway planning framework, good progress is being made towards its implementation.

Telecommunication Masts

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce further guidelines governing the siting of telecommunication masts. [12999]

Sir Paul Beresford: Last year, we published a code of practice on planning procedures for the erection of telecommunication masts under permitted development rights. The Government are working with the local authority associations and telecommunications code system operators who erect masts to monitor the effectiveness of the code and review its implementation.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received regarding the siting of telecommunication masts in unsuitable locations in the last year. [12998]

Sir Paul Beresford: In the past years, 165 representations and a standard petition letter from 57 signatories were received from people concerned about the siting of telecommunication masts.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue guidance to reduce the intrusion of telecommunication masts into the natural environment. [12943]

Sir Paul Beresford: Guidance to reduce the intrusion of telecommunications masts into the natural environment has already been issued. Planning policy guidance note 8 sets out planning policy for telecommunications development including masts. We have also published a code of practice, prepared jointly with the local authority associations and representatives of the telecommunications industry, on planning procedures for the erection of masts under permitted development rights.

Area Cost Adjustments

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the value of the area cost adjustment in 1996–97 and in 1997–98 to (i) Buckinghamshire county council, (ii) Milton Keynes borough council, (iii) Aylesbury Vale district council, (iv) Wycombe district council, (v) Chiltern district council, (vi) South Buckinghamshire district council and (vii) the Thames Valley police authority; and if he will make a statement. [12833]

Sir Paul Beresford: The contribution to SSAs from the area cost adjustment is listed in the table.

The contribution of the area cost adjustment is not the same as the amount an authority would gain or lose if there was not an area cost adjustment in the standard spending assessment system. If the area cost adjustment were removed, it would be necessary to revise the analyses on which SSA formulae are based, and we would wish to consult local authority associations on what would then be the most appropriate formulae.

The area cost adjustment (ACA) contribution for 1996–97 and 1997–98 settlement SSAs

	1996–97 settlement SSA ACA contribution	1997–98 settlement SSA ACA contribution
Buckinghamshire CC	23.220	16.522
Milton Keynes BC	0.784	5.627
Aylesbury Vale DC	0.576	0.498
Wycombe DC	0.599	0.518
Chiltern DC	0.675	0.624
South Buckinghamshire DC	0.719	0.652
Thames Valley Police	6.069	5.637

The large changes in the ACA contribution for Buckinghamshire CC and Milton Keynes BC between 1996–97 and 1997–98 are due to the effects of local government reorganisation.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what planning guidance exists to control the spread of telecommunication masts in areas of outstanding natural beauty and near national heritage sites. [12944]

Sir Paul Beresford: Except in an emergency, the erection of telecommunication masts in areas of outstanding natural beauty needs planning permission from the local planning authority. The erection of masts near national heritage sites is subject either to full planning control or to the prior approval procedure under part 24 of schedule 2 to the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995, depending on the size and location of the mast. Guidance on such applications is set out in the Department's planning policy guidance note 8. This emphasises the need to protect sensitive environments.

Energy Conservation Reports

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the energy conservation authorities which have not yet submitted reports as required by the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995. [12985]

Mr. Clappison: As at 23 January 1997, energy conservation under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 had been received from 349 of the 358 English energy conservation authorities. The following nine authorities had not yet submitted a report:

Allerdale district council
Alnwick district council
Berwick upon Tweed district council
Fenland district council
Gosport district council
Harborough district council
South Ribble district council
South Staffordshire district council
Wellingborough district council

Packaging Waste Regulations

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to lay before Parliament the draft Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) regulations; and if he will make a statement. [13438]

Mr. Gummer: I am today laying before Parliament the draft Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations which are subject to affirmative resolution procedure.

These regulations are the outcome of a lengthy process of dialogue and consultation with business about the means by which the United Kingdom can achieve a more sustainable approach to the 8 million tonnes of packaging waste which it generates each year. Packaging is the largest recyclable element in the domestic waste stream and our goal is to double the amount which we are currently recovering. The Government's objective has been to find a policy framework within which the efficiency and innovation of the market can be allowed to function successfully to achieve this goal and these regulations reflect a successful partnership between Government and industry. I pay tribute to the numerous individuals and companies from all sectors of industry for their contribution to this process and in particular to the Advisory Committee on Packaging chaired by Sir Peter Parker which has helped in the preparation of these regulations. I am happy to agree the committee's proposal for its continuing review and I am placing copies of the advisory committee's recent recommendations in the Library.

The regulations are based on the shared producer responsibility approach agreed by industry on 15 December 1995. Draft regulations were published for consultation in July 1996 and I announced on 18 December 1996, Official Report, columns 614–16, the main modifications I proposed to make in the light of consultation. The regulations will, I believe, create a market incentive for businesses both to reduce packaging waste and find cost-effective ways of recycling or otherwise obtaining value from packaging waste. In particular, they provide for industry-led "compliance" schemes to be established to take on businesses' obligations for them, thus relieving them of much of the necessary administrative burden or for businesses to choose to comply with their obligations individually if they wish. The regulations also set down a staged approach to the obligations that businesses are required to discharge and include a staged threshold for smaller businesses. The regulations will enable the UK to meet the recycling and recovery targets contained in the EC directive on packaging and packaging waste, 94/62/EC.

I propose to keep the regulations under review on an annual basis in the light of the progress which the UK is making towards the recycling and recovery targets. Effective measures will need to be in place to ensure that the UK is in a position to achieve and to continue to achieve the directive targets. However, I will want to consider whether these provisions remain fully necessary and appropriate in this form, while also taking account of the views of the advisory committee on the need for changes arising from the review which it will complete in 1998. A further statement will be made about implementation of other aspects of the packaging directive.

Special Financial Assistance (Manchester)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the outcome of his Department's meeting with Manchester city council and the Greater Manchester police authority in relation to the special financial assistance for Manchester announced by the Minister of State, the right hon. member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry), on 13 January; and if he will make a statement. [12735]

Sir Paul Beresford: My officials are consulting Manchester city council, Greater Manchester police authority and the London borough of Tower Hamlets on detailed proposals for a special grant, to be made under section 88B of the Local Government Finance Act 1988, to help them cope with the cost of dealing with the immediate aftermath of the terrorist attacks last year on Manchester and docklands. Once these consultations have been completed, we shall be drafting a special grant report for which we intend to seek the approval of the House as soon as possible. Subjected to that approval, advance payments should be made to the authorities in this financial year.

Local Government Finance (Manchester)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department has received from Manchester city council in regard to the revenue support grant for 1997–98; what action he will be taking in response; and if he will make a statement. [13083]

Sir Paul Beresford: Manchester city council made representations about a number of aspects of the proposals for the revenue support grant for 1997–98. We have considered them carefully. It expressed particular concerns about data on income support claimants. These concerns have been examined carefully by the Department for Social Security. In the light of its investigations, we are satisfied that the data can properly be used in the calculation of the revenue support grant.

Venomous Snakes

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy that those importing any non-CITES—convention on international trade in endangered species—venomous snakes into the United Kingdom should require the possession of a dangerous wild animals licence. [12627]

Mr. Clappison: The Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 makes it an offence to keep privately any animal included in the schedule to the Act, except under a licence issued by a local authority. The schedule to the Act includes a number of CITES and non-CITES venomous snakes. I am not aware of any evidence that these controls are inadequate.

Mine Safety

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of the current deregulatory proposals in respect of mine safety on the responsibilities of colliery managers. [12960]

Sir Paul Beresford: No proposals are currently with me in respect of mine safety. The Health and Safety Commission published a consultative document on 20 January 1997 containing proposals for modernising the law relating to the control of ground movement in mines and the provision of ground support. Comments are invited by 19 May.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account was taken of recent experience in the preparation of the proposed deregulation of the mine safety arrangements concerning the maximum distances allowed between roof support in collieries; and if he will consult organisations and individuals closely involved in these matters. [12961]

Sir Paul Beresford: The recently published consultative document on the control of ground movement in mines is not deregulatory. Recent experience of those closely involved in the industry was taken into account when drawing up the consultative document. The consultative document has been widely distributed and full and proper consideration will be given to the views of those who respond.

Partners in Technology Programme

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been his Department's total expenditure on the partners in technology programme in the financial year 1996–97 and projected expenditure in the financial years 1997–98 and 1998–99; and how many projects were involved in each year. [13291]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The anticipated expenditure and number of projects within the partners in technology scheme are:

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Anticipated expenditure	£8.7 million	£8.8 million	£8.9 million
Anticipated number of projects	384	341	350

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total value and number of the partners in technology projects carried out by the Building

Research Establishment in the financial year 1996–97; and what are the projected figures for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1988–99. [13290]

Mr. Jones: Partners in technology is a challenge-based scheme, consequently there is no projected allocation to any specific organisation. The funding currently committed by the Department to BRE in respect of partners in technology projects is as follows:

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Contract value	£3.5 million	£2.4 million	£0.7 million
Number of projects	102	66	24

Planning Policy

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to clarify his policy in relation to planning gain. [13633]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: A DOE circular on planning obligations has been issued today. It clarifies and updates the guidance previously set out in DOE circular 16/91, following extensive consultation. It sets out the policies to which the Secretary of State and planning inspectors will have regard in determining applications or appeals and which local planning authorities should also take into account when considering planning applications and drafting development plan policies.

The circular emphasises that planning permissions may not be bought or sold and defines the policy tests for the proper use of planning obligations. Illustrative guidance is given on acceptable use of obligations in particular circumstances. By following this guidance, the quality of development may be enhanced and public confidence in the planning system retained.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom representatives at the forthcoming European Union-Association of South-East Asian Nations summit in Singapore will raise the subject of (a) the situation in Burma and (b) relations between the EU, ASEAN, the United Kingdom and Burma. [13146]

Mr. Hanley: The agenda for the EU-ASEAN summit in Singapore has not yet been finalised. We expect that there will be discussion about Burma at some point during the summit.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the accession of Burma to the Association of South-East Asian Nations on EU-Burma trade. [13149]

Mr. Hanley: We have not assessed the impact that this may have on EU-Burma trade because Burma has not yet been admitted as a full member of the Association of South-East Asian Nations, nor is it known when accession will take place.

Singapore Summit

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) Ministers and (b) officials attending the European Unions Association of South-East Asian Nation's summit in Singapore on 14 and 15 February. [13150]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary plans to attend the EU/ASEAN ministerial meeting to be held in Singapore from 13 to 14 February. He will also attend the Asian/Europe ministerial meeting—ASEM—in Singapore on 15 February.

On present plans, my right hon. and learned Friend will be accompanied at these meetings by:

Mr. W.G. Ehrman: Principal Private Secretary

Mrs. F.G. Mylchreest: Private Secretary

Mr. H.N.H. Synnott: Foreign and Commonwealth Office

Mr. N.E. Sheinwald: Foreign and Commonwealth Office

Mr. M.A. Runacres: Foreign and Commonwealth Office

Mr. D.W. Rutland: Department of Trade and Industry

Mr. J.J.H. Morrison: UK Permanent Representation to the EU Brussels

Mr. M.F. Smith: Central Office of Information

Ten other police and support staff.

Hong Kong

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Office if he will list the changes in (a) policy and (b) practice in respect of the Hong Kong visa entry scheme for non-EU nationals, including Russian nationals, after July. [13151]

Mr. Hanley: Hong Kong operates a liberal visa regime which allows nationals of more than 170 countries to enjoy visa-free visits. Nationals of some 34 states, including Russia and other eastern European and central Asian states, have to obtain a visa to visit Hong Kong. Most nationals going to Hong Kong for employment, investment, education or to take up residence need to obtain a visa.

Under the Sino-British joint declaration and China's Basic Law for the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, visa policy after 30 June 1997 will fall within the autonomy of the Government of the HKSAR. The existing visa policy has served Hong Kong well and the Hong Kong Government do not see a need for any significant change in the near future.

Visas

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the level of fees paid by foreign nationals requiring United Kingdom visas since 1 April 1996; what are the visa fees charged by other major European countries; what assessment he has made of the economic advantages accruing to countries charging less than the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [12733]

Dr. Liam Fox: Details of the fees for processing applications for entry clearance for the United Kingdom from 1 April to 13 August 1996 are given in the Consular Fees Order 1995, S.I. 1995 No.1617, and since 14 August 1996 in the Consular Fees Order 1996, S.I.

1996 No. 1915. It would be possible to obtain the information requested on visa fees charged by other European countries only at disproportionate cost. We are not aware of any evidence that the UK is at an economic disadvantage because of the level of entry clearance fees. The United Kingdom is committed to achieving full cost recovery of the entry clearance operation overseas so that it functions at no cost to the taxpayer. This is in line with the Government's overall expenditure settlement.

Kuwaiti Citizens (Iraq)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what diplomatic action the United Kingdom has taken in relation to the detention of Kuwaiti citizens in Iraq; what further action he proposes; and if he will make a statement. [12734]

Mr. Hanley: We have been active in focusing international attention on this issue. We most recently raised it at the United Nations when the Security Council reviewed sanctions against Iraq on 31 December. At meetings of the tripartite commission in Geneva and its technical sub-committee, we have repeatedly made clear to the Iraqis our deep concern over the lack of progress. We shall continue to press them to provide substantive information on individual cases.

Mr. Steve Bryant

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department has taken on behalf of Mr. Steve Bryant who is currently held in a Moroccan prison. [13182]

Dr. Liam Fox: We have given all possible consular assistance to Mr. Bryant from the moment of his arrest. We have translated his petition for a pardon, and delivered prison comforts and post. Consular staff visit him regularly, including six visits during his 25-day hunger strike in November.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Office of Telecommunications

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the efficiency and effectiveness of Oftel. [11955]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department's close working relationship with Oftel does not extend to formal monitoring of Oftel's performance, since the office of Director General of Telecommunications was created by Parliament with independent statutory powers and duties under the Telecommunications Act 1984. The director general reports to Parliament annually on how he has fulfilled these duties and the use made of the resources Parliament has voted to him. In addition, the National Audit Office has recently examined the effectiveness of the regulatory process in its report, "The Work of the Directors General of Telecommunications, Gas Supply, Water Services and Electricity Regulation", published on 24 July 1996. The director general gave evidence to the Public Accounts Committee on this report on 18 November 1996. He has also appeared twice before the Trade and Industry Committee and is due to appear before it again shortly.

UK Subsidiaries Abroad

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the total contribution to the United kingdom economy of United kingdom subsidiaries abroad in the five most recent years for which figures are available. [12554]

Mr. Lang: My Department monitors developments in British overseas investment and, from time to time, evaluates relevant studies. Data on total net earnings derived from outward direct investment by UK companies in overseas subsidiaries and associates are published in "Business Monitor MA4" a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Over the past five years, for which data are available, earnings have grown rapidly. The net earnings of UK companies' overseas subsidiaries and associates rose from £14.5 billion in 1990 to £19.6 billion in 1994.

North Sea Oil Bids

Mr. Khabra: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy that future bidding rounds for North sea oil exploration will be subject to prior environmental assessments; and if he will ensure that environmental policy statements submitted by successful bidders will be published. [12454]

Mr. Page: My officials currently consult, among others, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee before any seaward area of the United Kingdom continental shelf, including the North sea, is offered for licensing. The JNCC provides advice about the potential impact of oil and gas activities on the environmental resources of the area and, where appropriate, suggests conditions that might be applied to the licence to mitigate these impacts in the event of licence being awarded. The conditions can include requirements for environmental assessment before particular activities under the licence can take place. I expect that these arrangements, or some similar mechanism, will continue for future licensing rounds.

I do not at present have any plans to publish the environmental policy statements provided by successful applicants in support of their applications for petroleum licences, but such information may be made available for inspection to members of the public subject to prior arrangement with my officials.

Greece

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which Ministers from his Department have visited Greece to discuss trade during the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [12942]

Mr. Nelson: The then Minister of Industry visited Greece in 1994, and, over the past five years, Ministers from other Departments have also paid visits with trade promotion elements. Greece is an important market for British firms, and my Department actively promotes opportunities there. Between 1991 and 1995, our exports of goods increased by more than half.

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the last British trade fair was held in Greece; which companies took part; and if he will make a statement. [12940]

Mr. Nelson: Last year, my Department supported the attendance of UK firms at two trade fairs in Greece. They were Posidonia, in June 1996, which 26 UK firms participated, and Defendory, in October 1996, which 10 UK firms attended. A list of the companies that took part is as follows:

Paid Holiday Leave

Ms Eagle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those European Union countries in which there is no statutory right to paid holiday leave for employees. [11743]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The UK is the only member state which does not have such a statutory right. However, UK employers and employees are free to agree holiday arrangements which are appropriate to their circumstances and needs. We believe that the imposition on industry of statutory requirements can only damage competitiveness, undermine flexibility and threaten jobs.

Research Establishments

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what decisions he has made about the future status of establishments supported by the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, the Medical Research Council and the Natural Environment Research Council. [13632]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced on 22 May that the Government were satisfied that the functions of four BBSRC establishments—Institute of Arable Crops Research, Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research, John Innes Centre, and Silsoe Research Institute—were needed, and that they should retain their separate existence, but that full independence from the public sector was a desirable option which merited further consideration. In the light of this further consideration, we have concluded that the establishments should remain in the public sector and retain their separate existence. Similarly, we have concluded that the three BBSRC animal science institutes included in the second tranche of prior options reviews, completed at the end of July—Babraham Institute, Institute for Animal Health and the Roslin Institute—and BBSRC's Institute of Food Research, which was included in the third tranche of reviews completed at the end of December, should remain in the public sector and retain their separate existence.

I shall expect the BBSRC, under the oversight of the Director General of Research Councils, to continue to look for ways of improving the establishments' value for money. Specifically, we shall explore the scope for improving control of central costs and for contracting out support services. We shall also consider targets for increased external income. In the case of the Institute of Food Research, we will be exploring further the potential benefits of greater collaboration between IFR and the research component of the Central Science Laboratory at Norwich and, in the case of the Institute for Animal Health, exchanging areas of work with the Veterinary Laboratories Agency.

We are also satisfied that the functions of the three NERC establishments—British Geological Survey, Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences and Centre for Ecology and Hydrology—covered by the second tranche of prior options reviews are needed. We have concluded that they should remain in the public sector and retain their separate identities. I shall expect NERC, under the oversight of the DGRC, to pursue the opportunities for rationalisation and restructuring identified by the reviews. I shall also look to NERC to build on its arm's length relationship with the establishments and to improve their financial and management systems.

The MRC's Dunn nutrition unit, which was covered by the third tranche of reviews, should be closed and reconstituted to take advantage of the scope for rationalisation with other MRC and university activities, which will open up when the reconstituted unit moves to a new site in 1998.

We are satisfied that the functions of the MRC's institute of virology, reproductive biology unit, mammalian genetics unit, radiation and genome stability unit and toxicology unit are needed and that there is scope for some rationalisation and introduction of private sector management. We have concluded that the MRC provision of research services and facilities at the mammalian genetics unit and the radiation and genome stability unit should be reduced through contractor management or new market testing and strategic partnerships with other bodies on the Harwell site.

A new body should be established within the private sector to commercialise the provision of research resources, information services and collaborative exploitation activities, in parallel with the mammalian genetics unit.

The virology unit should be transferred to the ownership of Glasgow university, subject to the resolution of practical issues;

The reproductive biology unit should remain under MRC management but be managed as a closure and reconstitution. The boundaries between it and the University of Edinburgh should be redrawn in areas not requiring strategic management; the toxicology unit should remain under MRC management and should continue to improve its efficiency and performance.

The research councils have recently recruited a procurement adviser from the private sector to identify opportunities for cutting the costs of all the councils and their institutes.

Further details of the measures for the bodies listed above will be published in due course.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has made a statement today on the broad outcome of the programme of prior options reviews of public sector research establishments which refers to the general policy on timing of prior options reviews.

Mr. Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the programme of prior options reviews of public sector research establishments. [13631]

Mr. Lang: This programme of reviews has now been completed. The final reports were submitted, as planned, at the end of December 1996. The Government are today announcing decisions on all the outstanding reviews.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Science and Technology is today making announcements on a number of establishments for which my Department has responsibility, as follows:

Institute of Arable Crops Research Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research
John Innes Centre
Silsoe Research Institute
Babraham Institute
Institute for Animal Health
Roslin Institute
British Geological Survey
Centre for Coastal and Marine Science
Centre for Ecology and Hydrology
Dunn Nutrition Unit
Institute of Food Research
Mammalian Genetics Unit
Radiation and Genome Stability Unit
Reproductive Biology Unit
Toxicology Unit
Virology Unit

Announcements are also being made today by the Minister responsible for each of the following establishments:

Macauley Land Use Research Institute
Scottish Crop Research Institute
Moredun Research Institute
Hannah Research Institute
Rowett Research Institute
Horticulture Research International
Veterinary Laboratories Agency
Police Scientific Development Branch
Public Health Laboratory Service
National Institute for Biological Standards and Control
National Radiological Protection Board

The aim of the reviews has been to ensure that the country achieves the greatest possible benefit from the substantial resources—some £690 million annually—devoted to all the establishments. Reviews have been approached on a case-by-case basis in the context of the prior options guidelines. Decisions have been taken collectively by Ministers to ensure the reviews address the actual and potential relationships between establishments in similar or related fields. The decisions announced today are designed to ensure that establishments operate with maximum effectiveness and efficiency, and to enhance the scientific excellence for which they are renowned.

Prior options reviews are normally undertaken on a five-yearly cycle. However, the Government have a continuous requirement to assess performance and structure against evolving objectives, and reviews may in some circumstances be necessary within the five-year period. It is intended to maintain this standard arrangement for the establishments reviewed in 1996, subject to progress with the follow-up measures agreed by Ministers. These include a range of measures to improve the management and customer focus of the establishments, as set out in the individual announcements.

As with previous announcements under this programme, memorandums explaining the rationale for Ministers' decisions will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as possible.

Textile Industry

Mr. Beggs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the effect of the imposition of anti-dumping duty on imported cotton greycloths in the United Kingdom by the European Commission on employment in the United Kingdom textile industry. [11725]

Mr. Nelson: When Sir Leon Brittan announced the imposition of the current provisional anti-dumping duties on cotton greycloth on 21 November 1996, he committed the Commission to carrying out a full assessment of their likely effects on users of the product in the EU textile finishing industry. The results of the assessment will be made available to member states in the next few months before a decision is taken on whether the duties should be made definitive. The Government will vote against any such proposal and will encourage other member states to do so as well.

Shipbuilding Intervention Fund

Mr. Harris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's policy on the level of the shipbuilding intervention fund during 1997. [13634]

Mr. Greg Knight: Following a decision of the European Commission, I have decided that the United Kingdom's maximum level of support for large ships from 1 January 1997 shall continue to be 9 per cent. This is inclusive of shipbuilders' tax relief of 2 per cent.

I have similarly decided that the maximum level of support for small ships from 1 January 1997 shall continue to be 4.5 per cent. This is inclusive of shipbuilders' tax relief of 2 per cent. These levels are the maximum permitted by the EU shipbuilding regime.

The shipbuilding intervention fund was due to end in July 1996 on the introduction of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development agreement respecting normal competitive conditions in the commercial shipbuilding and repair industry. However, the agreement has not yet been ratified by all parties. The shipbuilding intervention fund and equivalent support in other member states will continue until 31 December 1997, pending the implementation of the OECD agreement. Shipbuilders' tax relief in respect of merchant ships will be terminated at the same time.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12703]

Mr. Page [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Most of the large number of White Papers, Green Papers, consultation papers, draft regulations and circulars my Department was responsible for publishing in 1996 have the potential for direct or indirect significant environmental effects. However, central records are not kept which classify such documents according to any environmental effects. Therefore this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Waste Incinerator (Belevedere)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the current status of the proposed waste to energy incinerator in Beleverdere, Kent. [13156]

Mr. Page [holding answer 28 January 1996]: The application for consent for the project under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 is in abeyance pending receipt of the further environmental information sought by the Department in November 1995.

TREASURY

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year from 1984–85 to the most recent available year the cost of conditional exemption from inheritance tax of (a) chattels and (b) land, in each case indicating the number of estates granted exemption. [11938]

Mr. Jack: The relief from capital taxes for qualifying chattels, land and buildings is not an outright exemption as the tax charge is effectively deferred until the qualifying assets are sold, or the appropriate undertakings cease to apply.

The number of cases granted relief and the estimated amount of relief given are:

	(a) Chattels		(b) Land and buildings
Year	Cases	Amount of relief (£ million)	Cases	Amount of relief (£ million)
1984–85	58	40	12	5
1985–86	57	10	14	20
1986–87	40	20	12	5
1987–88	30	50	13	5
1988–89	56	50	5	negligible
1989–90	38	100	12	5
1990–91	32	160	15	15
1991–92	43	15	9	5
1992–93	63	40	9	negligible
1993–94	46	40	9	negligible
1994–95	59	55	18	negligible
1995–96	40	25	29	5

(Estimates for the amount of tax deferred are particularly tentative. Negligible means less than £3 million.)

Travel Insurance

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reports, of how many cases, he has received from Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of value shifting between insurance costs and travel costs resulting in a loss of tax revenue. [12354]

Mr. Oppenheim: Customs and Excise officials inform me that it is a common practice for the travel industry to adopt a pricing structure that results in comparatively low margins on holidays and high margins on the accompanying travel insurance. Regardless of whether the prime motivation for this pricing arrangement is commercial of fiscal, a tax loss results.

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he proposes to take to ensure there is no discrimination on rates of tax between insurance products sold through insurance providers and agents and those sold through travel agents. [12353]

Mr. Oppenheim: The higher rate of insurance premium tax will be applied only to sales of insurance by certain suppliers, including travel agents. Such tax treatment reflects the fact that this measure is designed to address the tax loss arising from the widespread practice in these sectors of inflating the price of value added tax exempt insurance when it is supplied in association with vatable goods and services. This tax loss cannot arise when insurance is supplied in isolation by insurance companies and their agents.

Paymaster General's Office (Privatisation)

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the timetable for the completion of the privatisation of the Paymaster General's office. [12296]

Mr. Oppenheim: Privatisation of the Paymaster agency is due to be completed by 31 March 1997.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representative organisations of the public sector pensioners paid by the Paymaster General have been consulted about the proposed privatisation. [12298]

Mr. Oppenheim: Annexe 1 to the Paymaster prior options review report, copies of which were placed in the Libraries of both Houses last summer, lists those consulted and who responded to invitations to comment. On behalf of public sector pensioners, these included: Civil Service Pensioners Alliance; Civil Service Retirement Fellowship; NHS Pensioners Trust; NHS Retirement Fellowship; First Division Pensioners Group; Public Service Pensions Council; Council of Civil Service Unions; Royal British Legion; Civil Service Healthcare; British Medical Association and the Civil Service Benevolent Fund.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the anticipated pension transfer values are for staff from the privatisation of the Paymaster General's office. [12297]

Mr. Oppenheim: These will be subject to negotiation with the successful bidder.

Excise Duty

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase powers of search and detention by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise staff in respect of cross-border movement control of excise goods. [12555]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have no plans at present.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what legal steps his Department is taking in conjunction with other European Union member states to combat cross-border movements of goods to evade (a) excise duty and (b) value added tax. [12557]

Mr. Oppenheim: Smuggling and fraud within the European Union are taken very seriously by this Government, the Governments of other member states and the European Commission.

In a joint effort to counter such illegal activities Council directive 77/799/EEC, as amended, provides for the mutual assistance by the competent authorities of the member states in the field of direct and indirect taxation. This close co-operation has, since the completion of the single market, been further enhanced by the introduction of systems for the verification of movements and the exchange of data.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on trends in the levels of excise duty across the European Union. [12556]

Mr. Oppenheim: A number of member states have recently made excise duty changes with effect from 1 January 1997. Trends will be carefully analysed when full information becomes available.

Tobacco Products

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the additional excise and VAT revenue yield in a full year which would result from reducing the minimum guide levels set for tobacco products provided under article 9 of directive 92/12/EEC. [12565]

Mr. Oppenheim: No such estimate has been made.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to set minimum guide levels for tobacco products under article 9 of directive 92/12/EEC. [12563]

Mr. Oppenheim: Article 9 of directive 92/EEC, setting down guide levels which are used to help distinguish between commercial consignments, which must bear duty in the member state of destination, and private consignments which will have borne duty in the member state where the goods were brought, was implemented in UK legislation on 1 January 1993 by the Excise Duties (Personal Reliefs) Order 1992, SI 1992 No. 3155. For the benefit of the travelling public, these guide levels are reproduced in Customs and Excise notice No. 1 "A Guide for Travellers", copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of article 9 of directive 92/12/EEC on the United Kingdom yield of excise duty; and what plans he has to reduce the minimum guide levels set for tobacco levels. [12564]

Mr. Oppenheim: The purpose of article 9 is to help distinguish between commercial consignments, which must bear duty in the member state of destination, and personal consignments which will have borne duty in the member state where the goods were bought.

Customs' estimate of excise duty revenue lost from legitimate personal importation of duty paid alcoholic drinks for the year ending 30 June 1996 is £145 million and for tobacco products, £55 million, making a total of £200 million. Additionally, value added tax receipts of £60 million for alcoholic drinks and £15 million for tobacco products, a total £75 million, are estimated to have been lost. Thus the estimate for the total loss of tax revenues from such legitimate cross-border shopping for the year ending 30 June is £275 million.

There are no plans to reduce the minimum guide levels for tobacco products. The UK did well to negotiate, against considerable resistance, the existing levels and it would require unanimous agreement to change them. This is most unlikely to be forthcoming, given that some member states seriously doubt the need for any such indicators.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) first-year and (b) full-year costs of raising tobacco duties by the equivalent of 5p per standard packet of 20 cigarettes. [12749]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Increasing the tobacco duties by the equivalent of 5p per standard packet of 20 cigarettes plus value added tax would yield £210 million in 1997–98. The first year yield would depend on the date of implementation assumed. Costings take account of the effects on behaviour where they are likely to have a significant effect on the yield and any consequential changes in receipts from related taxes including VAT; and they are measured against a non-indexed base.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions Finance Ministers have discussed the European Commission document COM (96) 328: "A Common System of VAT"; and if he will make a statement [12480]

Mr. Oppenheim: None. The European Commission's programme for a common system of VAT, outlined in document COM(96)328, has not been discussed by EC Finance Ministers, although it was briefly presented—for information only, and with no debate or discussion—by Commissioner Monti to a meeting of the Economic and Finance Council in October 1996.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's policy in respect of extending value added tax to areas (a) zero rated and (b) exempt; and if he will make a statement. [12798]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Government have no current plans to extend VAT to goods and services that are either zero rated or exempt from VAT. Furthermore, any changes to European Community provisions in respect of VAT require unanimity, and so there is no question of the UK being forced to alter any aspect of our current VAT system.

Income Tax

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer in 1997–98 of moving to a single 20 per cent. rate of income tax, assuming the abolition of all reliefs, allowances and exemptions, except for a personal allowance of £5,000 transferable between spouses. [13012]

Mr. Jack: The estimated full-year cost of introducing a single 20 per cent. rate of income tax at 1997–98 income levels would be about £11 billion. This assumes a personal allowance of £5,000 transferable between spouses and the abolition of all other income tax allowances, and mortgage interest relief, tax relief on employee's contributions to occupational pensions and personal pension schemes, reliefs for tax-exempt special savings accounts, personal equity plans and profit-related pay, national savings certificates, employee share schemes and charitable giving.

This estimate does not take into account the substantial behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such a change, nor do they allow for any subsequent changes to the tax system, such as changes to tax relief on employer's contributions to pension schemes or relief for investment income in pension funds.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) first-year and (b) full-year costs per person of raising the basic rate of income tax by 1p in the pound for (i) each adult in the United Kingdom and (ii) each income taxpayer in the United Kingdom. [12748]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The average tax increases at 1997–98 income levels of increasing the basic rate of income tax by 1p is about £28 in the first year and £38 in a full year for each adult—aged 18 and over—and about £49 in the first year and £66 in a full year for every income taxpayer in the United Kingdom.

Vehicle Fuel Duties

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) first year and (b) full year costs of raising fuel duties by 3p per litre or equivalent. [12751]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Increasing the duty rates on petrol and diesel by 3p per litre plus VAT would yield £1,400 million in 1997–98. The first-year yield would depend on the date of implementation assumed. Costings take account of the effects on behaviour where they are likely to have a significant effect on the yield and any consequential changes in receipts from related taxes including VAT; and they are measured against a non-indexed base.

Domestic Fuel (VAT)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of reducing the value added tax on domestic fuel from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent. [12794]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The estimated cost of reducing VAT on domestic fuel and power is about £430 million in a full year. This estimate is based on the costings methodology explained in annexe A to chapter 6 of the 1997–98 "Financial Statement and Budget Report". It therefore incorporates assumptions about changes in behaviour in response to the reduced rate of VAT, but excludes any effect of the tax change on the overall level of income and spending.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12700]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Government are fully committed to taking significant environmental impacts into account, where appropriate, alongside all other relevant costs and benefits during policy appraisal. The Treasury's commitment to this is demonstrated, for example, by the air quality package announced by the Chancellor as part of this year's Budget.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the Exchequer of mortgage interest tax relief in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [12792]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The estimated total cost of mortgage interest relief in 1997–98 is £2.4 billion. This estimate is provisional. It is based on the assumption, by convention, of no change from the current estimated average building society interest rate of 6.43 per cent. The cost of the relief in 1998–99 would depend on future interest rates, the future distribution of the number and value of outstanding mortgages, and the rate and limit of relief.

National Debt

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the method of calculation of the national debt; and if he will indicate the level of national debt per person in each of the last 20 years. [10771]

Mr. Waldegrave: Estimates of a range of measures of public debt, including net public sector debt, gross general government debt and the national debt, are published in November's edition of the Bank of England quarterly bulletin. The figures are calculated using sector by sector information on debt outstanding—for example, the nominal value of government stocks and Treasury bills outstanding and notes and coins in circulation—most of which is held by the Bank of England.

The table provides figures for the level of real net public sector debt per person for the years 1976 to 1995, the last year for which population data are available.

Net public sector debt per person (figures in £s)

SCOTLAND

Dog Fouling (Prosecutions)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions there have been in Scotland for dog fouling during each of the last five years. [11921]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately identifiable in the Scottish Office Home Department's classification of crimes and offences.

Forestry Commission (Woodland Sales)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all Forestry Commission woodlands currently for sale, and indicate for each (a) into which English or Welsh county or Scottish region it falls, (b) the number of hectares covered and (c) if an access agreement has been made with the local authority guaranteeing continuing public access.

Mr. Kynoch [pursuant to his answer, 12 November 1996, c. 149–53]: The chief executive of Forest Enterprise has written further to the hon. Member.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 29 January 1997:

I refer to my letter of 12 November 1996, which enclosed a list of the Forestry Commission Woodlands that were currently for sale, in response to your Parliamentary Question.

I am very sorry to say the list for Wales was incorrect due to confusion arising from the changeover from the old County Councils to the new Unitary Authorities on 1 April 1996.

I therefore enclose a revised list for Wales and I can only apologise for this error.

Scottish Enterprise

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures have been introduced by the Scottish Enterprise network during the last two years to promote greater openness in its operations. [12132]

Mr. Kynoch: This is a matter for Scottish Enterprise. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many extra assisted places he is planning to make available to children between the ages of five and 11 years; what is the estimated cost of the extra places; and what will be the timetable for making them available. [12650]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The age of assisted pupils is not collected centrally.

We plan to provide funding in the 1997–98 school session sufficient for around 500 additional assisted places, so that there will be around 4,000 assisted places in total. It is for participating schools to determine to whom, and at what stage level, assisted places can be given, dependent on actual applications received and the availability of fee remission grants. The estimated total cost of the scheme for the 1997–98 school session will be around £15.4 million. Within that figure, the cost of the additional 500 places is estimated at around £2 million.

We plan to expand provision in subsequent school sessions so that, in time, around 6,000 assisted places can be provided in Scotland.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of families of pupils receiving help from the assisted places scheme had household incomes of (a) more than £18,000 per annum and (b) less than £9,522 per annum in Scotland in the last academic year. [12654]

Mr. Robertson: Provisional statistics for the 1995–96 school session indicate that 20.8 per cent. of assisted pupils came from families whose relevant income was greater than £18,000 per annum. The relevant income point at which full fee remission was applicable in that session is £9,711 per annum, and 46.8 per cent. of assisted pupils came from families whose relevant income was less than that level.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many pupils attended each school taking part in the assisted places scheme in Scotland in the last academic year; how many pupils in each case were on the assisted places scheme; and what was the percentage of pupils on the assisted places scheme in each case. [12652]

Mr. Robertson: The information requested is in the table:

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year in which the assisted places scheme has been operating (a) the number of places available, (b) the number taken up, (c) the amount budgeted each year for the scheme and (d) the amount actually spent in Scotland. [12651]

Mr. Robertson: Participating schools are not allocated a specific number of assisted places which they may award. Each school is allocated a specific level of fee remission grant within which it may assist such pupils as can be afforded. In addition, schools can reclaim the cost of incidental expenses grants to which assisted pupils are entitled. The table therefore provides information on the number of pupils assisted each year and the actual costs incurred, including the costs of incidental expenses grants.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many families benefiting from the assisted places scheme are self-employed; and what proportion of the total they form. [13171]

Mr. Robertson: This information is not held centrally.

Erskine Bridge (Collision)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the report on the Erskine bridge collision to be published. [12964]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I will issue a full statement on the findings of the report shortly.

Housing Capital Provision

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each local authority in Scotland its gross housing capital provision in 1996–97 and 1997–98, broken down in each case by (a) borrowing consent and (b) estimated sale receipts. [13039]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information is contained in the table. For 1997–98, the estimate of useable capital receipts is based on information provided by local authorities; the Scottish Office no longer issues receipts estimates to individual authorities. The final outturn will vary from the figures shown in accordance with the actual receipts achieved by each council.

National Galleries

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place copies of the reports commissioned by his Department in the last five years concerning the financial management of the national galleries of Scotland in the Library; and if he will make a statement on the action taken as a result of those reports. [12876]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A policy and financial management review of the national galleries of Scotland was announced to the House on 10 May 1995 and was completed on 28 September 1995. The report of the review will be published along with an action plan to implement recommendations when these have been considered and agreed. A copy will then be placed in the Library.

Agricultural and Biological Institutes

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what decisions have been made about the Scottish agricultural and biological institutes following the prior options review. [13860]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government announced on 22 May 1996 that we were satisfied that the functions of two Scottish agricultural and biological research institutes—the Macaulay Land Use Research Institute and the Scottish Crop Research Institute—were needed and that the institutes should retain their separate existence, but that the possibility of a move of the institutes from the public to the private sector merited further consideration.

In the light of this further consideration, the Government have concluded that these establishments should remain in the public sector and should each retain their separate existence. The same conclusions apply to the two animal science institutes—the Hannah Research Institute and the Moredun Research Institute—which were included in the second tranche of prior options reviews, completed at the end of July 1996; and to the Rowett Research Institute, the review of which was completed in December 1996.

The Scottish Office has been developing with the institutes measures designed to improve the value for money obtained from our funding of these establishments, and we will examine the scope for improving their efficiency and effectiveness still further. In particular, we will develop further the institutes' mechanisms for corporate planning and target setting. Details will be published in due course.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has made a statement today on the broad outcome of the programme of prior options reviews of public sector research establishments which refers to the general policy on the timing of prior options reviews.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive reports of (a) the judicial inquiry by the French authorities into the channel tunnel fire, (b) Eurotunnel's inquiry and (c) the investigation by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority; and if each will be published in full. [13258]

Mr. Watts: It is for the French authorities to decide to what extent the findings of the judicial inquiry into the channel tunnel fire are made public. Eurotunnel's own inquiry is a matter for the company, but I understand Eurotunnel has said it will publish its findings. The findings of the inquiry by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority will be made public.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Tourism (Bexley)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the impact of the Government's tourism policy on the London borough of Bexley. [11667]

Mr. Sproat: While we have not made any specific assessment of the impact of our tourism policy on Bexley alone, Bexley is a London borough and as such is part of Britain's greatest assets in attracting overseas visitors. In 1995, over 23 million people visited the capital—an increase of nearly 1.5 million over 1994—and they contributed over £7 billion to the capital's economy. The "Focus London" initiative aims to enhance London's position as one of the world's leading tourist destinations and as international gateway to the rest of Britain. The London tourist board/London first hotel development initiative aims to identify sites for hotel development in outer-London boroughs which will help develop and spread the benefits of tourism outside the capital centre. Locally they are various initiatives which ultimately aim to maximise the benefits of tourism right across the capital. A 40-mile network of green walks spanning south-east London has been awarded the prestigious "seal of approval" by the London Walking Forum. The walk links together more than 300 public and private open spaces passing through four London boroughs including Bexley. Bexley has been praised for the colour and attractiveness of its gardens, and has been awarded the London borough Trophy as a result. I am pleased to see that Bexley council's priorities for the next five years include a drive to promote culture, heritage and the arts, play a leading role in "Thames gateway" initiatives and activities, and to improve employment prospects by exploiting tourism and heritage opportunities.

National Lottery

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what proportion of national lottery tickets sold nationally are bought from (a) supermarket chains, (b) chain newsagents and (c) independent newsagents; [12362]

(2) what has been the total income received from (a) national lottery tickets and (b) national lottery scratchcards in Lewisham, East; [12366]

(3) what plans she has to limit new national lottery outlets to independent newsagents only; [12369]

(4) how many new (a) national lottery ticket outlets and (b) national lottery scratchcards outlets have been opened on average each week; [12361]

(5) what proportion of the total national income from the national lottery has been represented by lottery sales in Lewisham, East; [12365]

(6) how many and what percentage of all national lottery outlets are in (a) supermarket chains, (b) chain newsagents and (c) independent newsagents. [12363]

Mr. Sproat: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how her Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and

(c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans they have to extend their use in future within the Department. [12275]

Mr. Sproat: My Department recognises the indicators for sustainable development as a valuable tool. Although they are not applied in a formal sense either in the production of the Department of National Heritage annual report or in any monitoring system, they are taken into account where appropriate in considering policy options, in particular in the approach to sustainable tourism, to which the Department remains committed. The natural and built heritage are central to the UK's attractiveness as a visitor destination, and it is therefore essential that the tourism industry develops in a way which contributes to conserving and enhancing that heritage. The tourism strategy which we will be publishing on 5 February 1997 will set out further action to encourage sustainable tourism.

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the revised financial arrangements for the millennium exhibition at Greenwich. [12574]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Millennium Commission decided at its meeting on 13 January 1997 that the indicative budget it has received from the millennium exhibition operating company, Millennium Central, provided a basis on which a grant of £200 million could be made. Negotiations on terms and conditions of grant are continuing in parallel with the preparation of detailed business plan and the creation of the management team. This will be done in such a way as to drive the costs down.

In addition to the commission's grant, the exhibition will be funded through commercial income, including private sector sponsorship. The Millennium Commission has a target of £150 million for sponsorship, of which more than half has been identified. Entrance charges will be set at a level which allows as many people as possible to attend but which also maximises income.

Television Licensing

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Beaconsfield of 15 May relating to television licensing. [12837]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer Tuesday 28 January 1997]: My hon. Friend's original correspondence and reminder were addressed to the Home Office. On transfer of the correspondence, the relevant enclosures were missing and the Department of National Heritage did not finally receive these until 14 November last year. A reply has been sent to my hon. Friend today, and I apologise for the delay.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates and Crown Courts

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many individuals have been brought before (a) the magistrates and (b) the Crown courts in each of the last five years. [13024]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

The information is published annually in the Command Paper "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales". Tables 6A and 6.7 refer.

Copies are available in the Library.

Legal Aid

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which firms of solicitors received more than £500,000 from the legal aid fund in 1995–96; how much they each received; and what sum they have received in 1996–97. [12309]

Mr. Streeter: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 22 January 1997, Official Report, column 603. I shall reply in full as soon as possible.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Bosnia

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the recipient organisations and amounts they received from British Government sources in aid related to (a) infrastructure repair projects, (b) grants to UN agencies and the Red Cross and (c) grants to British and international non-governmental organisations in reconstruction assistance to Bosnia in each year since 1992. [12850]

Dr. Liam Fox: The information is as follows:

ODA has also provided in-kind support to UNHCR (equipment, seconded staff, logistical support, Sarajevo airlift, convoys) to the value of £54.3 million over this period, and £1.94 million in seconded staff and logistics support to WHO.

C) As it runs its own emergency Engineering Unit in Bosnia, the British Government has not normally channelled physical reconstruction assistance to the former Yugoslavia through British and international non-governmental organisations. In financial year 1994–95 £200,000 was granted to Scottish European Aid and £50,000 to the Bosnia Aid Committee of Oxford for reconstruction projects. NGOs have been supported to a total of £10.3 million since 1992 for social, medical and other programmes.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Part-time Employment

14. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the implications for employment policy of the changing balance between part-time and full-time work. [11739]

Mr. Paice: Both full and part-time jobs are increasing. We shall continue with the policies under which 900,000 more jobs have been created and unemployment has fallen by more than 1 million since 1992.

Home-school Agreements

15. Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has received about home-school agreements. [11740]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend continues to receive a variety of representations about home-school agreements.

17. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research her Department has undertaken with regard to the implementation of home-school agreements. [11742]

19. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research her Department has undertaken with regard to implementation of home-school agreements. [11745]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department has commissioned Dr. John Bastiani, an education consultant, to produce guidance to schools on developing effective home-school agreements.

Class Sizes

16. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to visit Redbridge to discuss class sizes in primary and secondary schools. [11741]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to visit Redbridge, although I recently visited South Park infants school in Ilford. Decisions about class sizes are a matter for local education authorities and schools, taking account of local circumstances.

21. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to reduce primary school class sizes in Berkshire. [11748]

Mr. Squire: Decisions about class sizes are not a matter for central Government to resolve, but one for local education authorities and schools to determine, taking account of local circumstances.

28. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has received on the link between class size and educational achievement in the early years. [11755]

Mr. Squire: The Department has received a number of representations about class size and educational achievement in the early years. The Department has also received evidence that the most important factor affecting educational attainment is the quality of teaching.

Nursery Vouchers

18. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent discussions she has had with local education authority representatives regarding the introduction of the nursery voucher scheme in 1997–98. [11744]

Mr. Robin Squire: There have been a number of representations on all aspects of the nursery voucher scheme.

Temporary Contracts

20. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the proportion of people employed on temporary contracts in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France and (c) Spain in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1996. [11747]

Mr. Forth: This information is not available for 1979. According to the latest available Eurostat figures, in 1995 less than 7 per cent. of the UK employees were on temporary contracts, compared with over 12 per cent. in France and 35 per cent. in Spain.

Mathematics Tests

22. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of children gained level 4 in the national curriculum tests in mathematics in 1996. [11749]

Mrs. Gillan: Fifty-four per cent. of 11-year-olds achieved level 4 or above in the 1996 national curriculum mathematics tests. This represented a 10 percentage point increase from 1995.

Teachers' Pension Scheme

23. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultations she has had with local education authority and teacher unions concerning the teachers' superannuation scheme; and if she will make a statement. [11750]

Mrs. Gillan: Officials have conducted consultations with representatives of employers, teacher unions and other bodies about the proposals to reform the arrangements for premature and ill health retirement in the teachers' superannuation scheme. I have personally held meetings with the National Employers Organisation for School Teachers; the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers and the National Association of Headteachers. In addition, the Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for South-East Cambridgeshire (Mr. Paice) has held a joint meeting with the Association of Colleges, the Sixth Form Colleges employers forum and the Association of Principals of Colleges.

School Discipline

24. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has had regarding measures relating to school discipline in the Education Bill. [11751]

Mr. Forth: Since announcing our intention to introduce the discipline measures in the Education Bill, we have received representations from a wide range of bodies with an interest in promoting good behaviour and effective discipline in schools.

Claimant Statistics

25. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the number of people who leave the claimant count but do not go into employment. [11752]

Mr. Forth: A large majority—around 70 per cent. of those who leave the claimant count—go directly into jobs. Among the remainder, the two largest categories receive Government-funded training or sickness-related benefits, while smaller numbers claim other benefits, go into full-time education, or go abroad.

Further and Higher Education

26. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has received regarding the future funding of further and higher education institutions. [11753]

Mr. Paice: A total of 52 representations have been received between the announcement in the Budget on 26 November 1996 and 27 January 1997.

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the growth in student participation in further education in the last three years for which figures are available has been delivered through franchised provision. [12636]

Mr. Paice: Eighty-five per cent. of the growth in Further Education Funding Council funded student numbers in further education colleges between college years 1994–95 and 1995–96 was due to collaborative—franchised— provision. The vast majority of students on collaborative provision are part time, and therefore the contribution of franchising to the growth is likely to have been considerably less in full-time equivalent terms. Figures for other years are not available.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current average staff-student ratio in further education colleges; and what it was in (i) 1992, (ii) 1993, (iii) 1994 and (iv) 1995. [12997]

Mr. Paice: The figures are as follows:

Student-staff ratio: FE sector colleges and HE (FE courses)

1992–93: 14.5:1

1994–95: 15.8:1

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average per capita funding for students in further education in each of the last five years. [12948]

Mr. Paice: The recurrent spending per full-time equivalent student in further education colleges in each of the last five years is as follows:

Year	LEA spending per FTE cash £	Government funding per FEFC funded FTE student cash[2] £
1991–92	2,940	—
1992–93	2,970	—
1993–94	—	2,670
1994–95	—	2,650
1995–96[1]	—	2,600

[2] From 1993–94 the FEFC was established to provide for students studying in further education. The Government funding per funded FTE student series is not comparable with the LEA spending per FTE student series.

Inner-city Schools

27. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the Government's principal priorities for improving standards in inner-city schools. [11754]

Mr. Robin Squire: The whole thrust of Government policy is to raise standards in all schools, be they in inner cities or in any other part of the country. This means, above all, raising levels of pupil achievement, and in particular standards of literacy and numeracy, as measured by the national assessment and testing arrangements. Our aim is for pupils to achieve the highest standards of which they are capable.

We have a wide range of measures in place to help raise these standards. They include the national curriculum and assessment, Office for Standards in Education inspection arrangements, parental information, the improving schools programme and the development of literacy and numeracy centres, to name just a few. It would be wrong to single out three as being more important than any of the others.

Secondary Education Reforms

29. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the Government's programme of reforms of secondary education. [11757]

Mr. Robin Squire: We are on track to complete a series of reforms to raise standards and increase diversity for pupils of all ages. These include greater flexibility on selection policy and more freedoms for grant-maintained schools. My right hon. Friend will shortly be announcing the first tranche of specialist sports and arts colleges.

Jobcentres (Advertisements)

30. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received on the acceptance by jobcentres of advertisements for jobs paying less than £2 an hour. [11758]

Mr. Forth: Information on the representations to the Secretary of State about vacancies accepted by jobcentres with wages of less than £2 an hour is not collected centrally.

The Employment Service, in dealing with vacancies notified by employers to jobcentres, does not have a general policing role on pay since such matters are normally for agreement between employers and workers. However, when employers are offering low wages, people in jobcentres will advise employers about the local prevailing rates of pay for the job and that their vacancy may be difficult to fill.

Since wages councils were abolished, there is now no legal reason why jobcentres could refuse to service an employer's vacancy because of low pay.

School Funding

31. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to ensure that the increase in the educational component of the standard spending assessment for 1997–98 is passed in its entirety by local education authorities to schools. [11759]

Mr. Robin Squire: LEAs will have an extra £633 million. Ministers have consistently urged them to deliver this to classrooms. Authorities that choose to do otherwise will need to justify their decisions to local schools, parents and teachers.

Unemployment-related Benefits

32. Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have claimed an unemployment-related benefit since April 1992. [11760]

Mr. Forth: The following table shows the numbers of people who have experienced at least one spell of claimant unemployment in Great Britain in each year since 1992. The numbers rose up to 1993 but have since fallen substantially.

Year	Claimants (million)
1 January to 31 December 1992	5.30
1 January to 31 December 1993	5.35
1 January to 31 December 1994	5.03
1 January to 31 December 1995	4.59
13 December 1995 to 12 December 1996[1]	4.21

[1] Latest available.

The number of people who have experienced at least one spell of claimant unemployment in Great Britain since April 1992 is 10,167,860. This figure is much less than the total for individual years because people may experience unemployment in more than one year.

Teaching Methods

33. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment by what mechanisms her Department is able to exercise control over the teaching methods employed in local education authority schools. [11761]

Mr. Forth: It is for schools and teachers to choose effective teaching methods. The Government's education reforms are designed to encourage all schools to use the most effective methods to maximise pupil attainment.

Student Grants

34. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average annual maintenance grant paid to university undergraduates in (a) 1978–79 and (b) 1995–96. [11762]

Mr. Forth: The average net maintenance grants after means-testing paid to mandatory award holders by local education authorities in England and Wales in the academic years 1978–79 and 1994–95, the latest year for which data are available, were £840 and £1,520 respectively. These figures include awards to postgraduate certificate of education students. The average maintenance payment given is that received by non-minimum award holders. All mandatory holders in 1978–79 received a minimum grant of £200 irrespective of parental or other income. Since 1990–91, eligible students have also had access to non-means-tested student loans.

Long-term Unemployment

35. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to reduce long-term unemployment. [11763]

Mr. Forth: The success of our economic and labour market policies has helped long-term unemployment to fall by 340,000 since January 1994. The United Kingdom has more people in jobs and fewer out of work than any other major European country, and in the last four years has created more jobs than the other major countries of Europe combined. In his November Budget statement, my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced a further package of measures–including an expansion of project work to every region–to help people who have been unemployed for two years or more to compete effectively for the jobs becoming available.

Schools (Financial Improprieties)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) maintained schools and (b) grant-maintained schools have been investigated for financial improprieties since 1992 or are being investigated. [12976]

Mr. Robin Squire: Local education authorities are responsible for monitoring financial propriety in schools which they maintain. The Department does not maintain records of investigatons by LEAs. The Funding Agency for Schools has the responsbility for the financial monitoring of grant-maintained schools in England. I have asked the chairman of the funding agency to write to the hon. Member with this information in respect of grant-maintained schools.

Nursery Inspectors (Police Checks)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what police checks are made on inspectors employed by contractors undertaking inspections of nursery settings. [13147]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

GCSE Scores (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the percentage of 16-year-olds passing five or more GCSEs at grade C or higher in Lancashire in each year since 1992. [13268]

Mrs. Gillan: The percentage of 15-year-old[1] pupils in maintained schools passing five or more GCSEs at grade C or higher in Lancashire in each year since 1992 is:

	Percentage
1992	36.5
1993	39.4
1994	41.1
1995	41.7
1996	42.6

Academic Selection (Bromley)

Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the impact of her approval of a higher level of selection by academic ability in a number of Bromley schools on the availability of places to local children living in the immediate vicinity of such schools; and if she will make a statement. [11896]

Mr. Robin Squire: The statutory proposals published by Hayes grant-maintained school, Bromley, to select up to 25 per cent. of pupils on the basis of ability were approved by the Secretary of State in December 1996. The other non-selective secondary schools in Bromley have changed their admission arrangements this year to allow them to admit 15 per cent. of children on the basis of ability from September 1997. The Secretary of State's approval was not required for these changes.

The Funding Agency for Schools has the responsibility for ensuring a sufficient supply of secondary school places in the London borough of Bromley. The agency is involved in constant discussions with Bromley schools and the local education authority in order to ensure that there are enough school places for local children.

Local Education Authorities (Administration Costs)

Sir Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement about the powers of local education authorities to retain a percentage of education funding for administration costs before distributing funding to schools. [11953]

Mr. Robin Squire: At present, each local education authority may retain up to 15 per cent. of its potential schools budget centrally, to meet expenditure on administration and other purposes specified in its scheme for the local management of schools. The Government intend to reduce this permitted percentage to 5 per cent. of a redefined PSB. There is, however, no separate limit applicable to administrative as distinct from other central expenditure by LEAs.

Derwent Buildings

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what new proposals she has to provide additional funding to local education authorities which have Derwent buildings, with particular reference to Sheffield. [11928]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend does not propose to base allocations on the specific types of building in an LEA. However, clearly projects at schools with Derwent buildings may meet our published criteria for capital support. Any such bids are considered on their merits against those criteria and in the light of the resources available. Since March 1996, we have allocated capital support totalling £1,833,000 to Sheffield LEA for schools with Derwent buildings.

Further Education Funding Council (Publication Pack)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was (a) the number of copies produced, (b) total cost of production and (c) total distribution cost of the recent publication pack comprising annual report, corporate plan and chief inspector's report from the Further Education Funding Council; and if he will make a statement. [12780]

Mr. Paice: This is a matter for the Further Education Funding Council for England. I have asked the chief executive to reply.

Career Development Loans

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many career development loan applications (a) have been made, (b) were successful and (c) were unsuccessful, by ethnic category. [12832]

Mr. Paice: Information on the ethnic origin of career development loan applicants is not gathered at the application stage. Responses to questions on ethnic origin contained in a follow-up survey on 20 per cent. of successful career development loan applicants as at 31 December 1996 are listed as follows:

Black African/Caribbean: 2 per cent.

Bangladeshi: 1 per cent.

Indian: 2 per cent.

Pakistani: 1 per cent.

White: 87 per cent.

Other: 2 per cent.

Prefer not to say: 5 per cent.

The overall approval rate for career development loan applications, based on information provided by the participating banks, is 70 per cent.

Medical Students

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the ratio of teachers to medical students for each year of study in each year since 1992. [12970]

Mr. Forth: Information on student staff ratios for the years up to and including 1993–94 is contained in "University Management Statistics and Performance Indicators in the UK" published by the Universities Statistical Record, which covers institutions formerly funded by the Universities Funding Council, and in "Student staff ratios in polytechnics and colleges" published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England, which covers institutions formerly funded by the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council.

Comparable information for more recent years is not available. While separate figures are available for the numbers of students and staff respectively, analysed by subject, these cannot reliably be converted to ratios of students to staff because of definitional differences between the two sets of data.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many medical students have dropped out of their studies in each year of the degree course since 1992 (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in England and (c) in the west midlands; and for each year what was the percentage change on the previous year. [12972]

Mr. Forth: Information on drop-out rates analysed by subject of study is not compiled centrally.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students have started medical degrees since 1992 (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in England and (c) in the west midlands; and for each year what was the percentage change on the previous year. [12971]

Mr. Forth: The available information is as follows:

Number of home domicile entrants[1] to first degree medicine and dentistry courses

Year of entry	United Kingdom[2]	Percentage change on previous year	England[2]	Percentage change on previous year	West Midlands[2]	Percentage change on previous year
1992–93[3]	4,885	—	3,677	—	244
1993–94[3]	4,963	+2	3,744	+2	227	–7
1994–95
Medicine	4,909		3,556		174
Dentistry	1,017		659		68
Total	5,926	+19	4,215	+13	242	+7
1995–96
Medicine	5,455		3,936		178
Dentistry	1,047		645		72
Total	6,502	+10	4,581	+9	250	+3

The figures for 1992–93 and 1993–94 are taken from the Universities Statistical Record. The figures for 1994–95 and 1995–96 are taken from the individualised student return collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency.

[1] Based on students who were in their first year of study.

[3] Figures for 1992–93 and 1993–94 cannot be disaggregated between medicine and dentistry courses.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the ratio of teachers to nursing students for each year of study during the period 1992 to present. [12966]

Mr. Forth: The information available on student staff ratios for the years up to and including 1993–94 is contained in "University Management Statistics and Performance Indicators in the UK" published by the Universities Statistical Record, which covers institutions formerly funded by the Universities Funding Council, and in "Student staff ratios in polytechnics and colleges" published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England, which covers institutions formerly funded by the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council. Comparable information for more recent years is not available.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 21 January, Official Report, columns 544-45, regarding the performance of TECs, if she will provide a list of TECs in England showing to what extent each TEC has achieved 100 per cent. effectiveness in financial control. [13082]

Mr. Paice: The Department believes that it could not make public details of the effectiveness of financial controls for individual TECs without these being misinterpreted as a judgement of a TEC's overall financial position. Publication of the risk banding assessment could be misleading to those doing business with TECs and might give rise to a loss of confidence in a TEC's financial position which, while wholly unjustified, could cause serious financial difficulty. All TECs are currently assessed as low risk, it is a condition of their licence that they remain in that category.

Student Loans

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the take-up rate for student loans for each university as a percentage of the individual institution's student population in England for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [13167]

Mr. Forth: The Student Loans Company has advised that data in respect of individual institutions can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The national take-up rate for England of student loans as a percentage of eligible students in publicly funded institutions was 48 per cent. in the academic year 1993–94, 55 per cent. in 1994–95 and 59 per cent. in 1995–96.

Hardship Fund

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the criteria determining student eligibility for the hardship fund. [13176]

Mr. Forth: It is for each further and higher education institution to determine its criteria and procedures for considering applications and making access fund payments to eligible students, in the light of its assessment of individual student need and in accordance with annually reviewed guidance from the Department for Education and Employment, the Further Eduction Funding Council and the Higher Education Funding Council for England.

Homework

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent research she has evaluated in respect of the benefits of homework. [11729]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have received a number of representations on homework from various bodies and members of the public. I published "School Performance and Extra-curricular Provision", a report on research into homework, on 14 January 1997.

Examination Results (Grant-maintained Schools)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement about the A-level results of grant-maintained schools. [11756]

Mr. Paice: The 1996 GCE A/AS-level results show that for candidates in grant-maintained schools attempting two or more GCE A/AS-level subjects, the average point score is 18.0. The average point score for such candidates in GM comprehensive schools—that is, excluding GM selective schools—is 15.9. The average point score per A/AS-level entry for GM pupils is 5.4.

HEALTH

Social Services White Paper

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish his White Paper on social services. [12570]

Mr. Burns: We expect to publish the White Paper on social services shortly.

AIDS and Motor Neurone Disease

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding his Department has made available for (a) AIDS research and projects and (b) motor neurone disease research and projects in the last year for which figures are available. [12478]

Mr. Horam: In 1996–97, the Department's estimated spend on HIV-AIDS research will be £535,000. As yet, no specific research has been commissioned on motor neurone disease. The overall Government spending on AIDS research for 1996–97 was £13.7 million, which includes expenditure by the Medical Research Council and Government Departments; there is relatively little contribution towards HIV-AIDS research from other sources such as charities.

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the number of people suffering from (a) AIDS and (b) motor neurone disease in the last year for which figures are available. [12477]

Mr. Horam: At the end of December 1996, there were 4,040 cases of AIDS reported in the United Kingdom who were not known to have died or left the country. The data are subject to under-reporting and reporting delays and the final figure is therefore likely to be higher. The figures for the number of individuals suffering from motor neurone disease are not collected centrally.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on (a) treating and (b) preventing AIDS in each of the last four years; and how much was spent on publicly funded research in the same period. [13042]

Mr. Horam: Table 1 shows the funding given to health authorities in England for treating and preventing AIDS.

Table 1

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Treatment	132.7	164.3	195.1	185.7
Prevention	52.3	47.6	49.6	51.3

Table 2

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Research	21.8	20.4	19.9	[1]13.7

[1] Estimate

These research figures include expenditure by the Medical Research Council, the Department of Health and other Government Departments. There is relatively little contribution towards HIV-AIDS research from other sources such as charities.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom (a) contracted AIDS and (b) died from AIDS in each of the last four years. [13045]

Mr. Horam: For each of the past four years, the number of diagnoses of AIDS and the number of deaths reported in the United Kingdom by the end of 1996 are given in the table:

Year	Number of AIDS cases diagnosed	Number of deaths reported
1993	1,742	1,284
1994	1,727	1,361
1995	1,556	1,259
1996	943	802

Under-reporting and reporting delays affect figures both for AIDS cases and for deaths, thus the actual numbers, particularly for more recent years, are liable to change and will be greater than those given.

Meningitis

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom (a) contracted meningitis and (b) died from meningitis in each of the last four years. [13040]

Mr. Horam: The number of laboratory-confirmed cases of meningococcal infection and the number of deaths are given in the table:

Laboratory confirmed cases of meningococcal infection and number of deaths, England and Wales

Year	Confirmed cases	Deaths
1993	1,298	173
1994	1,129	149
1995	1,459	196
1996[1]	1,495	230

[1] 1996 data are provisional.

Questions relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on (a) treating and (b) preventing meningitis in each of the last four years; and how much was spent on publicly funded research in the same period. [13043]

Mr. Horam: Details of the cost of treating and preventing meningitis are not held centrally. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The MRC receives its grant in aid from the Office of Science and Technology, which is part of the Department of Trade and Industry and spends approximately £1.5 million on meningitis research a year. The Department of Health commissioned a two-year clinical trial of candidate meningococcal vaccines in 1993 at a cost of £198,528. More research is needed before their suitability for widespread use can be considered. The Department of Health is currently working with the public health laboratory service, the national institute for biological standards and control and the centre for applied microbiology and research to take this work forward. The NHS is known to have spent £220,000 on a number of meningitis-related research projects since 1993.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many PFI bids, other than for building new hospitals, have been completed; [12982]

(2) if he will list the completed PFI schemes and the cost of each. [12983]

Mr. Horam: Thirty-two private finance initiative schemes with a capital value of £1 million or over have been completed since November 1992. The table shows the list of PFI schemes and the cost of each.

Trust	Scheme	Capital value (£ million)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, in respect of proposed PFI schemes to build new hospitals, (a) the date each scheme was agreed by the appropriate individual consortium, (b) the date each scheme was agreed by the appropriate health authority, (c) the stage each scheme has reached, (d) how many and which of the PFIs have signed contracts and (e) how many and which schemes have started construction. [12981]

Mr. Horam: Each trust involved in a private finance initiative scheme will select a preferred bidder from replies to advertisements in the Official Journal of the European Communities. Health authorities, as health care purchasers, are involved in a PFI scheme from outline business case stage onwards and must give formal backing to the scheme for the full business case to be approved. Information on the exact dates of selection of preferred bidder and health authority approval is not held centrally for schemes which have not yet received full business case approval.

Twenty-five proposed PFI schemes for new hospitals have reached preferred bidder stage or beyond. None of these has yet started construction. Information on the status of these schemes is listed in the table.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on compulsory competitive tendering in the national health service. [13065]

Mr. Horam: Market testing is a proven and successful vehicle for improving both value for money and quality of services to national health service patients. As a result of market testing, it is estimated that, since 1983, the NHS has saved a total in excess of £1 billion which has been made available for direct patient care.

Cardiothoracic Surgery

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issues as to the maximum time a patient should be required to wait for heart bypass surgery. [13248]

Mr. Horam: Under the patient's charter, all patients requiring heart bypass surgery and some associated procedures should be treated within 12 months of being placed on a waiting list. Patients are placed on a waiting list only if, in the opinion of the clinician responsible for their care, their condition is stable and does not require immediate attention. Exactly when a patient is admitted should be a matter for their doctor and should depend on their clinical need and the needs of other patients waiting for admission.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients died while awaiting operations for cardiothoracic procedures in the last year (a) in total and (b) by region. [13249]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Minister Without Portfolio, the then Minister for Health gave to the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 19 May 1994, Official Report, column 557.

Geriatric Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with (a) the royal colleges and (b) other health bodies regarding the appropriate treatment of the elderly ill. [13303]

Mr. Burns: The White Paper "The NHS: A Service with Ambitions" clearly states:

> "Older people are the major users of health services, and all services need to take account of their particular needs. Primary care is the focus of care delivery and care co-ordination. The extended primary health care team, including therapists and community pharmacists, working with local social services teams, should ensure timely assessment and diagnosis, and access to appropriate services."

We have had a number of discussion with the royal colleges and other health bodies about the health care of older people, and there was wide consultation on the development of the proposals in this White Paper, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from organisations representing elderly people regarding limitations of stay in respect of hospital care for the elderly; and what steps he is taking to ensure that elderly people who are sick obtain hospital treatment where appropriate. [13304]

Mr. Burns: A number of representations have been received from Members of Parliament, members of the medical profession and the general public regarding hospital care for elderly people. We have made it clear that elderly people throughout the country should receive national health service care on the basis of clinical need.

Prior Options Reviews

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the outcome of the prior options reviews of the Public Health Laboratory Service, the National Radiological Protection Board and the National Biological Standards Board. [13897]

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he is making for the future of the Public Health Laboratory Service; and if he will make a statement. [12778]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced today the broad outcome of the programme of prior options reviews of public sector research establishments which also refers to the general policy on the timing of prior options reviews.

The reviews of the Public Health Laboratory Service, the National Radiological Protection Board, and the National Biological Standards Board have recommended that they should remain within the public sector and that they should each retain their present status as non-departmental public bodies of the Department of Health. They also recommended action to improve their efficiency and effectiveness, in particular through setting in place new systems for managing the bodies' research programmes to better ensure value for money and customer responsiveness; through increased market testing of research; through reviews of internal efficiency and increased market testing of management support functions; and through improved costing of work for third parties.

In addition, action should be taken to strengthen the role of the NRPB's statutory board and to improve liaison with its customers on its international work; the PHLS should continue its current rationalisation programme, further increase income generation, and consider the interface between its central public health laboratory and its communicable disease surveillance centre with a view to further rationalisation; and the NBSB should clarify objectives, and funding arrangements, for its work for the World Health Organisation, and explore the scope for closer working links with a university.

The Government have accepted these recommendations. The reviews of internal efficiency will be conducted using external consultants; they will not re-open issues already settled through the prior options process or through other recent reviews—such as that which resulted in the 1994 restructuring of PHLS—but will focus clearly on whether there is scope for increasing the efficiency of each organisation.

Elective Surgery

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlie decisions by health authorities to curtail elective surgery by surgeons; what assessment he has made of the prevalence of this practice; and if he will make a statement. [12737]

Mr. Horam: It is for health authorities and trusts locally to ensure that contracts for elective surgery reflect patient flows, case mix and other priorities on hospital services.

Orthopaedic Services (South Manchester)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will investigate an urgent review of orthopaedic services in south Manchester; [12738]

(2) how many orthopaedic surgeons have left hospitals in the south Manchester area in each of the last five years; what assessment he has made of the factors underlying their departure; what assessment he has made of the impact of their departure on provision of orthopaedic services in south Manchester; what measures he proposes to address shortages in provisions at times of extreme levels of demand; and if he will make a statement. [12739]

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the level of supply relative to the level of demand for orthopaedic services in south Manchester hospitals; what steps he has taken to ensure adequate provision; and if he will take further measures urgently. [12844]

Mr. Horam: There are five consultant orthopaedic posts in south Manchester. In the past five years, two consultants have retired; one in 1992 and one in 1995. Both were of retirement age and have been replaced. A consultant based at Wythenshawe hospital will leave in March to pursue his interest in paediatric work at another trust. Another consultant has recently resigned and is expected to leave in May. Both men will be replaced and the recruitment process has already begun. South Manchester University Hospitals NHS trust expects to deliver orthopaedic activity according to its contracts with purchasers in the current financial year despite recent changes in consultant staff.

"The House Party"

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, columns 181–82, concerning funding of the game "The House Party", which of the declared financial sponsors of the game received public funds; and if his Department gave guidance on or assent to the expenditure of public money on that game. [12736]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health was not involved in any way with the production of "The House Party" and was neither approached for, nor gave guidance on, nor assented to, the expenditure of public money on the game. General guidance from the Department identifies gay and bisexual men as a key group to be targeted with HIV health promotion. In line with the Government's HIV-AIDS health promotion strategy[1] we would expect such health promotion material aimed at specific groups to be responsible in content and to be carefully targeted.

We understand that seven London health authorities provided, between them, around £8,000 towards the cost of the game. We have no information on any other sponsors who may have received public funding.

[1]"HIV and AIDS Health Promotion, A Evolving Strategy": UK Health Departments, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Intensive Care Services

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children requiring paediatric intensive care have been turned away from a paediatric intensive care unit since 10 October 1996 because the unit's beds were already occupied; and how many of these were then admitted to a (a) general paediatric intensive care bed, (b) specialist paediatric intensive care bed, (c) paediatric high dependency unit bed, (d) adult intensive care bed, (e) adult high dependency unit bed and (f) hospital bed of another type. [12838]

Mr. Horam: Information is not collected centrally in the form requested. Since the intensive care bed state register came into operation on 1 December 1996, 45 requests to locate a paediatric intensive care bed have been received. On each occasion it was possible to direct the referring clinician to an appropriate facility with an available bed.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average annual cost of providing (a) an adult general intensive care bed, (b) an adult high dependency until bed, (c) a paediatric general intensive care bed and (d) a paediatric high dependency unit bed. [12839]

Mr. Horam: Information on adult intensive care and high dependency care is not available centrally.

The chief executive of the national health service executive reported on paediatric intensive care provision last May. Copies of his report have been placed in the Library. The report notes that each paediatric intensive care bed costs at least £250,000 a year to run. No estimate has been made of paediatric high-dependency care costs. A national co-ordinating group is currently addressing the future provision of paediatric intensive care, including its cost. The group will report to the chief executive of the national health service executive in April.

Purchasing Authorities (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the amount of money available to NHS purchasing authorities in Buckinghamshire and Milton Keynes in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [12843]

Mr. Horam: The cash limits for health authorities in Buckinghamshire and Milton Keynes are set out in the tables.

Nurses

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many temporary and agency nurses have been used in hospitals since 1992 (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in England and (c) in the west midlands; and if he will list the figures as a percentage change on the previous year. [12967]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified nurses have left the United Kingdom in each year since 1992. [12968]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available.

Nursing Students

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursing students have dropped out of their studies in each year of nursing courses during the period 1992 to present (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in England and (c) in the west midlands; and if he will list these figures as a percentage change on the previous year. [12965]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally. I refer the Hon. Member to the National Boards for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland for information relating to nursing students.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost per nursing student for each year of study for the period 1992 to present; and if he will list it as a percentage change on the previous year. [12969]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available centrally.

Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority, and identify (a) their qualifications, (b) their other paid or voluntary employment and (c) their other current appointments; and if he will make a statement. [13084]

Mr. Horam: Appointments to the United Kingdom Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority will be announced when membership has been finalised.

NHS Executive

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the NHSE in each of the last three years on (a) conference registration fees, (b) lease cars for senior management, (c) air travel, (d) hospitality and (e) business travel within the United Kingdom. [8485]

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1997, c.185–86]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

Available information is given in the table. Information on conference registration fees is not collected separately. The 1995–96 figures take account of the transfer into the national health service executive of responsibilities, and 292 people, from other parts of the Department of Health during 1995–96.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

EU Subsidies

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful applications have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the last four years to obtain EU subsidies (i) for associations and federations of European interest and (ii) for grants to organisations advancing the idea of Europe; and what funds have already been allocated to the United Kingdom for these purposes. [12346]

The Deputy Prime Minister: This information is not held centrally.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision is made for the monitoring and enforcement of regulation 14 of the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1996; and if he will make a statement. [12779]

Mrs. Browning: Regulation 14 of the 1996 order is intended to restrict the possibility of cross contamination between mammalian meat and bone meal—MBM—and other products. To ensure no such contamination is occurring the state veterinary service has in place a surveillance programme covering farms, feed mills and any site where feed, or ingredients for feed, are produced or stored. Results of this survey are reported in "BSE Enforcement Bulletin", copies of which are in the Library of the House. Whenever a possible breach of the controls on MBM comes to light the SVS will investigate to identify the cause and, if necessary, liaise with the appropriate local authority who have responsibility for enforcement action. To help those needing to clean premises, vehicles or equipment that has been in contact with MBM a set of guidance notes has been produced and circulated widely.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the possible mechanisms for cow to calf transmission of BSE; and what assessment he has made of the most likely route. [12776]

Mrs. Browning: Whether or not maternal transmission occurs is still open to question. The final results of the cohort study, for which preliminary results were published in August 1996, will shortly be presented to the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. It is clear, however, that if maternal transmission does occur it does so only infrequently.

To try to establish which tissues might be involved in maternal transmission, blood, constituent parts of placenta, embryos, uterine washings and milk were inoculated into mice. In separate experiments, milk was also fed to mice. None proved to be infectious. In another experiment, calves were fed the homogenised placentae of infected cows as this was considered, by extrapolation from known evidence for sheep scrapie, to be the most likely route of transmission. The exposed calves survived without developing clinical BSE for seven years, and have recently been killed so that their tissues can be examined for the presence of infectivity. Finally, another large experiment is assessing the role of the embryo itself in transmitting disease. Embryos collected from infected, and clinically affected, cows were implanted into surrogate dams imported from New Zealand, and the surviving calves and their surrogate dames remain under observation in order to determine whether they succumb to BSE. That experiment will not end, however, until 2001, when the youngest calf reaches seven years of age.

In the circumstances, the most likely routes of transmission from cow to calf have already been examined. Should it prove necessary, however, following interpretation of the cohort study, some or all of these options will be revisited as advised by SEAC.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the evidence he has evaluated on whether BSE-infected meat is currently present within the human food chain. [12159]

Mrs. Browning: The Government are committed to ensuring that no BSE-infected meat can enter any food chain.

All BSE suspects are slaughtered on farm and the entire carcase disposed of by incineration. The number of suspect cases is published in the BSE progress report, which is compiled in May and November of each year. Copies of this report are lodged in the Libraries of both Houses.

In addition to the controls on BSE suspects, all those tissues which are known to, or might, harbour detectable BSE infectivity in infected animals—so-called specified bovine materials—must be removed from all cattle at slaughter and disposed of under tight controls.

The Meat Hygiene Service rigorously enforces the SBM controls in slaughterhouses. Substantial additional resources have been made available to it to enable it to achieve our objective of full compliance with the controls.

The State Veterinary Service also carries out regular unannounced surveillance visits to all plants handling SBM. This surveillance is now showing a consistently high level of compliance with the controls. The results are published monthly in the "BSE Enforcement Bulletin." Copies of the bulletin are placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many confirmed cases of BSE there have been in each country in the European Community; and what assessment he has made of the likely country of origin of BSE. [12775]

Mrs. Browning: As at 21 January 1997, the following cases of BSE had been reported in the European Community:

Republic of Ireland: 188

France: 28

Portugal: 61

Germany: 5

Denmark: 1

Italy: 2

A proportion of the BSE cases in Ireland, France and Portugal have been reported in home-bred animals. All reported cases in other countries have occurred in animals which were born in the UK. Investigations are still in progress with respect to the fifth German case, which has been reported as born in Germany as the offspring of a cow imported from Great Britain.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress towards developing a test for BSE in live animals. [12770]

Mrs. Browning: MAFF has put considerable resources into the development of a test to detect BSE in the live animal, but so far no test suitable for use in the field has been developed. At present, BSE can only be suspected in the live animal on the basis of observations of the clinical signs exhibited; confirmation of the clinical opinion is dependent on laboratory examination of brain tissue after death. The development of a live test is particularly difficult with the transmissible spongiform encephalopathies because the specific infectious agent has not been isolated and there is no detectable immune response—normally two prerequisites for developing diagnostic tests. Additional resources are being invested into the development of a BSE diagnostic test and to stimulate research in this area MAFF recently launched an open competition for independent scientists to develop other novel approaches. MAFF is also working in collaboration with French, Dutch and American researchers in the development of tests. Although lines of investigation using urine, blood and cerebrospinal fluid show some promise on clinically affected animals, they are unlikely to be of value in diagnosing sub-clinically infected cattle.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on experiments involving feeding BSE-infected material to cattle, on the sensitivity of cattle to this infected material and on the infectivity of different organs in a BSE-infected animal. [12774]

Mrs. Browning: Cattle, experimentally challenged with BSE infected brain, at 300g, 100g, 10g and 1g have so far succumbed to BSE at the following attack rate:

Proportion of exposed cattle which have so far developed BSE	Challenge dose
10/10	300g
5/10	10g
2/10	1g

The above results reflect the situation five years after exposure. The study is continuing.

Mice have also been inoculated with tissues from confirmed cases of BSE and from experimentally challenged cattle to identify those which contain the BSE agent. Some experiments are not yet complete, but so far: from confirmed field cases, the BSE agent has been detected only in brain, spinal cord and retina; a wide range of other tissues from clinically affected cattle has shown no detectable infectivity following this type of bioassay. These are listed in table 7 of the November BSE progress report, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. In experimentally challenged cattle which were fed a large quantity—100g—of brain from clinically affected BSE cases, infectivity was detected in the distal ileum six months after challenge and was still detectable there, but nowhere else, after a further 12 months—that is, up to 18 months after inoculation. The transmission studies in mice from cattle killed at later stages of incubation are still in progress.

Mice have also been challenged orally, but with a more restricted range of bovine tissues from confirmed cases of BSE. In these studies only brain tissue has proved infectious to the mice.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current incidence of BSE in rare breeds of cattle in the United Kingdom. [12856]

Mrs. Browning: As at 1 January 1997, the number of BSE cases confirmed by breed in Great Britain is:

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those organisations which submitted comments on the proposed amendment to article 18(6) of the Specified Bovine Material Order and the proposed protocol for cleansing SBM rendering lines; and if he will make a statement. [13004]

Mrs. Browning: A public consultation paper proposing an amendment to Article 18(6) of the specified bovine material order and a cleansing protocol for SBM rendering lines was issued to 232 organisations and individuals on 5 December 1996. Responses were received from the following, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House:

Association of Metropolitan Authorities

British Association of Feed Supplement and Additive Manufacturers Ltd.

British Medical Association

British Veterinary Association

Consumers' Association

Humane Slaughter Association

Licensed Animal Slaughter and Salvage Association

Meat and Livestock Commission

Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons

Shropshire County Council

United Kingdom Renderers' Association

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's latest estimate of the number of (a) residual cases of BSE in the British cattle herd and (b) cattle expected to develop BSE before it is finally eradicated. [12825]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the paper published by Professor R. M. Anderson et al, a copy of which can be found at appendix 5 of the November 1996 BSE progress report which has been placed in the Library of the House. That paper predicts that, in the absence of a cull, 6,950 cases are yet to be diagnosed during the lifetime of the epidemic.

Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations 1984

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) individuals and their relevant work establishment and (b) organisations to which copies of the recent review of the Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations 1984 were circulated; and if he will make a statement. [13008]

Mrs. Browning: A discussion paper on the review of the Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations 1984 was circulated on the 20 December 1996 to the following organisations:

Advertising Association
Association of County Councils
Association of District Councils
Association of Metropolitan Authorities
Association of Port Health Authorities
Association of Public Analysts
British Association of Canned and Preserved Food Importers and Distributors Ltd.

Copies of the discussion paper are freely available from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food during the consultation period, which ends on 1 March 1997. Copies of the consultation documents have been placed in the Library of the House. At the end of the consultation period, copies of the responses received will also be placed in the Library of the House.

Urban Food Production

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessments he has made of the benefits to public health of urban food growing; and if he will make a statement. [13011]

Mrs. Browning: The National Food Alliance and SAFE Alliance's joint report, "Growing Food in Cities", published last year, covered the health implications of urban food growing. Although the Department's responsibility for food growing relates primarily to food production on a commercial scale, which tends to be undertaken by agricultural and horticultural enterprises situated in predominantly rural and farming areas, we did respond to the report's recommendations. Our response focused primarily on the Government's commitment to the production of organically grown food, the measures we have taken to encourage conversion to organic farming and Government support for the local marketing of produce. Although our response did not specifically cover public health aspects, we would welcome any increase in urban food production that contributed to the uptake of a healthy and balanced diet.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the arrangements are for integrated administration and control system applications in England and Wales in 1997. [13630]

Mr. Baldry: The deadline for submitting IACS applications in 1997 will again be the latest possible date of 15 May.

In England and Wales, the IACS explanatory booklets and forms will be issued in March. As in previous years, we have consulted closely with industry on the documentation. The separate booklet and form, introduced last year, for livestock farmers who have no interest in the arable area payments scheme, will be retained. Farmers will again receive both a full printout of their last year's declaration of forage, arable and other land areas, which they must check carefully to ensure that all entries are still correct and enter any necessary changes, plus a copy of this printout for their retention.

The latest date for applying for new field numbers so that they can be returned in time for farmers to lodge their 1997 IACS applications will be 1 March. Where changes to field boundaries occur after this date, applications for field numbers should accompany the IACS application form.

I strongly urge farmers to consider whether they need new field numbers now and not to leave applying until the last minute.

Genetically Modified Animals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what circumstances his Department permits the genetic modification of animals; and if he will make a statement. [13086]

Mrs. Browning: Experiments on animals are regulated by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, which is administered by the Secretary of State for the Home Department. MAFF's policy on the genetic modification of livestock, and our research and development programme, is guided by the "Report of the Committee to Consider the Ethical Implications of Emerging Technologies in the Breeding of Farm Animals", the Banner report, published in 1995.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of the Veterinary Laboratories Agency. [13753]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Following the prior options review, the Government have decided that the Veterinary Laboratories Agency should remain an executive agency of MAFF.

The Government have also agreed a number of steps to help improve efficiency on a wide range of research establishments remaining in the public sector. For VLA, we shall be setting targets for increasing competition, enlarging the programme of market testing of non-research and development work and looking at the scope for exchange of areas of work with the Institute for Animal Health. Details of the revised arrangements will be announced in due course. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has made a statement today on the broad outcome of the programme of prior options reviews of public sector research establishments, which refers to the general policy on the timing of prior options reviews.

Horticulture Research International

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of Horticulture Research International. [13754]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Following the prior options review of Horticulture Research International , the Government have decided that the organisation should remain in the public sector, for the present, as an executive non-departmental public body sponsored by MAFF.

HRI has achieved a great deal since its creation in 1990 and its high reputation is well deserved. Nevertheless, we should strive to secure further improvements where possible for the benefit of both HRI and the horticulture industry. The Government's substantial restructuring investment in the body provides an excellent foundation. The Government have also agreed a number of steps to help improve efficiency on a wide range of research establishments remaining in the public sector. My Department will be working closely with HRI management over the coming year to resolve outstanding operational and staffing matters and to develop the body's science strategy and business plan. This will provide the basis of a report to ministers at the end of 1997. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has made a statement today on the broad outcome of the programme of prior options reviews of public sector research establishments, which refers to the general policy on the timing of prior options reviews.

Fisheries

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on fish stocks of EU aid for Spanish fishermen to renew their fleet; and what proposals he has to provide assistance to the east coast fishing fleet. [12641]

Mr. Baldry: EU or national aid for the construction of fishing vessels is authorised only where member states have met the targets in their multi-annual guidance programmes for reducing fleet capacity. These targets are based on independent scientific advice aimed at improving the balance between resources and their exploitation. Performance is assessed annually in a report from the Commission to the Fisheries Council.

The last such report, in July 1996, showed that the UK still had progress to make in meeting its end 1996 targets, and was not therefore eligible for aid. Targets for the next series of MAGPs, to run from 1 January 1997, and future EU policy on fleet renewal, are still under discussion in the Fisheries Council.

Vessels and ports on the east coast are, however, eligible for the various measures in the UK sectoral plan under the EU's financial instrument for fisheries guidance and, where appropriate, the PESCA initiative.

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of current levels of fish imports from the Faroe Islands with particular reference to the United Kingdom's east coast fishing fleet. [12656]

Mr. Baldry: I am aware of recent reports about the impact of supplies from the Faroes on prices for fish at markets such as Grimsby, but provided they respect EU reference price levels there are no grounds for action to be taken.

The EU market depends heavily on imports for its supplies, and fish processors in particular depend heavily on imported raw material because their needs cannot be met from EU resources.

WALES

Clwyd Interpreting and Communication Service

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the ability of local authorities to bear the costs previously borne by the Welsh Office in respect of the Clwyd interpreting and communication service after April 1997; [12666]

(2) if he will support the Clwyd interpreting and communication service to maintain current services after April 1997. [12665]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Clwyd interpreting and communication service was allocated grant of £55,530 for the period April 1992 to March 1997 under the flexible community care grant scheme. All FCC grants were of a fixed duration of up to five years. Local authorities were required to set out, at the time of application for grant, the arrangements for future funding of projects which were to continue beyond the period of Welsh Office grant.

It is for the relevant local authorities to consider whether to continue funding the service.

Assisted Places Scheme

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children in Wales (a) are currently assisted under the assisted places scheme and (b) have been assisted under the scheme since it began; and what assessment he has made of the educational attainment of children assisted to date. [12608]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There are currently 887 children with assisted places, more than 2,100 pupils have benefited since 1981. Examination results of assisted place pupils have been consistently high. In 1995, there was a 95 per cent. grade A to C pass rate at GCSE and a 68 per cent. grade A to C pass rate at A-level.

Unfit Housing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate of the number of houses unfit for human habitation. [12978]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The 1993 Welsh house condition survey estimated that 151,200 occupied first homes in Wales were unfit at that time. Since the beginning of 1993–94, more than 27,300 mandatory renovation grants with a value of £467 million have been completed. A further house condition survey is under way and the results will be available in 1998.

A465 (Accidents)

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) fatalities and (b) accidents there have been on the A465 Aberdulais to Glynneath road since 1979. [13061]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Police records indicate that between 1 January 1979 and 31 December 1995, there were 34 fatalities and 408 personal injury accidents on the A465 between Abersdulais and Glynneath.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the surpluses carried forward or deficits incurred by the training and enterprise councils in Wales at the end of each of the last three years for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [12841]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is contained in the table. The figures show that the reserves consist of funds which have already been used to acquire assets, or funds required to meet day to day needs, or funds which were committed to be spent over a reasonable period. The balance available for discretionary spending—£4.6 million—represents funds which have been earmarked by the TECs for planned expenditure during 1996–97 and for longer-term projects.

Officials in my Department continue to monitor closely the level of TEC reserves ensure that they are clearly related to demonstrable working capital needs or reinvestment plans.

Reserve levels in Wales are projected to fall to £18.191 million by March 1997. Of this, some £3 million will be available to support TEC discretionary spending outside the Government-funded training and enterprise programmes in 1997-98.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) foreign and (b) United Kingdom-owned companies in Wales received RSA funding for the period between January 1994 and December 1996; and if he will make a statement. [12842]

Mr. Hague: Between January 1994 and December 1996, 141 foreign-owned and 567 UK-owned companies received RSA payments towards projects in Wales. Further information on offers of assistance over £75,000 is published in "Labour Market Trends"—previously the Employment Gazette—following the first payment of grant.

Student Funding

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount of Government funding for postgraduate students for subsistence costs in (a) 1978–79 and (b) 1995–96. [13166]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Separate information for Wales is not available. Expenditure on maintenance grants for postgraduate students in the United Kingdom by the Department for Education and Employment, the British Academy, the European university institute and the research councils in financial years 1978–79 and 1994–95, the latest year available, was £31.0 million and £90.5 million respectively.

In addition, for students domiciled in England and Wales, maintenance expenditure by local education authorities on mandatory awards to postgraduate certificate of education students and discretionary awards for other postgraduate students was £11.9 million in the academic year 1978–79 and £38.0 million in 1994–95.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the take-up rate for student loans for each university as a percentage of the individual institution's student population in Wales for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [13168]

Mr. Evans: The Student Loans Company has advised that data in respect of individual institutions can only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The national take-up rate for Wales of student loans as a percentage of eligible students in publicly funded institutions was 43 per cent. in the academic year 1993–94, 51 per cent. in 1994–95 and 58 per cent. in 1995–96.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of full-time university students in Cardiff are entitled to a full student grant. [13169]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those unitary authorities in Wales that made discretionary grant awards to 18 to 25-year-old students in the year 1995–96, indicating the total amount awarded. [13177]

Mr. Evans: Information in the age categories requested is not collected. Data on discretionary awards for the academic year 1995–96 are not yet available. The numbers of, and expenditure on, discretionary awards made by local education authorities in Wales in the academic year 1994–95, before the reorganisation of local government in Wales, is published in tables 8(a) and (b), and 9(a) and (b) of "Statistics of Education, Student Support" volume 1994–95; copies of which are in the Library. Tables 8(a) and (b) show data for section 1(6) and section 2 awards in higher education; tables 9(a) and (b) show data for section 2 awards in further education and give separate data on awards to students aged 16 to 18 years and to those aged 19 and over.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount of expenditure on full-time university student grants in Wales in (a) 1978–79 and (b) 1995–96. [13180]

Mr. Evans: In 1978–79 local education authorities in Wales spent £28.5 million on mandatory awards for maintenance and fees for students at university and other higher education and further education institutions. A further £5 million was spent on discretionary full value and lesser value awards, some of which will have been made to higher education students. In 1994–95, the latest year for which data are available, expenditure on maintenance and fees for full-time higher education mandatory and discretionary awards was £124 million.

University Research Institutions

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list Government funding for research at university institutions in Wales, broken down to show the departments to which funding was awarded in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96. [13178]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information is not available for individual departments within higher education institutions in Wales. Information on research income for the former public sector institutions prior to 1994–95 is not available. The available information is shown in the table.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students registered as full-time, in higher and further education institutions in Wales in (a) 1978–79 and (b) 1995–96. [13179]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There were 43,950 full-time and sandwich students at further and higher education institutions in Wales for 1978–79, compared to a provisional figure of 102,598 for 1995–96. The 1995–96 figure excludes a small number of students on further education courses at higher education institutions, and on higher education courses at further education institutions.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many incapacity benefit claimants in the small sample survey carried out between October 1995 and May 1996 were awarded benefit for exceptional circumstances under each of the categories of regulation 27. [10994]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

As a result of a specific disease or disablement, there would be a substantial risk to physical or mental health if the claimant were found fit for work	19
The claimant suffers from a severe uncontrolled or uncontrollable disease	37

The claimant is due to have a major surgical operation or other major therapeutic procedure within the next three months	1

1. Taken from a survey of incapacity benefit claimants attending for examination in November 1995 where the examining doctor advised that the claimant fell into an exceptional circumstances category.
2. Two claimants fell into two categories so that the total number of cases covered by the exceptional circumstances categories with scores below the threshold in the functional part of the test was 56.

Supported Accommodation

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the terms of reference of the interdepartmental review of the funding of supported accommodation within the housing benefit system; when he expects the review to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [11820]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) on 15 October, Official Report, column 858.

Our aim is to conclude the review as soon as possible. We have underway a major research project to assess the numbers of recipients of payments of support costs and the total amount of housing benefit paid. This research is complex and will take some time to complete. We do not rule out the possibility of interim measures during the review should they prove necessary.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of extending cold weather payments to all pensioner households. [12984]

Mr. Evans: Last year's actual expenditure was £62 million. Including all pensioner households in the Scheme would have cost last year an extra £90 million to £140 million, bringing the total cost to between £150 million and £200 million.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will revise the arrangements in regard to the determination of areas as qualifying for cold weather payments; and what factors underlay the lack of cold weather payments to the most exposed areas of the Wentworth constituency. [12963]

Mr. Evans: Each year after March, the cold weather payments scheme is reviewed in consultation with the Meterological Office, making full use of its advice and expert meterological knowledge. Representations from hon. Members will be considered as part of the annual review. It is not the intention of the scheme to reflect precisely all local temperature variations, but to achieve national coverage with a reasonable degree of local sensitivity. Cold weather payments are made when the average temperature is recorded as, or forecast to be, 0 deg C or below over seven consecutive days in any weather station area.

Funeral Bonds

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the provision of a funeral bond certificate purchased to provide a funeral service on death is counted as an asset for the purposes of assessing means-tested social security benefits. [12598]

Mr. Roger Evans: A funeral bond will be treated as a capital asset unless it takes the form of life assurance or it cannot be redeemed by the person for whom it has been acquired. However, a funeral bond which would otherwise be disregarded in assessing benefit may still be treated as capital if it was purchased with the intention of securing benefit or increasing the amount of benefit payable.

War Pensions

Mr. Legg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes he proposes to the war pensions scheme following his consultations with the Central Advisory Committee on War Pensions on 26 November 1996; and if he will make a statement. [13845]

Mr. Lilley: The general response of committee members was that the proposals represented a sensible and balanced approach. A warm welcome was given to some of the proposals, but there was concern about a small number. After full consideration of all comments, I have decided to proceed with the package, with some modification to reflect the consultation. My right hon. Friend Lord MacKay of Ardbrecknish is writing today to committee members with details of our decision.

The final form of the proposed changes to war widow's and war disablement pensions, to be implemented from 7 April 1997, is as follows:

War Widow's Pension

I intend to expand the categories of automatic entitlement to a war widow's pension. From April a war widow's pension will be awarded where the late husband was in receipt of unemployability supplement, and was assessed as at least 80 per cent. disabled due to service at the time of his death. Payment for funeral expenses will be made in the same circumstances.

A war widow's pension, which ceases on the start of cohabitation, will be restored following the cessation of cohabitation, bringing the position for cohabitees into line with that for those who remarry.

Because of the extension of restoration, war widows gratuities, currently payable when a widow remarries or starts to cohabit, are no longer appropriate and will no longer be payable.

Following representation, we will not proceed with the original proposal to abolish war widow's rent allowance for new claims.

War Disablement Pension

I intend to abolish rank differences in war disablement gratuities. The new rates will be based on those previously appropriate to an army major or equivalent.

I also intend to abolish the lower rate of clothing allowance. All payments will be made at the equivalent of the current higher rate.

I intend to introduce minimum disablement gateways for new claims to certain supplementary allowances which may be paid with the basic war disablement pension. For war pensioners mobility supplement and the allowance for lower standard of occupation the threshold will be set as proposed at 40 per cent. For unemployability supplement the threshold will be at 60 per cent., rather than the 80 per cent. originally proposed.

New awards of the allowance for lower standard of occupation and unemployability supplement will be restricted to those aged under 65 at the date of claim. Existing recipients of these allowances will not be affected by the proposed changes.

First payment for all awards of pension and allowances will be made from the first day of entitlement, rather than at present where some are made from that day, and others from the start of the first pay week following.

On backdating of awards, I intend to introduce the changes as originally proposed, with the exception of the maximum limit applying where the claimant's health had prevented him claiming earlier, or where the unavailability of classified papers has prevented an earlier claim, or where the Ministry of Defence had overlooked arrangements to forward papers on invaliding or death in service to this Department, or where there had been a change of medical opinion or legal interpretation. We had originally proposed a maximum limit for backdating of one year prior to the date of claim in such cases. Following representation, we now propose to set the limit at three years.

The War Pensions Agency will also introduce the following changes to the administration of claims to war widow's and war disablement pensions.

The agency will cease issuing reminders to return claim forms, but will keep our procedures under review to ensure that no potential pensioner is left in doubt about the importance of returning claim forms promptly. But, following representation that it would have an adverse effect on the ability of ex-service organisations to conduct their business, the agency will not proceed with the proposal to cease issuing copies of decisions to third parties who were involved in making the claim.

The agency also will cease the issue of four-yearly continuation notices in cases which attract a long-term interim assessment. Pensioners will still be clearly told to let the War Pensions Agency know if their condition changes, and that it is possible to review assessments.

When seeking a review of their assessment, pensioners will in the first instance normally be asked to provide evidence that they have sought medical treatment or advice for their disablement since they were last assessed. The pensioner will not have to prove deterioration, simply show that there are grounds for carrying out a full review.

The changes to the original proposals are a direct result of the concerns expressed by members of the central advisory committee, and further improve the balance of a package which has found general approval. They will enable the War Pensions Agency to make savings on administration of around £1 million a year.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of applying a universal war pensions disregard in relation to the calculation of housing benefit and council tax benefit; and if he will make a statement. [13254]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) on 29 November, Official Report, columns 415–16.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for the jobseeker's allowance have been refused since the scheme began. [11746]

Mr. Roger Evans: An estimated 96,000 claims to jobseeker's allowance have been refused since the scheme began.

Notes

1. Based on claims to jobseeker's allowance refused benefit recorded by the Benefits Agency and administered by the income support computer system and jobseeker's allowance payment system during October to December 1996. This includes claims disallowed on labour market grounds and also those refused because conditions of benefit entitlement were not met. Claims for income-based jobseeker's allowance made by claimants already in receipt of the contributory element are also included.

2. The figure does not include any claims for transitionally protected jobseeker's allowance solely administered by the NUBS2 computer system.

3. Includes claims from unemployed people refused income support up until 6 October 1996, prior to the introduction of JSA.

4. Figures may be subject to revision.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of restoring benefit entitlement to asylum seekers in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999-2000. [12803]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The cost of restoring entitlement to income support, income-based jobseeker's allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit for asylum seekers is estimated at £200 million in 1997–98, £240 million in 1998–99 and £250 million in 1999–2000.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which Benefits Agency areas have been selected to be run by the private sector; where advertisements have been placed; and what is the projected time scale for the process. [13032]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Involvement of the private sector in Benefits Agency is part of a wider programme of change to deliver improved services at significantly reduced cost.

The following Benefits Agency areas have been selected to be run by the private sector: child benefit operations; Benefits Agency medical services; the service provider for the automation of post offices and payment of social security benefits; and, as part of the Department's Prime—private sector resource initiative for management of the estate—project, the ownership and management of the Department of Social Security's premises will be transferred to the private sector through a long term partnership.

Advertisements have been placed in the Official Journal of the European Communities. In addition, the advertisement for BAMS appeared in Government Opportunities. Current plans are that the advertisement for child benefit operations will be placed by 31 January and that the contract is to be awarded by spring 1998, while the contract for BAMS is to be awarded by the end of spring 1997. The contract for the service provider for the automation of post offices and payment of social security benefits was awarded in May last year. The Prime contract is expected to be awarded in autumn 1997.

In the Yorkshire, Westcountry, East London and Anglia Benefits Agency directorates, a further initiative involving greater collaboration with the private sector will involve three service providers working in partnership with the Benefits Agency area management teams, assisting in the day-to-day running and having input into the strategic management. The partnerships will run from the end of spring 1997 for about 12 months during which time the service providers will be expected to make specific proposals for more efficient, effective and economic delivery of the agency's business.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Castle Buildings Talks

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown of the costs incurred in 1996 by the talks process at Castle buildings, specifying the amount which the Irish Government (a) has agreed to pay, (b) has paid and (c) is due to pay. [12174]

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

Payments to elected delegates: £270,735.36

Payments to party support staff: £46,386.62

Party allowance research grants:

£269,964.00

Independent chairmen and aides: £392,020.49.

Block B, Castle Buildings:-

(a) Initial set-up costs: £266,000.00

(b) Operational costs £290, 435.97

Additional NIO Staff Costs: £204,389.50.

The Irish Government are bearing an equal share of the running costs of the multi-party negotiations, excluding any in respect of strand 1.

During the period 10 June 1996 to 30 November 1996, under this agreement, the Irish Government have been invoiced for, and has paid a total of £461,615.33 sterling.

The Irish Government's share of costs for the period 1 December 1996 to 31 December 1996, for which they are currently being invoiced, is £118,886.95.

Drinking Water (Fluoride and Aluminium)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what levels of fluoride, in parts per million, have been added to the waters of Tandragee and Holywood for each month up to April 1996; [12435]

(2) if he will list the quantities of aluminium added to the drinking water in Northern Ireland indicating the quantities added in each year since it was first added; [12438]

(3) in what quantity aluminium is now added to the drinking water in Northern Ireland, given the figures by treatment plant. [12439]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Water Service under its chief executive, Mr. H. R. F. Plester. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from H. R. F. Plester to Mr. Peter Robinson, dated 28 January 1997:

You recently put down three parliamentary questions about Water Service operational matters which have been passed to me for reply as its Chief Executive. I shall answer each in turn in this letter according to the order in which they were tabled.

No 109

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what levels of fluoride, in parts per million, have been added to the waters of Tandragee and Holywood for each months up to April 1996.

The level fluoride added to the water put into public supply at Holywood and Tandragee is governed by the provisions of the following legislation:

the Water (Fluoridation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1987; and the Water Quality Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1994.

Under the provisions of the Order fluoride levels are, so far as is reasonably practicable, to be maintained at one milligram per litre. The maximum limit permitted by the regulations is 1.5 milligrammes per litre. The water supplies at Holywood and Tandragee met the regulatory standards for the year prior to April 1996. Fluoridation takes place at the water treatment plants serving Holywood and Tandragee under arrangements with the health authorities which the Water Service inherited from the previous local authority water supply undertakers at local government reorganisation in 1973.

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will list the quantities of aluminium added to the drinking water in Northern Ireland indicating the quantities added in each year since it was first added.

Aluminium is not added to drinking water supplies. Various aluminium compounds are used at certain water treatment plants during the treatment of raw water supplies to make them fit to be put into the public supply. These compounds are used as coagulants to remove impurities from the raw water during the clarification phase of the treatment cycle. They are then removed by further treatment processes. Traces of these compounds may however pass into supply. Traces of naturally occurring aluminium which is abundant in many rocks and soils, such as those in the Mourne reservoir catchment, from which water supplies are derived may also pass into supply. Maximum permitted levels of aluminium for the public water supply are set by the Water Quality Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1994. These regulations, which incorporate EC and national controls and standards, set a standard of 200 microgrammes per litre, with a derogated level of 500 microgrammes per litre permitted for supplies derived from areas where aluminium is naturally occurring.

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, in what quantity aluminium is now added to the drinking water in Northern Ireland, giving the figures by treatment plant.

As the previous reply indicates aluminium is not added to drinking water supplies. It may occur in water supplies as a trace element after raw water treatment by aluminium compounds during the clarification process, or because of natural aluminium levels in the geological strata from which a water supply is derived. Water Service's performance in respect of the level of aluminium in water supplies is recorded in the first Drinking Water Quality Report issued by the Water Service in June 1996. A copy of this is enclosed for your information. A second drinking water quality annual report is due to be published in June this year.

Mr. Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of children in Northern Ireland currently have dental fluorosis. [12436]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available. A 1993 survey of children's dental health showed that 34 per cent. of children in Northern Ireland had enamel opacities. There are a number of possible causes of such opacities and it is not possible to determine the proportion which are due to fluorosis.

Mr. Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimates he has made of levels of dental fluorosis among children in Northern Ireland following fluoridation of the water supply. [12437]

Mr. Moss: The incidence of enamel opacities due to fluorosis in children would not be expected to increase following the fluoridation of water supplies.

Road Safety Education

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) when he received the report he commissioned on staffing levels in the road safety education branch; what were its conclusions; and what measures he has taken to implement these; [12444]

(2) what assessment he has made of the staffing levels for road safety education officers relative to those in Great Britain. [12451]

Mr. Moss: The Department received this report in October 1996. It compared staffing levels with those in Great Britain and recommended, among other things, that the number of road safety education officers be increased. I have decided, in the light of competing priorities for road safety funding, that the planned level of staffing remains appropriate and do not propose to increase their numbers. Road safety remains a priority for the Government and the overall resources allocated to it, particularly for passenger and goods vehicle enforcement and accident remedial and traffic calming measures, continue to increase year on year.

I am placing copies of the report in the Library.

Litter

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the measures his Department proposes to take in respect of the accumulation of litter during winter along the Sydenham bypass, Belfast. [12445]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Environment and Heritage Service under its chief executive, Mr. Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 28 January 1997:

As Chief Executive of Environment and Heritage Service, I am responsible for all operational aspects of the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland's environmental policies. I am therefore responding to the Parliamentary Question you put down in the House of Commons on 23 January 1997:

"To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will make a statement on the measures his Department proposes to take in respect of the accumulation of litter during winter along the Sydenham By-pass, Belfast".

With the exception of certain designated roads such as motorways, the Litter (Northern Ireland) Order 1994 places a duty on district councils to keep roads clear and free of litter. Belfast City Council is therefore responsible for dealing with litter on the Sydenham By-pass to your recent letter was forwarded to them for action. It was gratifying to note their rapid response to the request for a clean up.

I trust you find this reply helpful.

Environmental Legislation

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what environmental legislation applicable in Great Britain since 1990 has not been applied to Northern Ireland. [12446]

Mr. Moss: The information in relation to primary legislation is set out in the table. The information does not cover legislation where there are only minor differences between Northern Ireland and Great Britain or where structural differences mean that equivalent legislation is unnecessary. A detailed comparison of all subordinate legislation could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Title	Purpose	Northern Ireland position
Environmental Protection Act 1990 (c.43)
Part I	Integrated pollution control and air pollution Control by local authorities	Draft industrial pollution control order to be laid before Parliament in early 1997
Part II	Waste on land	Draft waste and contaminated Land Order to be laid before Parliament in early 1997
Part VIII Section 140 and 142	Miscellaneous	Equivalent provisions in the draft waste and contaminated Land Order to be laid before parliament in early 1997
Noise and Statutory Nuisance Act 1993 (c.40)		Need for parallel provisions being considered as part of a comprehensive review of policy on noise and statutory nuisance
Environment Act 1995 (c.25) Part II
Section 57	Contaminated land	Equivalent provisions in the draft waste and contaminated Land Order
Section 58	Abandoned mines	To be included in the Proposal for a Draft Water Order in Council to be published for consultation later this year
Part IV	Air quality	Similar provisions to be included in an Order-in-Council programmed for 1998–99
Part V Section 92	Miscellaneous National waste strategy	Equivalent provisions in the draft waste and contaminated Land Order
Section 93–95	Producer responsibility	Similar provisions to be included in Order-in-Council to be made in summer 1998

Scrabo High School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at which secondary schools in Newtownards accommodation will be available for the pupils currently at Scrabo high school following its proposed closure; and if he will make a statement. [12572]

Mr. Ancram: The future of Scrabo high school is a matter for the South-Eastern education and library board to consider in the first instance. If the board wishes to proceed with the closure of the school, it would have to publish a development proposal to that effect. This procedure would allow all interests in the area full opportunity to comment on or object to the board's proposal, before any decision is taken by the Department of Education.

Disability Living Allowance and Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the cost to public funds in the last year for which figures are available of payments of (a) disability living allowance and (b) incapacity benefit, and if he will list the amount paid relative to the total number of electors in each constituency. [12447]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a response to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 27 January 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question on the cost to public funds for payments of Disability Living Allowance and Incapacity Benefit relative to the total number of electors in each constituency.

To provide the information in the form you requested would require a major clerical exercise generating a disproportionate cost. The two benefits concerned are paid through a GB computer system and the routine information provided on a quarterly basis is limited to the payment details of "live" cases for a selected week. For this reason I am unable to give you year ending figures broken down by constituency for 1995/96. However, the attached tables show the number of "live" cases for both benefit types per constituency and their associated costs for the week ending 29 February 1996. I have also shown the total amount paid for each benefit in that year.

Smokeless Fuel Regulations

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress his Department has made in bringing the smokeless fuel regulations into line with Great Britain. [12448]

Mr. Moss: The regulations prescribing smokeless fuel authorised for use in smoke control areas in Northern Ireland correspond to those in Great Britain. However, only those fuels to be marketed in Northern Ireland are prescribed in the Northern Ireland regulations. Amending regulations are made periodically to meet requests from manufacturers for the inclusion of additional fuels.

Road Deaths

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many road deaths there were in (a) 1995 and (b) 1996; and how many children were killed. [12450]

Sir John Wheeler: Deaths due to road traffic accidents in 1995 totalled 144, including 19 children.

At 30 November 1996 there had been 126 deaths, including 11 children.

Royal Ulster Constabulary (Sexual Orientation)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the RUC's working party on the implications of sexual orientation in the RUC will complete its work; and if he will ensure that the report is made public. [12822]

Sir John Wheeler: It is anticipated that the working party examining the concept of sexual orientation and its implications for the Royal Ulster Constabulary will take approximately 12 months to complete its work. Such a period is necessary not only to consult members of the force but to facilitate appropriate research with concerned bodies within the community regarding issues such as the frequency of homophobic attacks.

It is unlikely that the final report of this working party will be made public, due to the sensitivity and confidentiality of the issues involved.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's policy on the issue of homosexuality in respect of security clearance of candidates for appointment as constables. [12823]

Sir John Wheeler: The sexual orientation of an applicant to the Royal Ulster Constabulary does not at any stage form part of the selection process. The Royal Ulster Constabulary is committed to the principle of equal treatment for all members or job applicants and will take all necessary steps to achieve it. Appointment to the RUC is based solely on merit.

Education and Library Boards

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what calculations he has made in respect of the savings that will be produced from a reduction in the number of education and library boards. [12925]

Mr. Ancram: The Government have estimated that savings of approximately 2 million per year would be produced as a result of the restructuring of the education and library boards.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 557, with respect to water privatisation, what factors make such a privatisation impracticable in the near future. [12947]

Mr. Moss: Privatisation of water and sewerage services in Northern Ireland will require legislation and is dependent upon the collation of complex data which will enable any sale to proceed. It also requires the creation of a suitable system of regulations along with the introduction of a system of direct charging to replace the current arrangements whereby the majority of the costs of water and sewage services are recovered through the regional rate. All of this will take several years to put in place.

Criminal Damage and Criminal Injuries

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many claims in respect of (a) criminal damage and (b) criminal injuries have (i) been received and (ii) resulted in payment of compensation; and what were the (1) average and (2) total sums paid in respect of each category of claim in each of the 10 most recent years for which figures are available. [12851]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Compensation Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Denis Stanley. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. A. Stanley to Mr. William Ross, dated 28 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply, on behalf of the Compensation Agency, to your recent Question regarding criminal injury and criminal damage claims.

The tables below set out the details you requested. Information is only available from 1989–90 onwards.

Criminal injuries

	Claims received	Claims cleared in year resulting in award	Average value of claims cleared £	Total compensation paid £
1989–90	8,973	4,895	3,141	16,449,745
1990–91	9,382	5,889	3,417	19,547,358
1991–92	10,924	6,357	3,830	25,019,951
1992–93	9,689	6,673	4,217	26,569,813
1993–94	9,444	6,154	4,918	29,601,804
1994–95	8,970	6,493	5,673	34,634,993
1995–96	9,563	5,930	5,987	36,345,097

Criminal damage

	Number of claims received	Claims cleared in year resulting in award	Average value of claims cleared £	Total compensation paid £
1989–90	4,993	3,228	6,933	22,124,107
1990–91	3,243	3,255	5,929	22,711,159
1991–92	5,942	2,284	9,384	33,096,467
1992–93	5,530	3,554	9,171	75,927,801
1993–94	5,863	3,841	11,990	67,870,586
1994–95	2,264	3,971	20,505	53,811,825
1995–96	1,891	1,579	36,925	32,102,156

Many claims involve interim payments made over more than one year and this is reflected in the total amounts of compensation paid each year.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when regulations to comply with directive 79/923/EEC will be published in Northern Ireland. [13068]

Mr. Moss: The draft Shellfish Waters Regulations (Northern Ireland) for the transposition of directive 79/923/EEC will be published for consultation in the near future.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Northern Ireland waters, to which the shellfish waters directive applies, have still to be designated. [13069]

Mr. Moss: An area in Stragford lough was designated under the shellfish water directive in 1983. Consideration will be given to whether there is a need for further designations when the proposed regulations to transpose the directive have been made.

Public Service Vehicle Licence Holders

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public service vehicle licence holders, by category, there are in each constituency. [12846]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police (Vauxhall)

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, columns 266–67, on police accommodation in Lambeth, when the strategic review of the provision of police accommodation was commenced; by whom it was conducted; what its conclusions were; and what actions have been taken as a result. [12376]

Mr. Maclean: The Commissioner informs me that a review of police accommodation in Lambeth began in July 1996 to determine priorities for new police accommodation in the borough. It is being conducted by a police superintendent working to a member of the area senior management team.

The review focused initially on a feasibility study into an alternative approach to the provision of custody accommodation in Lambeth and concluded that a centralised criminal justice facility would be a more effective alternative to a traditional police station on the Grafton square site. The term "criminal justice facility" has been adopted by the Metropolitan police to describe the proposed development. The development would house all the cells, and process the related administration, for the police stations in the borough of Lambeth. It would also include an identification suite, and a sector base and station office with facilities for pubic inquiries.

This conclusion will affect other police accommodation needs in Lambeth, which are now being considered as part of the continuing review. Action to date has been confined to an amended planning application for the Clapham site.

Identity Cards

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Deaprtment what progress is being made towards introducing a national voluntary identity card; and if he will make a statement. [13070]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 22 August 1996 plans to introduce a voluntary national identity card. As set out in the Queen's Speech at the opening of Parliament, we intend shortly to publish a draft Identity Cards Bill for consultation.

Youth Justice System

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to publish a Green Paper on the youth justice system; and if he will make a statement. [13199]

Mr. Maclean: The ministerial group on juveniles has been considering what more can be done to identify children at risk of offending and to address the problems which put them at risk. The Government intend to publish a Green Paper shortly, setting out a strategy for early intervention with children and young people at risk of offending.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of his Department's budget has been spent on measures relating to crime prevention, per project, in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [13200]

(2) if he will make a statement on the proportion of his Department's budget which is spent on crime prevention measures. [13201]

Mr. Maclean: Home Office expenditure specifically allocated to crime prevention in 1996–97 is £22.5 million. That figure is separate from, and additional to, public expenditure of £7 billion on the police service, an increase of more than 100 per cent. since 1978–79. The prevention of crime is one of the key functions of the police service.

It is not possible to identify the level of public expenditure on the police service or other programmes within the Home Office budget which is devoted to crime prevention.

As regards Home Office support for crime prevention projects, it is estimated that, since 1988, over 3,800 crime prevention measures have been initiated under the safer cities programme. There have been 365 successful bids in the first two rounds of closed circuit television challenge, in 1994–95 and 1996–97.

Crime prevention projects have been funded under a number of other Government programmes which, since 1994, have been subsumed into the single regeneration budget.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

British Academy of Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many of the shortlisted bidders to run the British academy of sport she has visited. [13518]

Mr. Sproat: None—deliberately.

Millennium

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her Department's latest estimate of the cost of millennium projects at Greenwich; and what are the projected increases in construction costs contained within that estimate. [10870]

Mrs. Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Arts Council

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the grant in aid to the Arts Council for each year since 1993–94, together with the estimates for (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000, (i) in cash terms and (ii) indicating the annual change in each year in (1) cash, (2) real and (3) percentage terms. [13205]

Mr. Sproat: The Arts Council of England has received grant in aid to fund its operating costs and grant programmes as follows:

£ million

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–00

Sports Sponsorship

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what reports she has received on the United Kingdom sports sponsorship market for 1996; and if she will make a statement. [13996]

Mr. Sproat: The Department's sports sponsorship consultant has recently submitted his annual report on the condition of the UK sports sponsorship market. This report confirms that sports sponsorship in the UK generated more than £300 million in 1996, a real-terms increase of some 19.3 per cent. over the corresponding figure for 1995. Most people are well aware of the major sponsorship deals agreed by football, rugby, and cricket, but I am particularly pleased to see from this report that there were a large number of sponsorships agreed in 1996 involving schools and young people, most notably British Telecom's support of school sports worth £750,000. This is an excellent example of the links called for in the Government's policy statement, "Sport: Raising the Game", issued in July 1995.

The expansion in the UK sports sponsorship market is extremely good news for the sports sector, particularly given that this is additional to the thousands of national lottery projects being supported up and down the country.

Furthermore, the sportsmatch partnership between sport, business and Government continues to flourish, and was responsible for an additional £6.4 million to the overall sponsorship market. A wide range of sports have benefited from this excellent scheme.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Whitemoor Prison (Escape)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Attorney-General if he has received a report from Mr. Justice Kay regarding his decision to stop the trial of six men accused of the escape from Her Majesty's prison Whitemoor; and when he expects to decide whether proceedings for contempt of court will be instituted against the editor of the Evening Standard newspaper. [13411]

The Attorney-General: I expect to receive a report from Mr. Justice Kay shortly and will consider it in conjunction with any representations which may be made on behalf of Associated Newspapers Ltd., publishers of the Evening Standard, the editor or the journalist responsible for the particular article. Once this material has been considered a decision will be taken.

ENVIRONMENT

Landlord and Tenant Acts

Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the Landlord and Tenant Acts in the light of the recent judgment against Thames Ditton lawn tennis club. [12814]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We have no plans for a review, but we will keep a careful watch on any further developments in this case.

Greenfinches

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are taken by his Department to ascertain whether greenfinches presented for export from the United Kingdom to (a) Malta and (b) the EU have not been taken illegally from the wild; and if he will make a statement. [12693]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 27 January 1997]: My Department has no authority to check greenfinches presented for export. It is an offence to take greenfinches from the wild, and to possess or sell them, without a licence. If my Department receives information that such offences may have taken place or are likely to do so, full details are passed to the police, who decide what action to take.

Local Government Finance

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the overall percentage increase or decrease in cash terms of the settlement for county councils in England in each financial year since 1979–80 and (b) the rate of inflation at the start of each of those financial years. [13424]

Mr. Curry: The information requested is in the table. From 1990–91, non-domestic rates have been pooled nationally and then redistributed between areas as a constant amount per head. These redistributed amounts are not included in the table.

	Rate support grant (£ million)	Block grant (£ million)	Revenue support grant (£ million)	Year on year percentage change in grant	Percentage change in GDP deflator on previous year
1979–80	£2,231				16.7
1980–81	£2,703			+21.2	18.3
1981–82		£4,003			9.7
1982–83		£3,956		–1.2	7.1
1983–84		£3,973		+0.4	4.6
1984–85		£4,010		+0.9	5.0
1985–86		£3,832		–4.4	5.5
1986–87		£3,614		–5.7	3.0
1987–88		£3,846		+6.4	5.3
1988–89		£3,773		–1.9	6.7
1989–90		£3,471		–8.0	7.0
1990–91			(see note 2)		8.0
1991–92			(see note 2)		6.4
1992–93			(see note 2)		4.2
1993–94			£7,108		2.9
1994–95			£7,943	+11.7	1.8
1995–96			£7,324	(see note 3)	2.5
1996–97			£6,998	(see note 3)	2.5
1997–98			£6,173	(see note 3)	2.0

Notes:

1. The figures for 1979–80 and 1980–81 include cover in respect of districts.
2. From 1990–91 to 1992–93 revenue support grant for county areas was paid into the collection funds of district councils.
3. The figures for 1995–96 1996–97 and 1997–98 relate only to payments to the county councils as they existed in the relevant year. Local government reorganisation obscures meaningful comparisons of the change in grant for these years.
4. Figures for the period 1979–80 to 1989–90 are from the most recent edition of the rate support grant (England) report.
5. Redistributed national non-domestic rates are not included in the table.

Ammonium Nitrate

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if health and safety inspectors have visited the port of Tilbury to examine the conditions for the landing, storage and subsequent carriage of imported ammonium nitrate; and if he will make a statement. [13535]

Sir Paul Beresford: Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive have not visited the port of Tilbury to look at this particular activity. However, a visit is scheduled for the week commencing 3 February to consider the land use planning implications of the storage of ammonium nitrate and to inspect the arrangements for its safe storage and transport.

Housing Transfers

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the names of the authorities to be included in the programme for housing transfers by councils in 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [14082]

Mr. Curry: I am today announcing the names of the authorities which will be able to proceed, on a voluntary basis and subject to the approval of their tenants, with proposals to transfer their housing stock to private sector landlords in 1997–98. Eight authorities will be transferring all of their housing, amounting to almost 36,500 dwellings in large-scale voluntary housing transfers, generating capital receipts of over £350 million. A further nine authorities will be transferring a total of 18,572 dwellings with the aid of estates renewal challenge fund round 1 funding. The full programme involves 17 local authorities and over 55,000 dwellings.

This reflects the Government's commitment to a continuing programme of transfers as a means of generating private finance to repair and improve the condition of social housing.

The authorities which have gained a place on the programme, together with the intended recipient registered social landlord are as follows:

(i) Borough of Allerdale (4,800 dwellings) to existing housing associations

(ii) Bexley council (9,037 dwellings) to Orbit Housing Association and London and Quadrant Housing Trust

(iii) Cheltenham borough council (6,058 dwellings) to a newly created local housing company

(iv) Congleton borough council (4,258 dwellings) to a new housing association or local housing company

(v) Eden district council (1,623 dwellings) to Eden Housing Association

(vi) Kerrier district council (3,761 dwellings) to Kerrier Homes

(vii) South Oxfordshire district council (5,067 dwellings) to South Oxfordshire Housing Association

(viii) West Somerset district council (1,889 dwellings) to West Somerset Rural Housing Association.

The following nine authorities will be transferring their stock with the aid of ERCF funding and also have a place on the programme:

(i) London borough of Brent (1,505 dwellings) to a subsidiary of Ealing Family Housing Association

(ii) London borough of Hackney (3,112 dwellings) to three new local housing companies

(iii) London borough of Lambeth (500 dwellings) to Metropolitan Housing Trust

(iv) London borough of Merton (972 dwellings) to Pollards Hill Housing Association

(v) Sandwell metropolitan borough council (7,053 dwellings) to three new local housing companies

(vi) Sheffield city council (1,802 dwellings) to a new community-based local housing compnay

(vii) Stoke city council (935 dwellings) to a new community-based housing association

(viii) Tameside metropolitan borough council (904 dwellings) to West Ashton Homes

(ix) London borough of Tower Hamlets (1,789 dwellings) to Poplar Housing and Regeneration Community Association.

A further application to transfer a number of dwellings to a local housing company is presently being considered.

To date, 53 authorities have disposed of all or part of their stock to new landlords and a further three more are due to do so by 1 April 1997. The Government are committed to a continuing programme of transfers and to extending the benefits of transfer to urban and non-traditional housing. The range of recipient landlords has been widened from traditional housing associations to local housing companies, and the indications are that some authorities on the 1997 programme will take advantage of the new legislation and select a local housing company as their recipient landlord. In addition to increasing the diversity of acquiring landlords, the Exchequer levy on certain transfers has been lifted for a period of three years, the size limit has been increased to up to 12,000 dwellings, and certain restrictions on the use of capital receipts generated from transfers have been removed.

Transfers will remain voluntary and require tenant support as they do now but, as a result of these and other measures, we expect an expanding programme of transfers over the coming years.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12702]

Dr. Liam Fox [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The 1996 FCO departmental report describes those activities of both wings of the FCO connected with the environment. On 20 December, a Command Paper on the measures adopted at the 19th consultative meeting of the Antarctic treaty was presented to Parliament, CM3483. The measures include the designation of specially protected areas and their management. On 1 November, section 7 of the Antarctic Act 1967 concerning the conservation of Antarctic fauna and flora came into force, No. 2666(C77).

The ODA did not issue formal papers in the environmental area in 1996, but consulted widely on a variety of relevant issues such as forests and issued guidance papers. These include the July edition of the manual of environmental appraisal and, in August, guidance to staff, both diplomatic wing and ODA, on international environmental agreements. Copies of both are in the Libraries of the House.

European Union (Business)

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for February; and if will list the major EU events for the next six months. [13781]

Commonwealth Institute

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for future assistance to the Commonwealth Institute. [13913]

Mr. Rifkind: I value the work of the Commonwealth Institute and recognise the efforts it has made to modernise its operations, increase revenue and seek private sector investment. I am therefore pleased to confirm that we have decided to give the institute a grant in aid of £800,000 for the financial year 1997–98; and £600,000 for the year 1998–99. The question of funding beyond 1999 will be subject to normal public expenditure constraints and procedures. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will continue to support the institute's attempts to obtain further private sector investment.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Alcohol Booster Kits

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received concerning alcohol booster kits; and if he will make a statement. [10881]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have received no representations on alcohol booster kits, other than a letter from my hon. Friend the Member for Saffron Walden (Sir A. Haselhurst), which was passed to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food as the responsible Department.

EU Funds (Applications)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful attempts have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the last four years to obtain funds from the EU's (i) Retex, (ii) small and medium enterprises initiative, (iii) Rechar II and (iv) Resider II schemes: and what funds have been allocated to the United Kingdom under each of these schemes. [12343]

Mr. Greg Knight: The European Commission's notices for the Community initiatives to which the hon. Member refers were published on 1 July 1994. The notices stated that member states' programmes should be sent to the Commission within four months. Because of the late adoption by the Commission of many of the programmes under these initiatives in the UK and throughout the EU, the first offers of grants were not made until the second half of 1995. The latest figures for project applications from UK local authorities and other bodies for these four initiatives are:

Community initiative 1994–99	Number of applications received since 1994	Number of applications approved	Number of applications rejected	Number of applications still under consideration
Retex II	201	86	57	58
SME	437	63	67	307
Rechar II	1,509	575	557	377
Resider II	235	89	103	43
Total	2,382	813	784	785

The allocations to the UK for each of the four Initiatives are:

	£ million
(i) Retex II	26.71
(ii) SME	49.14
(iii) Rechar II	119.16
(iv) Resider II	33.18

Trade Fairs

Mr. Pearson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research has been conducted by his Department on the effects an annual bidding competition for trade fair representation by United Kingdom companies will have on long-term planning by chambers of commerce and trade associations. [13409]

Mr. Nelson: None.

The annual trade fairs bidding competition is a long-established mechanism. In the past, we have helped industry to plan ahead by undertaking to support some large—so called "core"—events for three years. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Keighley (Mr. Waller) on 17 January, Official Report, columns 392–93.

My intention is to make all support for trade fairs after the current round available through the sector challenge. This also provides industry with the opportunity to submit projects which span a three-year period.

Export Promotion

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money the United Kingdom currently spends per capita on export promotion; what is the European average; and if he will list the sums for each other EU country. [12863]

Mr. Nelson: As shown in the latest British Overseas Trade Board annual report, the total cost of the overseas trade services during 1994–95 was £224.7 million, or £3.83 per capita.

With regard to export promotion expenditure by other European countries, I refer the hon. Lady to the letter of 6 December 1995 from my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms Quin) a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hendry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further steps he intends to take to help United Kingdom firms succeed through exporting. [13995]

Mr. Nelson: It is crucial that UK firms take full advantage of business opportunities overseas. The assistance available from Government under their overseas trade services can often play a vital role in this process.

I am therefore publishing today a new range of menus which explain clearly and concisely how the OTS can help UK firms win in each of our top 80 export markets. The menus will enable business links and the OTS to provide export information assistance tailored to the needs of individual companies. It is part of the new "winning through exporting" family of business support. I have placed copies of this material in the Library of the both Houses. It is available on the Internet and will shortly be available on CD-ROM.

Mergers

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his policy in respect of receiving representations directly from the parties to a proposed merger which has been referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in advance of the publication of the commission's report and his final decision; and if he will make a statement. [13296]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 29 January 1997]: It is the task of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to conduct a detailed and thorough investigation of any merger which has been referred to it. Accordingly, the policy of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is not himself to receive representations from the parties to mergers prior to announcing his decision on the MMC's report and publishing it. While the report remains confidential, it would be inappropriate for Ministers' views to be influenced, or appear to be influenced, by lobbying by any particular interest. During an MMC inquiry, the parties are encouraged to make representations to the MMC and any representations received by the Department are forwarded to the MMC for their consideration. After the MMC's report is received, representations from the parties on the content of the report are not, except in exceptional circumstances, seen by a Minister until after the decision on the report is made.

SCOTLAND

NHS Trusts (Deficits)

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the NHS trusts which had a real retained deficit at the end of 1995–96 and (b) the size of the deficit recorded by each of these trusts in that year. [12049]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Two NHS trusts, Central Scotland Healthcare and the Victoria Infirmary, Glasgow, had a retained deficit at the end of 1995–96. In both cases, the deficits occurred as a result of book losses relating to fixed asset disposals. Only one of these trusts, Central Scotland Healthcare, had an in-year deficit—£726,000—in 1995–96.

Oil and Gas Installations

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions in 1996 and 1997 his Department's (a) officials and (b) consultants have had in connection with decommissioning of oil or gas installations in relation to the Oslo and Paris Commission; on what dates; and in what form. [12595]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Scottish Office officials have had many discussions, including interdepartmental discussions about the decommissioning of oil and gas installations. No consultants have been employed by the Scottish Office to consider this issue.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the licence for disposal of Brent Spar No. 975—SOAFD re/No. FKB/296—signed on 9 May 1995 remains in operation. [12632]

Mr. Robertson: The licence expired on 8 November 1995.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what application the (a) best practicable environmental option and (b) licence granted for disposal of the Brent Spar has outside British territorial waters. [12935]

Mr. Robertson: In seeking approval to its abandonment programme for the Brent Spar, Shell UK Ltd. was required to undertake a best practicable environmental option assessment. This concluded that the BPEO was deep-sea disposal of the installation at a site within United Kingdom-controlled waters in the north-east Atlantic. The Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 licence applied only in respect of the designated disposal site.

West Dunbartonshire Council

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the financial allocation to West Dunbartonshire council for 1997–98. [12819]

Mr. Kynoch: The grant aided expenditure assessment for West Dunbartonshire council for 1997–98 is £112.3 million, and provision of £13.7 million has been made for loan and leasing charges. Government support for the council's expenditure in 1997–98 is shown in the table.

	£ million
Basic aggregate external finance (AEF)	109.0
Additional AEF from self-financed mismatch scheme	1.9
Supplementary mismatch scheme	0.9
District equalisation scheme	0.15
Total	111.9

The council's total level of AEF is 59 per cent. per head of population higher than the average level for English local authorities.

Energy Conservation

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he proposes to improve energy conservation in the housing stock in Scotland. [12858]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Home Energy Conservation Act 1995, which was introduced in Scotland on 1 December 1996, will promote conservation by requiring local authorities to draw up strategies to achieve significant improvements in energy efficiency in residential accommodation. Local authorities have been set a target of a 30 per cent. improvement over the next 10 to 15 years. For new homes, the building regulations are to be amended to include a requirement for an energy rating. This will also strongly encourage conservation.

NHS Staff

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the numbers employed for the period September 1990 to 1995 inclusive expressed as whole-time equivalents and numbers, by gender and by ethnic status for the staff groups (1) chiropodists, (2) foot care assistants, (3) dietitians, (4) occupational therapists, (5) occupational therapy helpers, (6) orthoptists, (7) physiotherapists, (8) physiotherapy helpers, (9) diagnostic radiographers, (10) therapeutic radiographers, (11) radiographer helpers, (12) technical instructors in professions allied to medicine, (13) other professions allied to medicine, (14) optometrists, (15) pharmacists, (16) speech and language therapists, (17) assistant speech and language therapists, (18) whole-time chaplains, (19) assistant chaplains, (2) clinical scientists, (21) clinical psychologists, (22) clinical psychotherapists, (23) dental auxiliaries, (24) medical laboratory scientific officers, (25) laboratory support grades, (26) medical technical officers and assistants, (27) other professional and technical staff, excluding works staff, (28) administrative and clerical, (29) general managers, (30) senior managers, (31) maintenance, (32) health care assistants and (33) nursery nurses. [13240]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As the information requested is lengthy, I have arranged for it to be placed in the Library of the House.

Speech and Language Disorders

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for centres of excellence in Scotland similar to those in England, for the assessment and diagnosis of children with specific speech and language disorders; and how the planned provision in Scotland differs from that in England and Wales. [13472]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Health boards are responsible for assessing the needs of their residents with speech and language disorders and determining, with general practitioners, the services required to meet those needs and where to purchase them. Local authorities have the responsibility to meet the therapy needs of children with special speech and language needs.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what current research into specific speech and language disorders is being sponsored by his Department and its agencies. [13449]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office is currently funding four research projects into speech and language disorders. The information is set out in the table:

Title	Amount
Evaluation of the Phoniatric, Psychological and General Health Status Benefits of Speech Therapy in Patients with Dysphonia	£120,300 (over three years)
Comprehension and Production of Explanations in Children with Language Impairment	£98,400 (over two years)
Towards Effective Assessment of Right Hemisphere Language and Communication in Stroke and Brain Tumour	£109,800 (over three years)
CLEFTNET SCOTLAND: Application of New Technology to the Treatment of Intractable Speech Disorders Associated with Cleft Palate Within a Scottish Context	£90,000 (over two years)

In addition to these projects, the Scottish Office is part-funding an ear, nose and throat consultant within the Medical Research Council Institute of Hearing Research in Glasgow which is co-ordinating a multi-centre trial into the potential deficits following otitis media with effusion, also known as glue ear, in children which may include disorders of speech and language. The current phase of the trial will end in about 18 months time.

The health services research unit in Aberdeen university, which is core funded by the Scottish Office, is undertaking a project looking at the problem of aphasia following stroke, by determining current practice and provision of speech and language therapy for sufferers, and assessing existing evidence about alternative forms of treatment. This project is due to end in March 1997.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the training of Scottish speech therapists is allocated to training in centres of excellence outside Scotland. [13448]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Poll and Council Tax Arrears

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of uncollected arrears of poll tax and council tax for each local authority in total and as a percentage of each authority's current council tax revenue. [13537]

Mr. Kynoch: The table shows the amount of council tax councils have budgeted to collect for the current year and the available information on uncollected council tax and community charge income in total and expressed as a percentage of the amount budgeted to be collected for the current year. The available information on uncollected community charges and council tax includes uncollected water charges and is therefore not directly comparable with the amount of council tax which authorities budgeted to collect in 1996–97.

Language Unit

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the recommended facilities and staffing levels for a language unit. [13471]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office makes no recommendations on these matters.

NHS Trust Deficits

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the NHS trusts which are currently forecast to show a deficit at the end of 1996–97 and (b) the size of the end-of-year deficit forecast for each of the trusts. [12051]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Fife Healthcare is the only NHS trust in Scotland projecting a retained deficit for 1996–97 as a result of a funding gap. The sum involved in £1.3 million and the trust chairman and the new chief executive are addressing it.

Two other trusts are projecting retained deficits arising from the disposal of assets at less than book value.

Dental Services

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to increase public awareness of the complaints procedure in respect of NHS dentists; and in which languages information leaflets are published. [12845]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 January 1997]: All dentists were provided with stocks of the leaflet and poster publicising the new NHS complaints system for display in their practice. The leaflet is available in Hindi, Urdu, Punjabi, Gujarati and Cantonese.

Fossil Fuel Levy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the projected total amount collected from the fossil fuel levy in Scotland for the first year of its operation; and what is the total figure to date. [13283]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 29 January 1997]: The Fossil Fuel Levy (Scotland) Regulations came into effect on 16 February 1996. The amount projected to be collected by the levy from then until 31 March 1997 was £4.7 million.

Settlement of the amounts due to 31 March 1997 need not be made until the end of May 1997. The amount due to be collected so far is therefore not known.

TREASURY

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how his Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans they have to extend their use in future within the Department. [12271]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The UK sustainable development indicators published in March 1996 are preliminary, intended to stimulate discussion about how we measure whether our development is sustainable. The indicators were developed to address and monitor the key sustainable development issues highlighted in the UK sustainable development strategy published in 1994.

As such, they have been used to inform decisions about environmental priorities for action and work programmes in the year ahead, which will be reported in the annual White Paper on sustainable development.

The indicators are one of many sources of information about the way in which economic activity interacts with the environment. As the indicators are revised and refined, they should become more useful as a source of environmental information to inform consideration of the environmental implications of policy options.

Pension Age Population

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of (a) men and (b) women living in the United Kingdom who are over the age of 65 years. [12172]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 30 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the number of men and women living in the United Kingdom who are over the age of 65 years.

The latest available population estimates relate to mid-1995. The estimated number of those resident in the United Kingdom, who are aged over 65, is 3,477.7 thousand men and 5,193.1 thousand women.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many old age pensioners there are in Wales. [12546]

Mrs. Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 30 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the number of old age pensioners there are in Wales.

The latest available resident population estimates relate to mid-1995. The estimated number of people of pensionable age (65 or over for men and 60 or over for women) in Wales is 581.4 thousand.

Death Statistics

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of deaths resulting from (a) AIDS and (b) motor neurone disease in the latest year for which figures are available. [12568]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Spencer Batiste, dated 30 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to your recent question on the number of deaths from AIDS and motor neurone disease in the latest year for which figures are available.

In 1995, the latest year for which figures are available to the ONS, there were 552 deaths for which HIV infection or AIDS (ICD* 042–044) and 1,141 for which motor neurone disease (ICD* 335.2) respectively were the underlying cause of death, derived from death registration.

As it is known that many of those who complete death certificates refrain from putting AIDS and HIV infection as a cause on what is essentially a public document, the number of deaths with codes ICD 042–044 is an underestimate of the true number of deaths from these causes.

From the voluntary confidential register of AIDS cases at the Public Health Laboratory Services AIDS Centre, the number of deaths in AIDS patients in England and Wales in 1995 was 1,149. The aforementioned underestimate of deaths means that this number, too, is an underestimate.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of men aged 50 years or over were in full-time employment on 31 March for each year since 1980. [12551]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 30 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the percentage of men aged 50 years and over who were in full-time employment for each year since 1980.

The information for Great Britain available from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) is shown in the table below. There are no comparable figures available prior to 1984.

Earnings (Scotland)

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the proportion of full-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each of the former regional council areas of Scotland, (c) each of the new unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (d) Great Britain with hourly earnings in term of gross pay, both including and excluding overtime, below (i) £6.31, (ii) £5.89, (iii) £4.42 and (iv) £3.00 for the categories (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual, (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manual, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers; [11715]

(2) what are the average weekly earnings (i) including and (ii) excluding overtime for part-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each of the former regional council areas of Scotland, (c) each of the new unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (d) Great Britain, broken down for (1) men and (2) women in (A) manual employment, (B) non-manual employment and (C) for all workers; [11713]

(3) if he will list the average earnings in terms of gross pay, both including and excluding overtime, for full-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each of the former regional council areas of Scotland, (c) each of the new unitary authority areas in Scotland and (d) Great Britain for (i) manual, (ii) non-manual and (iii) all workers; [11717]

(4) what is the percentage of full-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each of the former regional council areas of Scotland, (c) each of the new unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (d) Great Britain, earning in terms of gross pay, both including and excluding overtime, less than (i) £239.16 per week, (ii) £223.27 per week and (iii) £157.45 per week in the categories (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual, (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manuals, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers; [11716]

(5) what is the percentage of workers on adult rates of pay in part-time employment whose hourly earnings (a) including and (b) excluding overtime pay are less than (i) £4.42 per hour,(ii) £5.89 per hour, (iii) £6.31 per hour and (iv) average weekly earnings in (w) Scotland, (x) each of the former regional council areas of Scotland, (y) each of the new unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (z) Great Britain, broken down in each case into (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual, (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manual, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers. [11714]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The latest information, from the April 1996 new earnings survey, is contained in tables which have been placed in the Library.

Abortion

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many abortions were performed nationally in each of the last eight quarters. [12042]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Chris Smith, dated 30 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the number of abortions performed nationally in each of the last eight quarters.

The figures requested are shown in the table below:

Number of legal abortions performed in Great Britain, June quarter 1994 - March quarter 1996

	Number
June quarter 1994	43,930
September quarter 1994	44,773
December quarter 1994	42,974
March quarter 1995	45,695
June quarter 1995	42,444
September quarter 1995	43,566
December quarter 1995	41,885
March quarter 1996	48,425

Construction Industry

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met representatives of the housebuilding industry to discuss the employment status of building operatives; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of that meeting. [13594]

Mr. Jack: I arranged for my officials to meet representatives of the House-Builders Federation on 20 December 1996. I understand that they had a useful and constructive meeting at which the Inland Revenue was able to offer practical help for the federation's members with their reviews of the employment status of their workers. The House-Builders Federation will continue to be included in future consultations with the industry on employment status.

Company Cars

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his Department's plans to remove tax incentives to drive greater mileages. [13337]

Mr. Jack: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) on 16 January 1997 Official Report, column 449.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent Council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union. [13994]

Mr. Oppenheim: On 27 January, I attended the Economic and Finance Council of the European Union in Brussels on behalf of the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Council discussed the Dutch Presidency's work programme for ECOFIN. This emphasised the need for budget discipline in the Community, co-operation to tackle unemployment and implement structural reform and measures to combat fraud.

Over lunch, the Council held a structured dialogue with Ministers from central and eastern European countries. The discussion focused on the need to adopt medium-term budgetary frameworks in these associated countries and invited Ministers from them to share their experiences of tackling budgetary consolidation.

External lending mandates and guarantees for the European investment bank were discussed and a possible basis for agreement identified. However, no final decisions were taken as this is subject to a UK parliamentary scrutiny reserve.

The Commission reported that it would shortly be announcing the jury to shortlist designs for the common side of euro coins. The final design for the coins will be discussed again at a future ECOFIN meeting.

The Commission also agreed to produce formal proposals for lending to the Ukraine and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. These will also be discussed at a later meeting of the Council.

Income Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual cost of exempting the first £200 of income from savings and investments from income tax. [12797]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The full year cost at 1997–98 income levels of exempting from income tax the first £200 of income from savings and investments which are currently taxable is estimated to be around £0.5 billion. It is not possible to provide an estimate which takes into account tax-free savings instruments such as tax-exempt special savings accounts, personal equity plans and so on.

Tax and National Insurance Contributions

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1996, Official Report, columns 637–38, how many individuals who pay tax but do not pay national insurance contributions are pensioners or of pensionable age; and how many individuals pay national insurance contributions but do not pay income tax. [13019]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 28 January 1997]: In 1996–97, there are 4.82 million individuals who pay income tax but who do not pay national insurance contributions, some 3.62 million of these are over pension age—65 for men, 60 for women; the remaining 1.2 million individuals do not pay NIC because their earnings or self-employment income is below the NIC threshold, but pay income tax because of their income from occupational pensions and investments. About 1 million individuals pay national insurance contributions but do not pay income tax.

Earnings

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of people in each region of the United Kingdom who earn below the average weekly wage by (a) gender and (b) age groups (i) under 20 years, (ii) 20 to 45 years and (iii) 45 to 65 years; and if he will make a statement. [12649]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 29 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 30 January 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the number of people in all regions of the UK earning below the average weekly wage by gender and age groups.

The latest information from the New Earnings Survey, April 1996, is contained in the attached tables.

Uncollected Tax

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much uncollected tax was owed to the Inland Revenue at the end of the last financial year; and how much has been written off in each of the last five years. [13038]

Mr. Michael Jack [holding answer 29 January 1997]: The amount of uncollected assessed tax owed to the Inland Revenue as at the end of October 1995, the latest date for which figures are available, is £2,908.6 million or 3.3 per cent. of the net tax charged. This amount represents tax assessed and collectible but not paid as at the date.

The amounts of tax remitted or written off for each of the last five years are shown in the following table.

Year to end October	Amount remitted/written off £ thousands
1995	755,995
1994	1,159,694
1993	1,580,200
1992	1,694,246
1991	883,923

This information is available in the Inland Revenue Board's report.

The Board of Inland Revenue allows remissions of tax on a case-by-case basis as an aspect of responsibilities for the care and management of the various taxes.

Insolvencies, where the Inland Revenue has very little control over the amount recoverable, account for the vast majority of tax written off.

Taxation of Trusts

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue effect on the Exchequer in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 of putting the taxation of trusts on the same basis as the taxation of individuals; and if he will make a statement. [13256]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 29 January 1997]: I regret that the information as requested is not available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue effect on the Exchequer in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 of applying a 40 per cent. capital gains tax rate for interst in possession trusts; and if he will make a statement. [13257]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 29 January 1997]: The capital gains tax yield is tentatively estimated to increase by around £50 million if a capital gains tax rate of 40 per cent. were applied to those gains of trusts which will be chargeable at 23 per cent. for 1997–98. The yield for later years would depend on future levels of capital gains. In practice, the revenue effect of such a change may be significantly different due to changes in taxpayers' behaviour.

The circumstances of beneficiaries of interest in possession trusts vary. Some may not be liable to capital gains tax at all, while others may be liable at 40 per cent. on their personal gains. Applying a rate equal to the basic rate to all such trusts reflects this range of potential liabilities while at the same time avoiding the need for beneficiaries to become involved in making capital gains tax computations.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Education Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of gross domestic product has been spent on education in each year since 1991; and if she will make a statement. [13064]

Mr. Robin Squire: The latest published time series presenting the data is as follows:

Year	Percentage of GDP spent on education
1991–92	5.1
1992–93	5.3
1993–94	5.2
1994–95	5.2
1995–96	5.1

This table covers public expenditure on education in the United Kingdom.

Unemployment (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what policies have been introduced to bring down the jobless total in Lancashire since 1992. [13276]

Mr. Forth: As a result of sound macro-economic policies and a flexible deregulated labour market, unemployment has fallen over the last four years by over 1 million in the United Kingdom, and by nearly 24,000 in Lancashire.

In order to help unemployed people obtain the jobs economic growth is now delivering, a wide range of employment and training measures are available both nationally and in Lancashire. From February, a total of 31 project work pilots—one in Preston, Lancashire—will help up to 100,000 people. In addition, a new contract for work pilot initiative in Lancashire, starting in April, will explore ways in which the talents of the private sector might be used to help more very long-term unemployed people back to work.

Training (York)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the number of people aged 25 years or under living in the York parliamentary constituency attending a Government-funded training scheme (a) currently and (b) at the same date in each of the previous five years. [13581]

Mr. Paice: Information on Government-supported training programmes is not available for people living in individual constituencies.

College Funding

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons she has decided not to fund the demand-led element of further education colleges' funding beyond the autumn term in 1996. [13564]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend has made no such decision. In the light of the unprecedented rate of expansion of the further education sector after the academic year 1994–95, she has requested the Further Education Funding Council for England to consider what steps are consistent with the containment of total expenditure in future years within the Government's planned levels of expenditure on further education. She will consider the council's advice on the available options when it is received.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which TECs have been converted to chambers of commerce, enterprise and training; and which TECs are currently applying for this status. [13590]

Mr. Paice: The TECs which have become chambers of commerce, training and enterprise are those in Milton Keynes and north Buckinghamshire, Northamptonshire, Sussex, South Derbyshire, Oldham, St. Helens, Rotherham, Wolverhampton, Shropshire and Hereford and Worcester. Applications to form chambers of commerce training and enterprise have been received from local partners in Greater Peterborough, Wigan, Coventry and Warwickshire, and Norfolk and Waveney.

Grant-maintained Schools

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list all the (a) secondary schools and (b) primary schools in Kent that currently have grant-maintained status and the date on which each school achieved grant-maintained status. [13423]

Mr. Forth: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Career Development Loans

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many career development loans have been awarded in the years 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 to date (i) in each standard region, (ii) in Great Britain as a whole and (iii) in each of the areas covered by the career development loan plus pilot scheme. [13589]

Mr. Paice: Details of approved career development loans by region and nationally for the years 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 to date are:

Standard region	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97 to date[1]
North East	529	515	352
Merseyside	314	280	229
North West	897	878	629
Yorkshire and Humberside	1,152	1,072	712
West Midlands	924	956	563
East Midlands	819	862	574
Eastern	1,116	1,131	734
South East	2,263	1,868	1,332
London	3,880	2,890	1,972
South West	1,429	1,245	807
Wales	569	579	490
Scotland	1,277	1,011	747
Great Britain	15,169	13,287	9,141

[1] As of 31 December 1996.

The career development loan plus pilot commenced on 18 September 1995 and operates in the counties of Glamorgan, Mid Glamorgan, Gwent, Somerset and the former county of Avon. The total number of approved loans in the pilot area for 1995–96 is 412, and for 1996–97 to date 585.

Black Country Careers Services Ltd.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons Black Country Careers Service Ltd. was unsuccessful in re-tendering to run careers services in the black country; and if she will place in the Library a copy of the tender documents of each tender submitted and of the evaluation report on each. [13410]

Mr. Paice: Black Country Careers Services Ltd. was given the reasons why its bid was unsuccessful at a meeting on 2 January. All careers service bids were subject to competitive tendering, which involved a rigorous, fair, and unbiased assessment process against the criteria published in the prospectus. All bids are treated as commercial-in-confidence and I am therefore not able to reveal or discuss the contents or results of any bids or details of their evaluation.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the evidence from UNICEF regarding the Indonesian police referred to by the Overseas Development Administration in representative oral evidence to the Committee of Public Accounts on 22 January. [13495]

Dr. Liam Fox: Agreement to release of the letter has been sought from the UNICEF representative in Jakarta. I will write to the hon. Lady as soon as a reply has been received.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Trustee Service

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what consideration he has given to the continuing need for a trustee service provided by the Public Trustee, following the establishment of the Public Trust Office as a next steps agency; and if he will make a statement. [13912]

Mr. Streeter: A review of the trust functions of the Public Trustee has been carried out by a committee which included representatives from the Public Trust Office, the Official Solicitor's Office, the Treasury Solicitor's Office, the Treasury and the Law Commission. The committee examined a number of options and concluded that there was a continuing need for a trustee service provided by the public sector and that the balance of advantage for trust beneficiaries and for the Exchequer lay in maintaining the present arrangements. The committee's report recommended that some aspects of current trust law should be reviewed with the aim of making it easier for people to administer trusts and that the Public Trustee should review the literature describing the trustee service to make it more informative. The Lord Chancellor has accepted the committee's report and conclusions. The Law Commission will be reviewing aspects of trust law in due course as part of its sixth programme of law reform and the Pubic Trustee has already undertaken a review of her literature. Copies of the committee's report will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Eviction Warrants

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the consultation process relating to the introduction of fees for eviction warrants suspension hearings; and what notice was given of these fees. [12664]

Mr. Streeter: Copies of the proposed changes to civil fees were sent in July last year to the Law Society, the Bar Council, HM Council of Circuit Judges, the Association of District Judges, the Chief Taxing Master, the Civil Court Users Association, the Advice Services Alliance, the National Consumer Council, the Legal Action Group, the Federation of Small Businesses, the Association of Chambers of Commerce, the Institute of Directors, and the CBI.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of charges for eviction warrant hearings. [12663]

Mr. Streeter: Defendants are encouraged to put their case before a possession order is granted against them, rather than to apply to suspend a possession warrant on grounds of which they could have informed the court at the proper time. Except in those cases where possession is mandatory, possession is never granted without a hearing at which the defendant has an opportunity to put his case before the court. The £10 fee is to be seen in the context that it is estimated to cost the Court Service over £30 to process and hear each application to suspend a possession warrant.

Legal Aid

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total amount of legal aid paid to non-United Kingdom nationals in the last five years. [12552]

Mr. Streeter: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) on 18 November, Official Report, column 424.

HEALTH

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of MRSA have been reported each month since January 1992 in each region of England and Wales. [8030]

Mr. Horam: Data on the occurrence of methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus are compiled by the Public Health Laboratory Service from isolates voluntarily submitted by hospitals in England and Wales for specialist typing. The number of recorded incidents of MRSA—three or more patients with the same strain of MRSA in a month from the same hospital—in 1996 for each of the old regional health authorities in England and for Wales have been placed in the Library.

Managing Winter Pressures Reports

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the fortnightly figures for the managing winter pressures reports since November 1996 (a) by health authority and (b) by region. [13247]

Mr. Horam: These reports are produced informally to reflect rapidly changing conditions as experienced in regions. They are for internal discussion and advice only and are not intended to replace the statistically valid data which the national health service executive publishes every quarter. These give a reliable indication of the performance of the NHS.

Cancer Treatment Waiting Lists

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients were on waiting lists for cancer treatments in (a) North Yorkshire, (b) the Yorkshire and Northern region and (c) England in each quarter in the last three years. [13583]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Hospital Waiting Times (Leeds)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on hospital waiting times in Leeds. [13816]

Mr. Horam: Waiting times for in-patient and day case treatment in Leeds have improved considerably over the last year. Latest published figures show that only 265 patients out of 16,022 were waiting more than a year for treatment at the two main hospitals in Leeds last September compared with 1,164 out of 16,935 in September 1995. As regards first out-patient appointments, Leeds hospitals are working towards achieving the patients charter standards so that everyone is seen within 26 weeks of referral by their general practitioner, with nine out of 10 patients seen within 13 weeks.

Colonic Cancer

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on provision within the NHS for screening for colonic cancer. [12028]

Mr. Horam: Genetic testing is available for members of families with genetic syndromes such as familial adenomatous polyposis and hereditary non-polyposis colon cancer, which predispose them to colonic cancer. Recently published results of research on population screening for colonic cancer are to be considered shortly by the national screening committee to weigh effectiveness, acceptability and affordability against potential benefits of such a screening programme.

NHS Staff

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the numbers employed for the period September 1990 to 1995 inclusive expressed as whole-time equivalents and numbers, by gender and by ethnic status for the staff groups; (1) chiropodists, (2) footcare assistants, (3) dietitians, (4) occupational therapists, (5) occupational therapy helpers, (6) orthoptists, (7) physiotherapists, (8) physiotherapy helpers, (9) diagnostic radiographers, (10) therapeutic radiographers, (11) radiographer helpers, (12) technical instructors in professions allied to medicine, (13) other professions allied to medicine, (14) optometrists, (15) pharmacists, (16) speech and language therapists, (17) assistant speech and language therapists, (18) whole-time chaplains, (19) assistant chaplains, (20) clinical scientists, (21) clinical psychologists, (22) clinical psychotherapists, (23) dental auxiliaries, (24) medical laboratory scientific officers, (25) laboratory support grades, (26) medical technical officers and assistants, (27) other professional and technical staff, excluding works staff, (28) administrative and clerical, (29) general managers, (30) senior managers, (31) maintenance, (32) health care assistants and (33) nursery nurses. [13235]

Mr. Malone: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Available information about employees of the national health service hospital and community health services working in these staff groups can be found in various editions of the following Department of Health publications:

"Hospital and Personal Social Services Statistics for England";

"NHS Workforce in England";

"Statistical Bulletin NHS hospital and community health services non-medical staff in England"; and

"NHS hospital and community health services non-medical workforce census; England as at September 1994: ethnic group tables"

Copies of these publications are available in the Library. Information about people employed in these areas of work outside of the NHS HCHS is not available centrally.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 30 January. [12112]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

European Court of Human Rights (Compliance Measures)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Prime Minister what steps have been taken by him during the past decade in connection with the implementation of legislation or other compliance measures required as a result of a finding by the European Court of Human Rights of a violation by the United Government or local authorities; what reports he has requested and obtained about (a) the case of Graham Gaskin and (b) other cases; how much time has been spent by him on such compliance matters in the past 10 years; and what plans he has to improve the speed of compliance with and enforcement of findings of the European Court of Human Rights. [13470]

The Prime Minister: It is Government policy to implement judgments of the European Court of Human Rights, and to do so promptly.

We have a very good record in this respect, but we are aware that in the case of Mr. Gaskin there has been considerable delay. This is an exception and it is being dealt with.

We are content with the manner in which we deal with implementation of judgments and have no plans to alter current practice.

DEFENCE

Royal Yacht

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) dates, (b) destinations, (c) duration, (d) passengers and (e) cost of the royal yacht Britannia's last 10 voyages; and if he will make a statement. [13223]

Information on the marginal costs of individual deployments could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 28 January, Official Report, column 200, for the total annual running costs for Britannia since 1990.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many days the royal yacht Britannia has been on (a) active service and (b) personal duty to the royal family in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13230]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Total number of days Britannia was used on active service[1,2]	Number of days Britannia was used for personal duty by the royal family[2]
1992	85	12
1993	189	11
1995	143	11

The precise figures for 1996 are not yet available.

[1] Active service includes all official duties, both royal and commercial, undertaken by HMY Britannia.

[2] These figures include the transit times to and from Portsmouth.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many days in each of the last five years the royal yacht Britannia was (a) docked out of service in a home port, (b) docked in service in a home port, (c) docked in a foreign port and (d) at sea; and if he will make a statement. [13220]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Docked out of service in a home port[1]	Docked in service in a home port	Docked in a foreign port	At sea
1992	171	135	16	43
1993	44	134	98	89
1994	105	167	39	54
1995	148	99	51	67

The precise figures for 1996 are not yet available.

[1] Includes maintenance and Docking and Essential Defect periods.

Rudolf Hess (Death Certificate)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consideration he has given to reinstating (a) as previously completed and (b) with the amendments applied for by the next of kin the cancelled death certificate of Rudolf Hess; [13490]

(2) what recent representations he has received in relation to the registration of the death of Rudolf Hess; and if he will summarise his duties in this respect under (a) the four power agreement providing the prison regulations for Spandau Allied prison, (b) the Registration of Births, Deaths and Marriages (Special Provisions) Act 1957 and (c) other provisions [13489]

Mr. Soames: The death of Rudolf Hess in Spandau prison, Berlin, was registered under the Registration of Births, Deaths and Marriages (Special Provisions) Act 1957 and the Service Departments Registers Order 1959. In 1995, Herr Wolf Rüdiger Hess applied for an amendment to the register entry, and at that point it was realised that the registration of his father's death was not in accordance with statue. The Act and the Order provide for the keeping of records of births, deaths and marriages outside the United Kingdom among members of the armed forces, the civilians employed in connection with those forces and in certain organisations concerned with their welfare, or their families. The Registrar General therefore cancelled the entry.

The solicitors acting for the Hess family have asked my Department to recommend that the death should be registered in accordance with the application made in 1995, but since Rudolf Hess belonged to none of the categories specified in the legislation the question of a new entry, in any form, does not arise. This has been explained in a letter from my Department's legal advisers to the solicitors. We are not aware of any duties placed on the Secretary of State for Defence by an agreement between the four powers.

Services Recruitment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what age his Department starts recruiting (a) males and (b) females in each of the services; and at what age recruits are allowed into front line duties in each of the services. [13485]

Mr. Soames: The minimum age for recruitment into the armed forces is 16 years for each service. The minimum ages at which recruits are allowed into front-line duties in each of the services are:

	Minimum age
Royal Navy	16 years 3 months
Royal Marines	17 years
Army	17 years 3 months
Royal Air Force	17 years 5 months

The age of recruitment and deployment is the same for both men and women, with the following exceptions:

(a) On submarines—males only—deployment is from age 17, and on overseas shore establishments at 18 years.

(b) In the Royal Marines—males only—those under 18 years would not be deployed on active service overseas unless serving with a unit already deployed overseas and which was redeployed on active service.

Additionally, in Northern Ireland, the minimum deployment age for the Army is seventeen and a half years for those in residential units where they are restricted to barrack guards—patrolling not allowed; and 18 years for all serving on emergency tours, and in the Royal Air Force.

Iraq

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the extent to which Iraq is rebuilding its arms industry. [13309]

Mr. Soames: Iraq is prohibited from developing or producing weapons of mass destruction and missiles with a range greater than 150 km; the United Nations Special Commission and the International Atomic Energy Agency are charged with ensuring Iraqi compliance. Beyond this, the arms industry is not subject to specific controls and we assess that Iraq is engaged in reconstruction efforts to the extent that its own resources and UN sanctions allow. It is not appropriate for reasons of national security and defence to give more precise assessments of the arms industries of foreign countries and any such information on Iraq would therefore be withheld under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to government information.

Defence Procurement Contracts (North-West)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what proportion of MOD defence equipment, procured since 1992, has been sourced from the north-west; [13274]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of jobs created as a result of defence procurement contracts in Lancashire since 1992. [13271]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not collected in the form requested. However, table 1.9 of "UK Defence Statistics 1996", a copy of which is in the Library of the House, provides a summary of "Defence Expenditure and Estimated Employment by Region", in this instance, covering Greater Manchester and Cheshire, as well as Lancashire.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many defence procurement contracts have been awarded to companies in Lancashire since 1992; [13270]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of companies which have benefited from defence procurement contracts in Lancashire since 1992. [13272]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number of new contracts	Number of companies with contracts
1992	1,930	504
1993	1,817	518
1994	1,638	469
1995	1,485	463
1996	1,237	387

This information should be regarded as indicative as it relates only to prime contracts awarded by the Ministry of Defence. It does not include defence sub-contracts or contracts placed by the various defence agencies.

RAF Personnel Management Agency

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the Royal Air Force Personnel Management Agency. [13914]

Mr. Soames: The Royal Air Force Personnel Management Agency will form as a defence agency of the Ministry of Defence on 1 February 1997. The aim of the RAF PMA is to enable the Royal Air Force to meet its manpower commitments in war, tension, crisis and peace. The RAF PMA will have a staff of about 475 of which about half are civilian. The commander-in chief, personnel and training command, will be the owner of the RAF PMA on behalf of the Secretary of State for Defence.

The RAF PMA chief executive, an air vice-marshal, will be required to manage the Royal Air Force's manpower assets in the most cost-effective manner, to initiate, develop and apply personnel policies and to manage the careers of officers and non-commissioned personnel in a manner that ensures the best return for the Royal Air Force's investment in individuals. The chief executive has been set the following key targets:

1. Manning

(a) To distribute the available pool of suitably qualified trained personnel to enable the Royal Air Force to meet its military tasks, as detailed in the departmental plan, during crisis, tension and war. Target for 1997–98 is greater than 95 per cent.

(b) To man the requirements in the local unit establishments, crisis establishments or unit war establishments, as appropriate, and providing specified categories of authorised non-established tasks with suitably qualified training personnel. Target for 1997–98 is greater than 90 per cent.

2. Career management

To ensure the percentage of personnel receiving less than the required notice of a posting that qualifies for a domestic move is less than 20 per cent.

3. Customer Satisfaction

To establish a system of measuring customer satisfaction and set the baseline for measurement in future years by 31 March 1998.

4. Reserve Forces

To meet the Air Force Board's target for an increase in the number of operational reservists. Target for 1997–98 is greater than 1,550.

5. Manpower Planning

To ensure that the percentage variation between the actual trained strength and the authorised trained strength, taken as an average over the financial year, is not greater than ± 1 per cent.

6. Manpower Gapping

To achieve an annual 2.5 per cent. reduction in the number of manpower gaps, subject to the actual trained strength meeting the trained requirement.

I am arranging for copies of the agency's framework document and corporate plan to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Sculptures and Pictures

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what advice is provided to the Committee about the compatibility of sculptures and pictures with the interior decoration of the rooms in which it is proposed that they should be placed. [13530]

Sir Raymond Powell: On behalf of the Speaker, the Advisory Committee on Works of Art recommends the location of all important works of art within the precincts of the House of Commons. Professional advice is given by the Curator of Works of Art and his staff.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what factors led to the relocation of the bust of Ramsay McDonald; and if he will make a statement. [13531]

Sir Raymond Powell: The bronze bust of Ramsey McDonald has been resited to a prominent position within the Members' Lobby. The space that it leaves in the doorway will be filled in early February by a bronze bust of Harold Macmillan, commissioned through the Advisory Committee on Works of Art.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee when the bust of the right hon. John Redmond MP was removed from display in the Palace of Westminster; and where and when it is proposed to reinstate it. [13529]

Sir Raymond Powell MP: The bust of right hon. John Redmond MP was removed from display outside the old Members' Cafeteria in 1995 prior to major refurbishment of that area. Work on the new cafeteria has now been completed and arrangements are in hand to resite the bust within the Terrace entrance area.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Tenant Farmers

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will estimate the number of tenant farmers farming an area of land less than 20 hectares leased by the Church Commissioners; and if he will make a statement. [12782]

Mr. Alison: No audited figures are available, but, according to the commissioners' records, they have 162 tenanted areas of farm land of less than 20 hectares.

Mr. Jones: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what factors underlie the defining of a farm for the purpose of calculating the number of tenant farmers as an area of land over 20 hectares; and if he will make a statement. [12781]

Mr. Alison: As at 31 December 1995, the commissioners owned more than 55,000 hectares of agricultural land. For reasons of administrative convenience, the figure of 20 hectares has been used since 1973 for defining the minimum size of a farm for statistical purposes.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animal Collection Centres

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library copies of the animal health circulars issued by him on the requirements for local veterinary inspection supervision of approved EU collection centres and certification of animals at such collection centres. [12401]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 24 January 1997]: Guidance on the requirements for supervision of collection centres and procedures for certification at collection centres has, to date, been provided on a case-by-case basis. A written instruction is in the course of being completed. To protect the Minister's operational procedures, and to limit the scope for controls to be circumvented, the instruction will not be placed in the Library. Paragraph 7 of section II of the code of practice on access to government information provides for the non-disclosure of such information.

Certified Herds Scheme

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of beef herds will qualify for the certified herds scheme in (a) Wales, (b) England, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland. [12773]

Mr. Baldry: My hon. and learned Friend the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food expects to table the Government's proposal with the Commission shortly. Until agreement on the detailed entry rules of the scheme is reached, it is not possible accurately to estimate the number of qualifying cattle.

Birds (Export Certificates)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list, by species and quantity, the birds occurring naturally in the United Kingdom for which export certificates have been granted since January 1995. [12692]

Mrs Browning [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hydrolysed Vegetable Protein

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) technical and (b) non-technical advice his Department has given to industry concerning chloropropanols in hydrolysed vegetable protein in order that it ensures the removal of 3-MCPD—monochloropropanedilo—from all foods; what is the date by which this must be completed; what enforcement of this removal will be implemented; and if he will make a statement on his assessment of the toxicity of 3-MCPD. [13006]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry has accepted the advice of the Food Advisory Committee that industry should take all necessary steps to ensure that by May 1998 3-MCPD cannot be found in any foods or ingredients, including hydrolysed vegetable protein, when using a validated method of analysis capable of detecting levels down to 0.01 mg/kg, the lowest limit of detection currently available. This is an advisory limit and the question of formal enforcement does not therefore arise. MAFF will, however, continue to monitor the situation.

The FAC's advice was based on a toxicity assessment by the European Commission's expert committee, the Scientific Committee for Food which has concluded that 3-MCPD should be regarded as a genotoxic carcinogen and that results should be undetectable in food products.

BSE

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on how the proposed amendment to article 18(6) of the Specified Bovine Material Order and the proposed protocol for cleansing SBM rendering lines will ensure the deactivation of the BSE agent; and if he will make a statement. [13005]

Mrs. Browning: An amendment to article 18(6) of the Specified Bovine Material (No. 3) Order was made on 30 December 1996 and came into force on 24 January 1997. This followed a public consultation paper issued on 5 December, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. The amendment provides for rendering lines currently processing specified bovine material over-30-months scheme—OTMS—cattle carcases to revert to handling other forms of animal waste. A switch can take place only after a line has undergone thorough cleansing in accordance with a protocol and under the supervision of the State Veterinary Service.

Very little infective material is likely to enter rendering plants as cattle suspected of showing clinical signs suggestive of BSE are destroyed by incineration. However, some animals may be incubating disease even though they do not show clinical signs of infection. The number of such animals—based on independent research, Anderson et al. 1996—is estimated to be around 4,600 of the 1.1 million OTMS animals slaughtered in 1996 and on that basis the amount of brain and spinal cord, in which infectivity is most likely to be, is estimated to be about 0.0008 per cent. In addition, the rendering process itself is expected to reduce any infectivity present 50-fold.

The cleansing protocol is based on physical cleaning of plants followed by its exposure to sodium hydroxide at pH13. Sodium hydroxide is recognised as a useful decontaminating agent and has the added benefit of being a defattening agent to aid in the breakdown of any residual particulate matter not removed during initial physical cleaning. Cleansing on these lines should prove effective given the low level of infectivity that could be entering rendering plants.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the final report from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee on maternal transmission of BSE. [12821]

Mrs. Browning: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee will consider current evidence on maternal transmission at its next meeting on 5 February. It is up to the committee to decide whether it wishes to report finally then or to consider the matter further.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the research published by Professor John Collinge in The Lancet on 10 January in respect of the development of a live test for BSE in cattle. [12826]

Mrs. Browning: The research published by Professor Collinge was an adaptation of his own techniques for the study of the protein PrP in brain tissue, and that of others in studying the distribution of abnormal—protease resistant—PrP in the bodies of infected animals and humans. A collaborative project is under way to assess the usefulness of Professor Collinge's approach on brain tissue after slaughter, but it is likely to be less effective in the diagnosis of BSE in the live animal following biopsy of other tissue.

Evidence has already been published from several groups of workers about the distribution of abnormal PrP and infectivity in the body of infected animals, especially sheep, and most specifically in the lymphoreticular organs such as the spleen, lymph nodes and tonsils. Abnormal PrP can be detected at certain times in these tissues in scrapie-infected sheep; consequently, we have been aware of the potential to use such accessible tissues as tonsils and superficial lymph nodes for the diagnosis of BSE.

Unfortunately it is clear that the pathogenesis of BSE is quite different from scrapie—and, it seems, Creutzfeld-Jakob disease—in this respect. It has not proved possible to detect abnormal PrP in lymphoreticular tissues of infected cattle using existing technology. This may mean that even more sensitive techniques are required for cattle, but it is also possible that these tissues simply do not contain the infectious agent.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the total amount of contaminated animal feed (a) consumed by British cattle in each year since 1980 and (b) exported during that period. [12827]

Mrs. Browning: Information is not available for estimating animal feed contamination. Local authorities are responsible for enforcing the Feeding Stuffs Regulations 1995, as amended, and certain other legislative measures that are intended to protect animal feedingstuffs against contamination.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce a further selective cull based on maternal transmission. [12829]

Mr. Baldry: We do not yet have definitive advice on the results of the experiment which might indicate maternal transmission of BSE. The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee will consider this again at its February meeting and may decide that it can offer definitive advice at that point or to consider the matter further at a future meeting. We shall consider whether the selective cull currently in progress will need to be adjusted in any way when we have SEAC's advice.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements are in place to ensure the separation of cattle in the over 30-months scheme from those outside the scheme in abattoirs. [13473]

Mr. Baldry: EC regulation 716/96 requires that no bovine animals destined for human or animal consumption are present in the abattoir when animals are being slaughtered under the over-30 months scheme. To satisfy this requirement, abattoirs may not slaughter other bovine animals on the day on which scheme animals are processed.

Nitrates

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what preparations his Department has made to set limits for nitrate levels in lettuce and spinach by 15 February in line with the recent European Commission regulation; and if he will make a statement on whether the United Kingdom will be in a position to comply on time. [13007]

Mrs. Browning: The Commission regulation has not yet been published in the Official Journal of the European Communities. Progress on legislation to provide for its enforcement and execution is therefore delayed.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the compliance of the arrangements for the importation, storage and onward carriage of the ammonium nitrate at the port of Tilbury with the Fertilisers (Amendment) Regulations 1995. [13536]

Mrs. Browning: The Fertiliser Regulations 1991, as amended in 1995, do not contain specific controls with regard to the importation, storage and onward carriage of ammonium nitrate fertiliser. They provide labelling, compositional and packaging requirements for ammonium nitrate and other fertilisers.

Cotton Seed Oil

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what differences were established by the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes between oil from conventional cotton seed and that derived from the genetically modified cotton seed resistant to the herbicide bromoxynil; and if he will make a statement. [13009]

Mrs. Browning: After carefully considering all the data, the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes concluded that there was no difference between oil from the two sources.

Bull Testicles

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will require bull testicles to be separately identified in food labelling. [12852]

Mrs. Browning: The rule permitting such ingredients to be identified simply as "offal" in the ingredients list of products was removed when the Food Labelling Regulations 1996 were introduced on 1 July 1996. Since then, the type of offal used must be indicated. The Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations 1984 prohibit the use of testicles of mammalian species in uncooked meat products.

Organic Farming

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the farmed area of each member state of the EU is farmed organically. [12854]

Mr. Boswell: Available information shows that, in 1996, organically farmed land constituted less than 1 per cent. of total agricultural area in Belgium, France, Greece, Ireland, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and the United Kingdom; between 1 per cent. and 2 per cent. in Finland, Germany, Denmark and Italy; between 3 per cent. and 4 per cent. in Sweden; and between 7 per cent. and 8 per cent. in Austria.

Source:

"Impact of EC Regulations 2078/92 on the development of organic farming in the European Union", Dr. Nicolas Lampkin, Welsh Institute of Rural Studies, Aberystwyth.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much organic produce was imported from (a) the EU and (b) other countries in each year since 1990. [12853]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones) on 6 November 1996, Official Report, column 577.

Food Production

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is taking to encourage more urban food growing; and if he will make a statement. [13010]

Mrs. Browning: The Department's responsibility for food growing is restricted to production on a commercial scale which, by its very nature, tends to be undertaken by agricultural and horticultural enterprises situated in predominately rural and farming areas. Urban production tends to be of the small-scale type associated with leisure, gardening and allotments and is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary for State for the Environment.

Food Premises Inspections

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 671, what factors underlay the variation between counties in the use of informal written warnings. [13243]

Mrs. Browning: Enforcement of food safety legislation in the UK is the responsibility of local authorities and they have several courses of action open to them in dealing with breaches of food law. The use of written warnings will vary from authority to authority depending on the policies of that authority, the types of food premises in that area and the nature of breaches discovered.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what factors underlay the reduction in the number of improvement notices issued by English non-metropolitan district councils to establishments subject to food law enforcement between 1992 and 1995. [13210]

Mrs. Browning: The issue of improvement notices was a new power available to enforcement officers under the Food Safety Act 1990. These figures reflect the expectation that there would be a large number issued during the first few years of the Act coming into force, and that this would fall to a lower level as businesses and enforcement authorities gained experience in the requirements of the Food Safety Act.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 671, what factors underlay the reduction in the number of establishments in Lancashire subject to food law enforcement between 1993 and 1995. [13241]

Mrs. Browning: The fall in the number of establishments shown for Lancashire is consistent with an overall fall in the number of establishments shown nationally. The overall decline is due to additional guidance to local authorities which resulted in establishments being excluded from the statistics. This was either because they were not required by the European Commission to be included as part of this statistical return or because they fell outside the immediate planned inspection programme of the authority. All food premises, however, are subject to enforcement procedures and can be inspected regardless of whether they are included in the statistical return or not.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 671, what factors underlay the reduction in the number of establishments in Pendle subject to food law enforcement between 1991 and 1992. [13242]

Mrs. Browning: The year 1991 was the first year these statistics were collected. Many local authorities experienced difficulties in setting up systems for collecting the statistics. It is not uncommon, therefore, for the 1991 figures to differ significantly from the 1992 figures.

Food Safety

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the arrangements for the handling of food safety. [14002]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Secretary of State for Health and I are today announcing, with the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, the Government's intention to appoint an independent, eminent chairman of a newly created Food Safety Council who will also be an adviser on food safety. The council will advise Ministers on food safety and related matters, take a strategic view of the longer-term agenda, and identify issues cutting across the work of the existing network of independent expert advisory committees. Its membership will be drawn from a wide range of fields with an interest in the safety of the food supply, including both scientific experts and lay members.

The council and food safety adviser will report jointly to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Secretary of State for Health and the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland. The proposed terms of reference for the adviser and the council are set out below.

Our intention is that the council and the adviser should be free to advise on any matters related to the safety, quality, labelling and authenticity of food and be available as an authoritative source of advice to the general public. These arrangements will strengthen the existing network of advisory committees, but will not detract from the role of the individual expert committees. The food safety adviser will work closely with the chief medical officers.

In addition, we are formally appointing the chief medical officer, Sir Kenneth Calman, as adviser to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on public health matters. This formalises arrangements which in practice have applied for many years. These new arrangements help to confirm the importance of public health advice in the area of food policy.

Terms of reference for the chairman of the Food Safety Council and food safety adviser.

to advise the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on any matters related to the safety, quality, labelling and authenticity of food; and the Secretaries of State for Health, for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland in the area of their Departments' responsibilities.

to chair the Food Safety Council; and to communicate information relating to the work of the Food Safety Council to Parliament, the media and the general public.

Terms of reference for the Food Safety Council to advice the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on any matters relating to the safety, quality, labelling and authenticity of food, and the Secretaries of State for Health, for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland in the area of their Departments' responsibilities, having regard at all times to the views of relevant export bodies and to public concerns; to co-ordinate those areas of work of the independent advisory committees which fall within the remit of the Food Safety Council and identify issues of common interest; to advise on how these matters are best communicated to the general public;

to report annually to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretaries of State for Health, for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland on food safety and related matters, and to lay a copy of the report before Parliament.

TRANSPORT

Passenger Trains (Crewe)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average weekly number of timetabled passenger trains between Euston and Glasgow which made a timetabled stop at Crewe for each of the last 10 years. [13198]

Mr. Watts: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Average weekly number of passenger trains
1986	3
1987	5
1988	5
1989	4
1990	5
1991	2
1992	2
1993	6
1994	3
1995	3
1996	3

Ammonium Nitrate

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the compliance of the arrangements for the onward movement of the ammonium nitrate at the port of Tilbury with (a) the regulations concerning the international carriage of dangerous goods by rail, (b) the European agreement concerning the international carriage of dangerous goods by road and (c) EC directive 80/876, as amended; and if he will make a statement. [13533]

Mr. Watts: Compliance with the regulations for the transport of dangerous goods buy rail and road is enforced by the Health and Safety Executive. Health and Safety Executive inspectors are scheduled to visit the port of Tilbury next week to inspect the arrangements for the onward transport of ammonium nitrate.

Transport Study, Leicestershire

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the costs to date of the central Leicestershire strategy transport study—carried out jointly by Leicestershire county council and Leicester city council. [13282]

Mr. Watts: The information is not held by the Department of Transport.

FirstBus

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons undertakings relating to fares, service quality and cost of tendered services were not sought from FirstBus before issuing the contract to FirstBus in respect of bus services in Glasgow. [13808]

Mr. Watts: The terms and conditions of contracts let for the running of subsidised bus services in Glasgow are matters for the Strathclyde passenger transport executive.

Boeing 737

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for transport what deadline he has set aircraft operators to carry out modifications to the rudder of Boeing 737 aircraft. [13184]

Mr. Bowis: Under the Chicago convention, the United States of America is responsible, as state of design, for the continued airworthiness of Boeing 737 aircraft. I understand that the US Federal Aviation Administration intends to issue a notice of proposed rulemaking on modifications to the Boeing 737 in February. It is likely that the FAA will require modifications to be made within three years. The United Kingdom Civil Aviation Authority will consider these proposals when published.

Passenger Rail Fares

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the total annual revenue from United Kingdom domestic passenger rail fares in the last year for which statistics are available; if he will estimate the effects on revenue of a 25 per cent. reduction in fares; and if he will indicate the assumptions regarding the elasticity of demand in relation to price which he is using. [13326]

Mr. Watts: "Transport Statistics Great Britain", 1996 edition, published by the Government statistical office, gives ticket receipts for all British Rail and franchised passenger rail services in 1995–96 as £2,379.4 million—at 1995–96 prices.

Elasticity of demand estimates are commercially confidential within the railway industry. Further, elasticity values are affected by many different factors and only hold for small real changes. It is therefore not possible to provide an accurate estimate of the effects on revenue of a 25 per cent. reduction in fares.

Airline Safety

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish airline safety league tables on a six-monthly basis. [13183]

Mr. Bowis: No. In order to hold an air operator's certificate, all United Kingdom airlines must attain the high standards of safety required by the Civil Aviation Authority. I do not therefore believe that there are any significant differences in the safety standards of UK airlines which would warrant the compilation of a safety league table.

Foreign airlines flying into the UK are regulated by the aviation authority of their home state in accordance with minimum safety standards set by the International Civil Aviation Organisation. It would not therefore be possible or appropriate for the UK Government to produce a safety league table.

British Railways Board

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which of the contracts of the directors of the British Railways Board he plans to terminate early; and how much compensation each will be entitled to. [13426]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend will be reviewing the size and composition of the BR board in the light of its reduced responsibilities following the sale of most of the BR businesses, but he has taken no decision on the early termination of existing board appointments.

Wheelock Bypass

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent representations he has received concerning the proposed start date of the Wheelock bypass; what funds have been allocated for the scheme in the next financial year; and what commitments have been given to fund the scheme in the future; [13185]

(2) what criteria were used to assess competing bids for road construction projects under the transport policies and programme submissions; to what extent the proposed Wheelock bypass met those criteria; and if he will make a statement; [13186]

(3) what representations he has received concerning the difficulties experienced by local highways authorities in entering into contracts for construction of major road projects without resources of funding beyond the initial year (a) in respect of the proposed Wheelock bypass and (b) in general; and if he will make a statement. [13187]

Mr. Watts: I have received six written representations concerning the start date of the Wheelock bypass.

For 1997–98, £2 million of expenditure on the Wheelock bypass has been accepted for transport supplementary grant. Previous allocations for this scheme are £0.75 million for 1995–96 and £2 million for 1996–97. TSG is payable at a rate of 50 per cent. of the accepted expenditure, with the balance allocated as borrowing approvals.

No specific commitment about future funding have been given in respect of this scheme. Local authority circular 2/96 repeated the message that major road improvement schemes—those costing over £2 million—which have been accepted for TSG are normally funded through to completion. This is dependant upon progress and costs remaining broadly in line with those when the scheme was first accepted for TSG. The circular further explained that it might be necessary to restrict funding and spread support over a longer period.

If Cheshire county council let a construction contract before the next local transport capital settlement, then subject to these caveats it may expect funding for 1998–99 to follow.

In assessing bids for major road construction projects which had been accepted for TSG in the 1996–97 local transport capital settlement, the following points were taken into account:

whether the bid is for a relatively small amount which it would be reasonable for a local authority to fund;

whether it is for residual expenditure (later than the second year after the scheme is complete);

whether cost increases are fully justified;

whether progress on part or all of a scheme has been maintained according to earlier forecasts;

whether it appears to represent a realistic view of possible progress; and whether, where a scheme or part had yet to start, it is imperative that the scheme go ahead without delay.

Spending on the Wheelock bypass scheme in 1995–96 was only £0.374 million, and for 1996–97 only £0.75 million is budgeted. In the light of this, I could not be certain that any allocation for the Wheelock bypass 1997–98 would be used in full for the scheme.

I have received only one recent representation from a local authority seeking assurances regarding future allocations before entering into a contractual commitment. This was not in relation to the Wheelock bypass.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Sheltered Accommodation

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what support is currently provided to those with learning disabilities, mental health and other problems who live in sheltered accommodation in the community. [11821]

Mr. Burt: Social security assistance with day-to-day living costs may be available from income support, which recognises the additional costs faced by some people with special needs whilst housing benefit can assist with reasonable accommodation costs and benefits such as attendance allowance and disability living allowance can help towards the extra costs of disability.

It is the Government's policy to encourage the development, at a local level, of a range of appropriate and co-ordinated health and social services for people with learning difficulties, mental health and other problems. Local authorities are responsible for assessing need on an individual basis and for arranging appropriate care.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the savings to his Department from the reduction in housing benefit subsidies to 95 per cent. in England in each of the years from 1991–92 to 1997–98. [13308]

Mr. Roger Evans: Until 1990–91, local authorities received 97 per cent. as direct subsidy for the majority of their private sector housing benefit expenditure; a further sum of 3.5 per cent. of estimated expenditure being fed into the revenue support grant. When this direct subsidy was reduced to 95 per cent. in 1991–92, the amount funded through the revenue support grant was increased to 5.5 per cent.

The reduction was made to increase overall incentives to improve economy and efficiency and was made on a cost neutral basis.

Disability Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 719, from what source the independent tribunal service obtained the information that medical members of disability appeal tribunals are not normally involved in examining claimants for the purpose of the all-work test; [13324]

(2) how many medical examinations for the purpose of the all-work test were carried out in November 1996 by doctors who were members of disability appeal tribunals; [13325]

(3) in what circumstances medical members of disability appeal tribunals are involved in examining claimants for the purposes of the all-work test; [13327]

(4) how many notices issued by the clerk to the social security appeal tribunal covering the Newport, Gwent area between 21 October and 21 December 1996, directing the parties to notify him if they wished an oral hearing to be heard, have resulted in requests for oral hearings by (a) the claimant only, (b) the adjudication officer only and (c) both the claimant and the adjudication officer; and how many of those requests were made within 10 days of receipt of the direction; [13328]

(5) pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 772, which tribunal venues the independent tribunal service is currently considering whether to continue using; [13329]

(6) for what reasons members of social security appeal tribunals, other than chairmen, do not receive appeal papers in advance of the hearing in cases where an appeal is decided without an oral hearing. [13330]

Mr. Roger Evans: These are matters for the president of the independent tribunal service, his honour Judge Bassingthwaighte. He will write to the hon. Member.

Benefits in Kind

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the employer-provided benefits in kind which would be affected if employers' national insurance contributions were extended to all taxable benefits in kind. [13331]

Mr. Heald: The most recent information about taxable benefits in kind was published in "Inland Revenue Statistics 1996", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he intends to take to prevent the avoidance of employer national insurance contributions on employee remuneration by payment of benefits in kind with particular reference to (a) property, (b) luncheon vouchers, (c) private medical insurance, (d) school fees, (e) supermarket vouchers, (f) cars, (g) yachts and (h) low-interest loans; and if he will make a statement. [13334]

Mr. Heald: We remain committed to curbing schemes aimed solely or largely at unfairly avoiding national insurance contributions. Not all payment practices using benefits in kind are aimed solely or largely at unfair avoidance. With the Inland Revenue, we continue to monitor schemes. It is not the Government's policy to give advance warning of specific action against avoidance that we may be planning to take.

War Pensions

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was (a) the overall cost of war pensions in each of the past 10 years at constant prices; what is his estimate for 1997–98; and how many claimants there were in each of those years. [13451]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the tables:

Thousands

WALES

Wheelchair Advisory Group

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about progress on his consideration of recommendations made by the wheelchair advisory group set up in August 1996. [14083]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I am today announcing an extra £500,000 a year to improve the wheelchair provision in Wales. I have given careful consideration to the views and recommendations made by the wheelchair advisory group I set up in August 1996 and I have decided to accept its recommendations that additional resources should be targeted towards providing electrically powered indoor-outdoor wheelchairs and expanding and improving the existing range of wheelchairs in Wales.

I expect the artificial limb and appliance service to be able to provide up to 300 electrically powered indoor-outdoor wheelchairs in 1997–98.

"Government Expenditure and Review"

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to update the "Government Expenditure and Revenue, Wales" report, published in January 1996; and if he will make a statement. [14084]

Mr. Hague: I am publishing this report today; it is available in the Library of the House. Total Government expenditure on behalf of Welsh residents exceeded tax revenues raised in Wales by £5.7 billion. This estimate, which excludes privatisation proceeds, is equivalent to around 20 per cent. of Welsh gross domestic product.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the income and expenditure net surplus/deficit for the financial year to 30 December for the NHS trusts in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [12840]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 29 January 1997]: The latest information provided by each trust regarding actual income and expenditure for the financial year to date to 31 December is given in the following table.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many visits he has made to working farms in Flintshire. [12286]

Mr. Hague: None. I have visited a variety of farms elsewhere in Wales.

Energy Efficiency

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve energy efficiency in the housing stock. [12941]

Mr Jonathan Evans: Under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995, all authorities in Wales must provide me with a report by 30 November 1997 setting out measures that will lead to a significant improvement in energy efficiency of all residential accommodation. The Government have also recently announced significant changes to the home energy efficiency scheme which widens the scope of improvements available to householders.

Hospitals

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy on the future of (a) cottage and (b) community hospitals in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [13207]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer to the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Ceredigion and Pembroke, North (Mr. Dafis), in the House on 2 December 1996, Official Report, columns 651-52.

NHS Staff

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the numbers employed for the period September 1990 to 1995 inclusive expressed as whole-time equivalents and numbers, by gender and by ethnic status for the staff groups (1) chiropodists, (2) foot care assistants, (3) dietitians, (4) occupational therapists, (5) occupational therapy helpers, (6) orthoptists, (7) physiotherapists, (8) physiotherapy helpers, (9) diagnostic radiographers, (10) therapeutic radiographers, (11) radiographer helpers, (12) technical instructors in professions allied to medicine, (13) other professions allied to medicine, (14) optometrists, (15) pharmacists, (16) speech and language therapists, (17) assistant speech and language therapists, (18) whole-time chaplains, (19) assistant chaplains, (20) clinical scientists, (21) clinical psychologists, (22) clinical psychotherapists, (23) dental auxiliaries, (24) medical laboratory scientific officers, (25) laboratory support grades, (26) medical technical officers and assistants, (26) medical technical officers and assistants, (27) other professional and technical staff, excluding works staff, (28) administrative and clerical, (29) general managers, (30) senior managers, (31) maintenance, (32) health care assistants and (33) nursery nurses. [13234]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Due to the amount of data requested, I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in what ways the eligibility, financial and operating rules which apply to the delivery of training programmes by TECs in Wales in 1997–98 will differ from the rules outlined in the contracting documents which replace the TEC annual funding agreement in England. [13592]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The relevant contractual documents are not yet finalised either in England or Wales. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible after both sets of documents are complete and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Security

10. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional security measures he has introduced since the end of the IRA ceasefire. [11976]

Sir John Wheeler: The Chief Constable has responded to the security situation as it has developed and the security forces are at a high state of alert. They have been successful in preventing terrorist attacks. The Army has adopted a higher profile and in certain areas is now regularly supporting police patrols. There are more vehicle checkpoints and measures have been taken to protect vulnerable police stations.

23. Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make an assessment of security in Northern Ireland. [11990]

Sir John Wheeler: There has been a steadily increasing number of terrorist attacks over the past few months. These have put the lives of members of the security forces and civilians at extreme risk. The police and Army are exercising all their skill and vigilance to thwart these attacks and their success has been evidenced by a number of recent arms finds and the charging of several individuals with terrorism-related offences. Their efforts will continue unremittingly.

Terrorism

11. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many terrorist incidents have occurred in Northern Ireland since 1 January. [11977]

Sir John Wheeler: Since 1 January, there have been 23 serious terrorist attacks. There were 13 shooting incidents, two PRIG mortar attacks, one Mk15 mortar attack and four Mk16 mortar attacks. One incident involved coffee jar devices being thrown and two under-car booby trap devices have exploded.

14. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the Provisional IRA's capabilities to wage a continuing terrorist campaign. [11980]

Sir John Wheeler: Our assessment is that the Provisional IRA is capable of mounting a sustained terrorist campaign both in Northern Ireland and elsewhere. The Provisional IRA has mounted a series of attacks over recent weeks intended to murder members of the security forces in the Province. The risk of further such attacks remains extremely high. Such attacks are carried out regardless of the risk to members of the public.

Targeting Social Need

12. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to modify the operation of the targeting social need policy. [11978]

Mr. Ancram: In advance of any recommendations that the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights may make in its forthcoming report on employment equality, it would not be appropriate to consider making significant changes to the targeting social need initiative. Targeting social need remains, however, one of the Government's three public expenditure priorities.

Peace Process

13. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the peace process in the Province. [11979]

24. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the latest situation in the peace process. [11991]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer my hon. Friends to the oral answer that I gave to the hon. Members for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe) and for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) earlier today.

School Rolls

15. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the current rolls of (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools; how much was spent per head in each case (i) in 1979 and (ii) in 1996 in real terms; and if he will make a statement. [11981]

Mr. Ancram: In 1995–96, enrolments in primary schools were 192,747 and in secondary schools were 151,576.

Expenditure per pupil in real terms was £1,020 in 1979–80 and £1,699 in 1995–96 in primary and £1,591 in 1979–80 and £2,523 in 1995–96 in secondary schools.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

16. Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how he proposes to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the RUC. [11982]

Sir John Wheeler: We are working with the RUC and the Police Authority for Northern Ireland to improve yet further the efficiency and effectiveness of the RUC. The recent report by Her Majesty's inspector of constabulary confirms the RUC as an efficient and effective police service. Legislation on structural reform leading to greater efficiency is being prepared. The fundamental review and the report by Dr. Maurice Hayes into the police complaints system have been completed and are being progressed.

Joyriding

17. Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on joy riding in west Belfast. [11983]

Sir John Wheeler: I am very concerned about the extent of car crime in west Belfast and elsewhere. I am well aware of the damage that these crimes cause to the quality of life for the general public and the consequential costs. I am therefore looking in some detail at the effectiveness of the criminal justice system to support the Royal Ulster Constabulary. The Government are backing a range of initiatives by local voluntary and statutory agencies to address the problem and are providing the RUC with the resources that it needs to tackle it.

Health and Social Services Boards

18. Sir James Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the revised financial allocations to health and social services boards. [11984]

Mr. Moss: The 1997–98 board allocations reflect their current capitation shares. However, there is common agreement that the Eastern board will be a gainer when the capitation review is completed. Accordingly, I have also made available to that board an additional £4 million for 1997–98, of which £2 million are recurring funds.

Integrated Schools

19. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made in establishing integrated schools in the Province. [11985]

Mr. Ancram: The Government remain fully committed to supporting the development of integrated education.

There are at present 32 grant-aided integrated schools in Northern Ireland. Development proposals for a further nine integrated schools are under consideration by my Department.

Tourism

20. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tourist visitors there were to Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [11987]

Mr. Ancram: In 1994, 1.29 million visitors came to Northern Ireland, an increase of 3 per cent. on 1993 levels. In 1995 record levels were achieved with 1.56 million visitors, a 20 per cent. increase on 1994. Estimates for 1996 suggest that the number of visitors has fallen by 6 per cent. on 1995 to 1.46 million. Encouragingly, the figures remain above 1994 pre-ceasefire levels.

25. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to increase the number of tourists visiting Northern Ireland in 1997. [11992]

Mr. Ancram: The Northern Ireland tourist board is continuing to market Northern Ireland vigorously in all key markets, on a stand-alone basis, as part of the new Tourism Brand Ireland campaign and in co-operation with the British Tourist Authority. The board continues to support private sector infrastructure investment to meet tourist needs.

Road Schemes

21. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which major capital road schemes will commence in the next financial year. [11988]

Mr. Moss: The major road works programme is currently being reviewed in the light of the outcome of the 1996 public expenditure survey. I will write to the right hon. Gentleman when the review is complete.

Meat and Livestock Industry

22. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent steps he has taken to support and promote the meat and livestock industry in Northern Ireland. [11989]

Mr. Ancram: It is estimated that, over this and the next three years, the Government will provide around £3.5 billion to support the beef industry in the United Kingdom. Specific figures for Northern Ireland are not available, but on a proportionate basis it is estimated that Northern Ireland should benefit from around £525 million on 15 per cent. of this total.

The Government continue to provide direct financial support to the processing sector of the industry. This support takes various forms, including capital and marketing grants. The Government also support the promotion of produce at national and international shows and exhibitions.

The Government are working closely with the beef industry in Northern Ireland to develop a strategy which will facilitate the industry regaining its export markets at the earliest opportunity after the ban on exports has been lifted.

Constitution Talks

27. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the talks on constitutional developments. [11996]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer that I gave to the hon. Members for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs Fyfe) and for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) earlier today.

Education and Library Boards

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to bring forward proposed legislation in relation to the education and library boards in Northern Ireland. [11994]

Mr. Ancram: I am currently considering the proposal for a draft Education and Library Boards (Northern Ireland) Order 1997 in the light of the comments received during its consultation period.

Action for Community Employment

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list ACE sponsors with their names and addresses, by size, for the most recent year available, with the number on each scheme, the number of approved places and the percentage of leavers who obtained full-time employment. [12176]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 29 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the Action for Community Employment (ACE) scheme.

There are currently 229 organisation operating ACE projects throughout Northern Ireland.

Experience has shown that many of participants leaving ACE require further education or training to prepare them for employment. The Agency therefore records progressing into education, training and employment as positive outcomes. A representative sample of leavers from the scheme is surveyed twice during each year. The survey in 1995/96 showed that 41% of leavers achieved a positive outcome. Figures for 1996/97 will not be available until after the end of March 1997. The percentage of leavers who obtained positive outcomes at each scheme is not readily available.

Detailed information amounting to a 27 page document is being sent to you separately and a copy will be placed in the House of Commons library. I hope you find it useful.

Unemployment Review

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Training and Employment Agency review document on programmes for the long-term unemployed was completed; when it will be released to the public; and if he will make a statement. [12573]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 29 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency to reply to your question about the review document on programmes for the long-term unemployed.

Work on the document has taken longer to complete than was anticipated. However I hope to publish the document, for consultation purposes, very shortly.

I will ensure that you receive a copy.

Energy Conservation

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he proposes to improve energy conservation in the housing stock in Northern Ireland. [12857]

Mr. Moss: The Department of Environment for Northern Ireland is currently considering amendments to the Building Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1994 which will, when implemented, improve the conservation of fuel and power in new houses. These measures will also provide the energy rating of dwellings using the Government's standard assessment procedure.

In addition, Northern Ireland's first home energy conservation report, under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995, was submitted to the Department of Environment for Northern Ireland in November 1996 by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. It proposes a number of measures to improve the energy efficiency of the existing residential sector.

Under the domestic energy efficiency scheme, the Department of Economic Development will continue to provide a comprehensive package of insulation, draught-proofing and advice on energy conservation to low-income households and householders over 60 years of age.

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has made to the Secretary of State for Scotland on his ruling pertaining to the proposed electricity interconnector, between Scotland and Northern Ireland and the economic effects of cancellation of this project. [12441]

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland announced on 21 November 1996 that he was minded to grant approval for the Scottish leg of the proposed electricity interconnector subject to certain sections of the line being placed underground. Before reaching a decision, he invited representations on how a requirement of undergrounding would affect the viability of the project. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State, in responding to the invitation for written comments, reiterated the strategic importance of interconnection for the development of a competitive and efficient electricity sector in Northern Ireland.

NHS Staff

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the numbers employed for the period September 1990 to 1995 inclusive expressed as whole-time equivalents and numbers, by gender and by ethnic status for the staff groups (1) chiropodists, (2) foot care assistants, (3) dietitians, (4) occupational therapists, (5) occupational therapy helpers, (6) orthoptists, (7) physiotherapists, (8) physiotherapy helpers, (9) diagnostic radiographers, (10) therapeutic radiographers, (11) radiographer helpers, (12) technical instructors in professions allied to medicine, (13) other professions allied to medicine, (14) optometrists, (15) pharmacists, (16) speech and language therapists, (17) assistance speech and language therapists, (18) whole-time chaplains, (19) assistant chaplains, (20) clinical scientists, (21) clinical psychologists, (22) clinical psychotherapists, (23) dental auxiliaries, (24) medical laboratory scientific officers, (25) laboratory support grades, (26) medical technical officers and assistants, (27) other professional and technical staff, excluding works staff, (28) administrative and clerical, (29) general managers, (30) senior managers, (31) maintenance, (32) health care assistants and (33) nursery nurses. [13236]

Mr. Moss: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 31 January 1997

PRIME MINISTER

Cabinet Office

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals there are to change the 1997–97 cash limit or running costs limit for the Cabinet Office other services vote. [14203]

The Prime Minister: The cash limit for the Cabinet Office, other services, class XVIII, vote 1, will be reduced by £637,000 from £42,036,000 to £41,399,000 and the running costs limit will be reduced by £637,000 from £43,153,000 to £42,516,000. This is to reflect a transfer of provision to the Office of Public Service, class XVII, vote 1, for superannuation awarding services and accommodation services, partially offset by a transfer of provision from the Office of Public Service towards the cost of early staff departures.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Written Questions

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Lord President of the Council what has been the average length of time taken by each Department to answer ordinary written questions in each of the last two sessions; and if he will make a statement. [12265]

Mr. Newton: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Highlands and Islands Enterprise

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Scottish-based companies with an hon. Member as a director that have received grants or loans from Highlands and Islands Enterprise; and what was the value of the grant and loans in each case. [12986]

Mr. Kynoch: The provision of grants and loans to individual companies is an operational matter for Highlands and Islands Enterprise and I have asked the chairman of its board to write to the hon. Member.

Meat Hygiene (Retailers)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what discussions he has had with representatives from meat retail outlets regarding the hygiene changes recommended in Professor Pennington's report; [12989]

(2) what plans he has to make (a) grants and (b) compensation available to family-run butchers to help convert their premises to meet the hygiene recommendations in Professor Pennington's report; [12987]

(3) what length of time butcher shops will be given to implement the hygiene recommendations in Professor Pennington's report. [12988]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As I made clear in my letter of 16 January to all hon. Members, both the Government and Professor Pennington are still considering the interim recommendations regarding licensing and separation requirements. As a part of this process, I have asked my Department to examine the practical implications of these recommendations and in so doing to consult consumers, health professionals, environmental health officers, processors and retailers.

Parkhead Hospital

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many possible suicides there have been among patients attending Parkhead hospital since the hospital opened; what assessment he has made of security and staffing levels at Parkhead hospital; and if he will make a statement. [13211]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1993, when formal arrangements for the recording of suicides at Parkhead hospital were introduced, there have been five in-patient suicides.

It is fundamental to the treatment of patients with mental illness that, when ever possible, a therapeutic environment is provided with a level of security appropriate to the individual. The agreed level of staffing, observation and other precautions taken to prevent suicide are matters for clinicians to determine.

Nurse staffing levels at Parkhead hospital have increased from 122 in October 1995 to a current level of 135. The hospital has 122 beds and the nurse-patient ratio is therefore at a high level.

Rural Pharmacies

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to safeguard rural pharmacies. [13262]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The essential small pharmacy scheme already provides financial support to pharmacies where the monthly volume of NHS prescriptions is not more than 1,400 and where the pharmacy is located not less than two miles from the next nearest pharmacy by the route most convenient to the public.

Cash Limits

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he intends to make to the cash limits and running costs provision for 1996–97 within his responsibility. [14211]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, I intend to make changes to five voted cash limits, two non-voted cash blocks and three running costs limits.

The cash limit for class XIII, vote 2—local government, housing, transport other environmental services and European funds Scotland—will be increased by a net total of £14,857,000 from £5,602,006,000 to £5,616,863,000. The net increase reflects a transfer of £12,802,000 from SO/LA2 to Scottish Homes; a transfer of £4,000,000 from class XIII, vote 5 to revenue support grant; a reduction of £1,298,000 in housing support grant and £647,000 in Scottish new towns; and an increase in Historic Scotland gross running cost provision of £722,000 from £15,216,000 to £15,938,000 which is offset fully by increased appropriations in aid.

The cash limit for class XIII, vote 3, has been reduced by £3,514,000 from £1,613,944,000 to £1,610,430,000. £5,000,000 has been transferred to class XIII, vote 4 to support additional funding for the NHS in Scotland and £2,150,000 has been transferred to class XIII, vote 6, to meet BSE-related administration costs. These transfers have been partly offset by a transfer of £3,636,000 from SO/LA 2–Scottish Office local authorities—to enable Scottish Enterprise to acquire the residual industrial sites held by Livingston development corporation at the winding up of that body.

The cash limit for class XIII, vote 4—hospital, community health, family health, other health services and welfare food, Scotland—will be increased by a net total of £11,627,000 from £3,536,513,000 to £3,548,140,000. The increase includes a transfer of £5,000,000 from class XIII, vote 3, for additional funding for the NHS in Scotland; a transfer of £229,000 from class XVIII, vote 4 due to the reduced costs of the NHS complaints procedures; a transfer of £202,000 from class XIII, vote 6, in respect of funding not required by the Mental Welfare Commission; and a transfer of £17,000 from class VII,vote 1, for drug misuse-related issues. The NHS trusts external financing limit has also been decreased by £10,391,000 from £48,840,000 to £38,449,000.

The cash limit for class XIII, vote 5—law, order and protective services, police grant and social work services, Scotland—will be reduced by £166,000 from £631,928,000 to £631,762,000. The running costs limit will be increased by £1,416,000 from £146,304,000 to £147,720,00. The changes include transfers of £616,000 to the Scottish Prison Service from class XIII, vote 6, for general running costs and £868,000 to civil defence from class I, vote I, in respect of a severe weather warning system. The increases are partly offset by transfers of £4,000,000 to class XIII, vote 2, in respect of revenue support grant and £30,000 to class VIII, vote 7 to cover costs on the Dunblane inquiry.

The cash limit for class XIII, vote 6—Scottish Office administration—is being increased by £1,332,000 from £167,978,000 to £169,310,000. Within this total, the running cost provision for Scottish Office administration is being increased by £684,000 from £152,300,000 to £152,984,000: the changes include a transfer to the Scottish Prison Service—class XIII, vote 5—of £616,000 for general running costs, and a transfer of £1,300,000 from class XIII, vote 3, to cover expenditure associated with the Department's response to BSE. The capital provision is being increased by £648,000 from £16,623,000 to £17,271,000: the changes include a transfer of £850,000 from class XIII, vote 3, again to cover expenditure associated with the Department's response to BSE and a transfer of £202,000 to class XIII, vote 4.

The non-voted cash limit SO/LA1, which covers non-housing capital expenditure by local authorities, is to be increased by £1,079,000 from £441,920,000 to £442,999,000, which is a transfer within class XIII, vote 5, from central Government to local authority expenditure to reflect the amount which local authorities are entitled to claim under the closed circuit television scheme.

The non-voted cash limit SO/LA2 which covers housing capital expenditure by local authorities and capital expenditure by new towns will be decreased by £20,438,000 from £106,395,000 to £85,957,000. The decrease reflects transfers of provision to Scottish Homes of £12,802,000, Scottish Enterprise of £3,636,000 and the Crown Office of £1,000,000 for which corresponding increases are included in the spring supplementary estimates for class XIII, vote 2, class XIII, vote 3, and class VIII, vote 7, respectively; and a transfer of provision to the non-cash limited other environmental services element of class XIII, vote 2, of £3,000,000.

The external finance requirement for Scottish Homes increases by £80 million from £162 million to £242 million as a result of the postponement of the disposal of its portfolio of loans to housing associations.

The overall running cost limit for the Scottish Office, together with its agencies and associated Departments, is being increased by £2,822,000 from £393,399,000 to £396,221,000. This is to cover additional expenditure of £1,300,000 by The Scottish Office associated with the Department's response to BSE and of £800,000 by the Scottish courts administration in connection with the Dunblane inquiry and increased provision of £722,000 for Historic Scotland which will be covered by increased income.

The increases will be offset by savings or charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes the Lord Advocate proposes to the Crown Office cash and running cost limits for 1996–97. [14212]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VIII, vote 7, will be increased by £2,300,000 from £45,770,000 to £48,070,000.

Within this total, the running cost limit will be increased by £1,300,000 from £42,718,000 to £44,018,000.

The supplementary is required in order that the Crown Office can take up part—£1,270,000—of its running cost end-year flexibility entitlement of £1,898,00 as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the House of Commons on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326–31.

The supplementary estimate also includes two transfers from the Scottish Office: £1,000,000 for capital expenditure and £30,000 to assist with the cost of the Dunblane inquiry.

The increase will be charged to the reserve or met from savings and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Hedgerows

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what length of hedgerow has been lost in Scotland in each year since 1979. [12486]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 24 January 1997]: Hedgerows are not measured annually in Scotland, but the overall change in the length of hedgerows meeting specified conditions can be estimated from sample information produced from time to time under the national countryside monitoring scheme. Between 1973 and 1988, the latest date for which a survey was carried out, rather less than 400 km of hedgerows were "lost" each year, on average, in Scotland. Current Government policy is to encourage all farmers to protect their hedgerows, and incentives for the restoration of hedges are available through my Department's agri-environment programme.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Cash Limits

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Lord President of the Council what changes he proposes to the 1996–97 cash and running costs limit for the Privy Council Office. [13170]

Mr. Newton: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVIII, vote 3 will be increased by £96,000 from £2,483,000 to £2,579,000 and the running cost limit is increased by £96,000 from £2,509,000 to £2,605,000. The increase will be offset by reductions in the Home Office class VII, vote 1 and Customs and Excise class XVI, vote 3, of £87,000 and £9,000 respectively and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Cash Limits

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to change the Overseas Development Administration cash limits for 1996–97 [13930]

Dr. Liam Fox: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class II, vote 5 will be reduced overall by £5,288,000 from £1,622,036,000 to £1,616,748,000 and the ODA running cost limit will be increased by £1,000,000 from £56,708,000 to £57,708,000.

The overall reduction is the net effect of outward public expenditure survey transfers to the diplomatic wing of £5,500,000 in respect of the British Council and £750,000 in respect of the Bosnia peace implementation conference and £100,000 to the Office of Science and Technology in respect of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission.

These reductions are offset by an increase of £1,000,000 to ODA running costs in respect of a partial take-up of end of year flexibility arrangements announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326–31, and an increase of £61,000 for expected costs for the Crown Agents privatisation programme. The increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which her Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which her Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12707]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The only document issued by my Department in 1996 with potential environmental effects was the Green Paper, "Protecting Our Heritage," which was published jointly with the Welsh Office. The importance of the environmentally sustainable development of tourism is reflected in the Department's tourism strategy to be published on 5 February 1997.

Ecclesiastical Heritage

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the submission by the Church of England in respect of the future of the ecclesiastical heritage. [12974]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The Government have warmly welcomed the Church's submission and reaffirmed its commitment to preservation of the ecclesiastical heritage. My Department is now having discussions with the General Synod to explore the issues raised.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Legal Costs

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: Sri Lankan asylum—Ravichandran and Sandralingham, in April 1996. [13481]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The available information is that, to date, the total legal costs incurred by the Home Office in the cases referred to amount to just over £24,000. This includes the hearing in April 1996 and other legal challenges in this case. At the hearing in April 1996 the appellants were awarded half the costs of the case, but the solicitors have not so far sought to enforce that order.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: Al Fayed nationality—Mohammed al Fayed and Ali Fayed, in May 1995. [13477]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Up to 28 January 1997, the Home Office's legal costs were £58,174.78. Details of internal Home Office administrative and other costs are not available as they have not been recorded separately. Details of the costs awarded against the Home Office have not yet been received, but would be payable only in the event of our appeal to the House of Lords being unsuccessful.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: Director General of Prison Service dismissal—Derek Lewis, in May 1996. [13483]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The costs incurred by the Department amounted to £16,428.95, excluding the costs of permanent Home Office staff. The sum to be paid to Mr. Lewis's legal representatives in respect of his costs has been settled at £41,000 in total.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: granting of High Court appeal—Kenneth Richardson in October 1985. [13479]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Legal costs to the Home Department of Mr. Richardson's judicial review proceedings were in the sum of £8,731.58. Pursuant to the order in 1995 of the divisional court, an additional sum of £5,000 towards Mr. Richardson's costs has been paid to his solicitors. I understand that they are in touch with the Treasury Solicitor about any balance still to be paid.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: Kashmiri students' sentencing-Quayyum Raja and Mohammed Riaz in November 1994. [13475]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The answer is (a) £4,359 in respect of services provided by the Treasury Solicitor and (b) £15,731.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: prisoners' release for access to lawyer-Wallace Smith, in January 1995. [13476]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Mr. Smith discontinued this action. Home Office legal expenses totalled £1,699.64 and £7,500 was paid towards Mr. Smith's legal costs.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: Rev. Moon immigration—Rev. Sun Myung Moon, in November 1995. [13480]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The information requested is (a) £12,813.97 and (b) £8,250.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: Bulger sentencing—Jon Venables and Robert Thompson, in May 1996. [13482]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The costs paid so far total £36,991 in respect of services provided by the Treasury Solicitor. The final decision on the apportionment of costs awaits the outcome of the case, which is still before the courts.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the case: IRA parole-Paul Norney, Stephen Nordone, Brendan Dowd, Sean Kinsella and Noel Gibson, in September 1995. [13478]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The costs paid so far total £20,522, in respect of services provided by the Treasury Solicitor. The issue of costs awarded against the Secretary of State has not yet been settled.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were (a) the costs incurred by his Department and (b) the costs awarded against him in the criminal injuries compensation case-ex parte Fire Brigades Union, in November 1994. [13474]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The total costs incurred by the Home Office in this case, which started in the High Court in March 1994 and concluded in the House of Lords in April 1995, were £103,338.77. This includes the respondent's bills of costs totalling £36,025.40.

Right to Secrecy

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) the Roman Catholic Church and (b) other religious denominations about the implications of new police powers of surveillance contained in the Police Bill [Lords] for the right of secrecy of the confessional and other private counselling by priests and pastors. [13312]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 January 1997]: We have received no representations from the Roman Catholic Church or other religious denominations on this matter.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide breakdowns of the number of asylum seekers currently detained under Immigration Act powers by (a) nationality, (b) gender, (c) place of detention, (d) length of detention and (e) immigration status at the time of application. [13263]

Mr. Kirkhope: The requested breakdown of detained asylum seekers is given in the tables:

Table 1: Number of people recorded as being detained[1,2] on 11 December 1996 who had sought asylum at some stage, by gender and immigration status

Gender	Port	Illegal entrants	Subject to deportation action	Total
Male	353	280	48	681
Female	52	13	8	73
Total	405	293	56	754

[1] Persons detained solely under the powers contained in Schedule 2 or 3 of the Immigration Act 1971.
[2] These figures include people who have been in detention for less than a month. Because of the delay in recording receptions into, and releases from, detention and the large number of persons detained for a short period, the figures should be used with caution.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average time currently taken to reach an initial decision on (a) asylum applications submitted prior to the implementation of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, (b) asylum applications submitted since implementation of that Act and (c) all asylum applications; [13265]

(2) what is the average time currently taken to hear and determine an appeal against a refusal of asylum. [13266]

Mr. Kirkhope: Information on the times taken at the various stages of the asylum process are given in the table.

Average time involved in deciding applications for asylum (October–December 1996)

	Months
Time taken for an initial decision to be made (pre-Act applications)	48.2
Time taken for an initial decision to be made (post-Act applications)	12.7
Time taken by the Home Office to process an appeal	1.2
Time taken by the Immigration Appeals Authority to determine an appeal	10.0

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 144, what was the total number of cases of a person detained under Immigration Act powers that were reviewed by a director of the immigration service in 1996; and what criteria determine which cases are reviewed by the directors of the immigration service. [13280]

Mr. Kirkhope: Taking their respective caseloads together, the two directors of the immigration service reviewed detention in 718 cases in 1996. Cases are referred for review by the directors once detention exceeds six months, and monthly thereafter.

Danny McNamee

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken in the case of Danny McNamee following the submission made to him in September 1994. [13301]

Mr. Kirkhope: Since receiving representations in September 1994, my officials have made inquiries of the police and Crown Prosecution Service and are currently awaiting a response from Mr. McNamee's solicitors to a request for some additional information which is needed before our consideration can be taken any further.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new evidence he has received since mid-1994 in respect of the case of Danny McNamee; and if he will make a statement. [13302]

Mr. Kirkhope: The hon. Gentleman wrote to my right hon. and learned Friend on 7 September 1994 in support of representations from Mr. McNamee's solicitors and, in the light of those, seeking a referral of Mr. McNamee's case to the Court of Appeal. Since that time Mr. McNamee's case has been under consideration by officials, who are currently awaiting further information from Mr. McNamee's solicitors.

Cash Limits

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for changes to the 1996–97 cash limits within his responsibilities. [14202]

Mr. Howard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VII, vote 1—Home Office administration, police, probation, immigration and other services. England and Wales—will be increased by £10,395,000 from £4,599,693,000 to £4,610,088,000. This increase is the net effect of the partial take-up of running costs end-year flexibility of £10,395,000, as announced by the Chief Secretary, 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326–31, transfer of running costs to the Department of National Heritage, transfers to the Scottish Office, Welsh Office, Northern Ireland Office, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Customs and Excise and Cabinet Office central drug co-ordination unit, transfer from non-voted probation credit approvals. This transfer from non-voted provision reduces the non-voted cash limit—HO/LACAP—by £180,000 from £97,892,000 to £97,712,000.

In consequence of the above changes, the Home Office gross running cost limit will be increased by £10,383,000 from £1,813,815,000 to £1,824,198,000.

The increases will be offset by savings, transfers or charges to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Record Office

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on changes to the cash limits of the Public Record Office, class VIII, vote 3 for 1996–97. [14206]

Mr. Streeter: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VIII, vote 3, has been increased by £1,034,000 from £31,559,000 to £32,593,000. This increase reflects in the main partial take-up of end of year flexibility for running costs or £298,000 and capital expenditure or £731,000). The increase also includes a £5,000 transfer from the Security Facilities Executive—SAFE—to fund the purchase of security advice. The increase will be offset by savings or charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Legal Aid

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the penalties for breaching legal aid regulations. [13804]

Mr. Streeter: The Legal Aid Board has power to revoke or discharge a civil legal aid certificate where information comes to light that the assisted person has intentionally failed to comply with the legal aid regulations. The assisted person may also be prosecuted under section 39 of the Legal Aid Act 1988 leading, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale—currently £2,5000—or to a term of imprisonment not exceeding three months, or to both.

Where an assisted person's solicitor has failed to comply with any provision of the legal aid regulations, and as a result the fund incurs a loss, the Legal Aid Board may defer all or part of the solicitor's profit costs until the solicitor has complied with such provisions. If the board refers the solicitor's conduct to the solicitors' disciplinary tribunal and the solicitor is disciplined, the board may retain any deferred profit costs.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department by what means his Department is able to waive costs under the statutory charge when an investigation reveals legal aid has been fraudulently claimed and made the legal liability of the assisted party. [13802]

Mr. Streeter: The Lord Chancellor does not have a power to waive costs under the statutory charge. The operation of the charge is provided for in section 16 of the Legal Aid Act 1988 and the relevant regulations, and the Legal Aid Board must comply with these provisions.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will conduct an investigation independent of the Legal Aid Board into the circumstances relating to the transfer of legal aid certificate No. 05/01/89/23181J on 10 September 1990 and subsequent amendments to that certificate through to its discharge. [13803]

Mr. Streeter: Under the Legal Aid Act 1988, the Legal Aid Board is responsible for the administration of the civil legal aid scheme in England and Wales. Neither the Lord Chancellor nor I comment on or intervene in the award of legal aid in individual cases.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department by what mechanisms his Department investigates and rectified (a) identified abuse of civil legal aid and (b) miscarriages of civil legal procedure resulting from the abuse of legal aid regulations. [13805]

Mr. Streeter: Under the Legal Aid Act 1988, the Legal Aid Board is responsible for the administration of the civil legal aid scheme in England and Wales. Investigations into the abuse of legal aid are the responsibility of the Legal Aid Board.

If abuse of the legal aid scheme is identified, the Lord Chancellor may consider changes to regulations where necessary. One recent example of this is the introduction of new regulations to assess the financial means of "apparently wealthy" applicants. The Lord Chancellor also asked the Legal Aid Board to establish a special investigations unit to investigate the means of applicants whose financial circumstances are particularly complex.

Unqualified Solicitors

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who is responsible for investigating allegations that a person not qualified as a licensed solicitor is presented to the client, assisted party, and Legal Aid Board as the nominated and conducting solicitor; and who would be responsible for prosecuting such a case. [13801]

Mr. Streeter: If allegations are received that the nominated solicitor is not qualified to act, the board will investigate. If the unqualified person has been admitted to the roll but does not have a practising certificate, the board will refer the matter to the office for the supervision of solicitors which will take appropriate disciplinary action.

If the unqualified person has never been admitted to the roll and has held him/herself out to be a qualified solicitor, the matter will be referred to the Law Society. The Law Society will consider the case and, in conjunction with the police, decide whether to prosecute under sections 20 and 21 of the Solicitors Act 1974.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Cash Limits

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals there are to change the 1996–97 (a) cash limits and running costs limit for the Office of Public Service. [14209]

Mr. Freeman: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the Office of Public Service, Class XVII, vote 1, will be increased by £4,223,000 from £178,627,000 to £182,850,000 and the gross running cost limit will be increased by £3,485,000 from £82,649,000 to £86,134,000.

The changes reflect the transfer of £687,000 from Cabinet Office other services, Class VXIII, vote 1, in respect of the transfer of responsibility for the superannuation awarding system and accommodation costs, an extra £486,000 to meet the cost of functions remaining in OPS following the sale of the Stationery Office, the Recruitment and Assessment/Services Agency and the Occupational Health and Safety Agency, offset by the take-up of running cost end-year flexibility of £486,000, the transfer of Cabinet Office, other services, class XVIII, vote 2, of £50,000 to fund OPS early departures, and a claim on the reserve of £3,050,000 for the costs falling to OPS of accommodation and the vote balance left after the sale of RAS. This is partially offset by a reduction of £50,000 in the cash limit on the Stationery Office, class XVII, vote 4.

The net running cost limit for the Civil Service College has increased from nil to £300,000. This is the result of lower than expected trading.

Parliamentary and Health Service Commissioners

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals there are to change the 1996–97 cash limit for the Office of the Parliamentary Commissioner and health service commissioners. [14210]

Mr. Freeman: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the Office of the Parliamentary Commissioner and health service commissioners, class XVIII, vote 4, will be reduced by £2,500,000 from £16,173,000 to £13,673,000. The reduction is in response to the Health Service Commissioners (Amendment) Act 1996 generating initially a lower than anticipated workload.

ENVIRONMENT

Rural Development Commission

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environmental what is the total estimated cost in the financial year 1997–98 of redundancy payments and pay in lieu of notice for staff made redundant as a result of the winding up of the Rural Development Comission's advisory service for small businesses in rural development areas. [13886]

Mr. Clappison: I am informed by the Rural Development Commission that the total estimated cost of redundancy payments in the financial year 1997–98 for staff made redundant as a result of winding up the commission's business service is £1,096,186.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was distributed by the Rural Development Commission to small firms in rural areas in the financial year 1995–96 in the form of rural counselling grants; how many businesses were in receipt of these grants; and what is the proposed expenditure on rural counselling grants in 1996–97. [13888]

Mr. Clappison: I am informed by the Rural Development Commission that rural counselling grants are given to business advisory agencies, such as local enterprise agencies, not direct to small firms. In 1995–96 £301,000 was given to 39 agencies for them to provide business advice to 2,887 small firms in rural development areas. The expected expenditure on rural counselling grants in 1996–97 is £364,000.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many small firms in rural development areas are currently clients of the Rural Development Commission's business service. [13885]

Mr. Clappison: I am informed by the Rural Development Commission that there are currently 8,529 small firms in rural development areas that are clients of the commission's business service.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what savings will be achieved in 1997–98 by the winding up of the Rural Development Commission's advisory service for small businesses in rural development areas, taking into account expenditure incurred by the proposed creation of rural development officer posts. [13889]

Mr. Clappison: I am informed by the Rural Development Commission that its estimate of net savings of salary and associated costs in 1997–98 to be achieved by the winding up of the commission's business advisory service is £624,000. This allows for expenditure incurred by the creation of additional rural development officer posts. A further £1,185,000 of programme expenditure will be saved by the ending of the commission's marketing support scheme and specialist consultancy support service.

Select Committee Report

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government will respond to the first report of the House of Lords Select Committee of the European Communities on freedom of access to information on the environment (HL9). [14041]

Mr. Clappison: Shortly.

Cash Limits

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change the 1996–97 cash limits and running cost limits for which he is responsible. [14301]

Mr. Gummer: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VI, vote 1—housing and construction, England—covering sections A, D to G and J to L of that vote, will be decreased by £7,172,000 from £331,468,000 to £324,296,000. An increase in the cash limit of £3,057,000 is offset by a decrease of £10,229,000. The increase consists of £557,000 to meet additional administration costs the corporation is expected to incur in preparing the loan portfolio for possible sale, funded from any receipt of the sale; a transfer of £2,000,000 from the non-voted Department of the Environment/new towns cash limit, and an offset of £500,000 from class VI, vote 8, Ordnance Survey. The decrease is a transfer from a number of programmes, principally £3,179,000 from gipsy site grant and £3,030,000 from the estates renewal challenge fund, to fund increases in Housing Corporation tax relief and supplementary management grants, which fall outside the cash limit.

The Department of the Environment/Housing Corporation non-voted cash limit will be increased by £2,000,000 from £1,035,868,000 to £1,037,868,000 in compensation for receipts which would normally have been recycled within the Housing Corporation and which may now be lost due to the proposed sale of the loans portfolio.

The Department of the Environment/new towns non-voted cash limit will be decreased by £2,000,000 from –£108,000,000 to –£110,000,000. This decrease is due to the Commission for New Towns having accelerated disposals and generated additional receipts above those already taken up in the winter supplementary estimate. Additional receipts of £3,250,000 in gross terms were generated, of which the commission expects to use £1,250,000 to increase capital spending leaving a balance of £2,000,000 which will be transferred to class VI, vote 1—housing and construction, England—to meet pressure on Housing Corporation tax relief grant.

The cash limit for class VI, vote 2—regeneration and countryside and wildlife—will be increased by £30,389,000 from £1,464,779,000 to £1,495,168,000. The increase is mainly due to the need to repay £20,000,000 advanced from the Contingencies Fund, as announced on 23 January, Official Report, column 680, to enable English Partnerships to purchase the site at the Greenwich peninsula for the millennium exhibition, and an increase in provision for central Government grants and grants to local authorities in place of European Commission receipts. This extra provision will be met by a call on the reserve to meet the cost of acquiring the Greenwich site and take up of end-year flexibility entitlement for European regional development fund, old programmes and for the other environmental services block, as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 July 1996, Official Report columns 326–31. The balance will be made up of a transfer of £34,000 from the Department for Education and Employment and the Department of Trade and Industry as further contributions towards the Manchester bomb fund, and a transfer from the ERDF non-voted cash limit.

The DOE/ERDF non-voted cash limit will be reduced £4,995,000 from £183,295,000 to £178,300,000. This reflects transfers of £4,518,000 to sections M and N on vote 2—regeneration and Countryside and Wildlife—and £477,000 to the Department of Transport.

The cash limit for class VI, vote 3—environmental protection and water—covering sections A to H of that vote, will be increased by £500,000 from £351,610,000 to £352,110,000. This change reflects increases in provision of £76,000 for water supply and sewerage grants in rural areas; and £424,000 for water supply and sewerage in assisted areas. The increase will be matched by a reduction in the cash limit for class VI, vote 4—local government and planning—of £500,000.

The cash limit for class VI, vote 4—local government and planning, England—covering sections A to F of that vote, will be reduced by £1,050,000 from £31,128,057,000 to £31,127,007,000. This reduction is the result of reductions in the payments made to the Valuation Office Agency in section A, valuation services, and reduction in the planning and minerals research programme, section D. The savings in section A will be used within vote 4 to allow an increase to the local government research programme in section C—local government research and surveys—and to enable the payment of a special grant from section H, other grants, to those authorities affected by the terrorist bombings in Docklands and central Manchester. Section H is outside the cash limit on the vote. The savings in section D will be used to allow an increase in section E—civil defence and water and sewerage grants—of class VI, vote 3, environmental protection and water.

The DOE local government reorganisation non-voted cash limit will be reduced by £2,176,000 from £107,845,000 to £105,669,000 to offset the balance of the increase on section H of vote 4 for the payment of special grant and of emergency financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme.

The cash limit for class VI, vote 5, administration, will be increased by £5,781,000 from £463,809,000 to £469,590,000. This change reflects the expected shortfall in running cost related receipts due to the Building Research Establishment executive agency which will not be realised before it is privatised, drawdown of £600,000 running cost end year flexibility entitlement in respect of the Health and Safety Executive gross running cost limit to meet severance and other expenditure requirements, a transfer of £655,000 to the Health and Safety Commission grant in aid from the Office of Public Services, class XVII, vote 1, in respect of opportunity cost rent payments; a transfer of £40,000 from the Northern Ireland Office, class XV, vote 1, for the costs of a temporary appointment of an inspector to the Planning Appeals Commission Northern Ireland, an increase of £1,324,000 to cover the costs of the sale of the Building Research Establishment executive agency, an increase of £367,000 in respect of additional costs incurred arranging for the sale of the Housing Corporation loans portfolio. These increases are partly offset by net savings of; £545,000 by the Planning Inspectorate executive agency due to additional local plan inquiry receipts, and £510,000 operating costs by the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre executive agency.

As a result, the qualifying provision for the DOE gross running cost limit will increase by £407,000 from £229,063,000 to £229,470,000. The HSE gross running cost limit will increase by £703,000 from £157,308,000 to £158,011,000. The BRE net running cost control limit has increased from nil to £3,850,000.

All the increases will be offset either by, savings or transfers or will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRANSPORT

Road Fund Licences

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the categories of vehicle currently exempt from payment of road fund licences. [13760]

Mr. Bowis: Currently, the following are exempt from vehicle excise duty:

emergency vehicles—ambulances, fire engines, fire service, mine rescue, lifeboat haulage and lighthouse authority vehicles;

police vehicles;

Crown vehicles;

NHS vehicles;

vehicles used by or on behalf of disabled persons in receipt of certain DSS allowances; vehicles used by organisations providing transport for disabled persons;

vehicles used for short journeys between different parts of land occupied by the same person for agriculture, horticulture or forestry; vehicles over 25 years old—except goods vehicles and buses used commercially; diplomatic and consular vehicles;

vehicles of visiting forces and international defence organisations;

vehicles visiting the UK temporarily and for personal export.

In addition, there is temporary exemption from VED for vehicles travelling to or from a pre-arranged roadworthiness test or weighing.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what projections he has made as to the change in the number of heavy goods vehicles if 44-tonne lorries are allowed on to British roads. [13552]

Mr. Watts: Our consultation document, "Lorry Weights", published in December, explained the uncertainty of any estimates, but concludes that eventually there might be between 3,200 and 6,500 fewer heavy lorries on our roads than would otherwise have been the case, depending on the extent to which 44-tonne lorries would cause some goods to be switched from rail to road.

Bus Passenger Journeys

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the change in the number of bus passenger journeys made outside London since 1985–86. [13666]

Mr. Watts: Local bus passenger journeys made outside London have declined by 29 per cent. since 1985–86. The following table summarises the available figures.

Million passenger journeys

Year	London	Great Britain outside London	Great Britain
1985–86	1,152	4,489	5,641
1986–87	1,164	4,177	5,341

Cash Limits

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1996–97. [14129]

Sir George Young: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

The cash limit for class V, vote 1—Highways Agency—will be increased by £1,214,000 from £1,662,285,000 to £1,663,499,000. The increase in the cash limit reflects adjustments in running costs funding between this vote and class V, vote 2, to allow the consolidation of administrative budgets and funds for the Highways Agency's early retirement programme and also the balance of end year flexibility entitlement as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326–31. Running costs provision for this vote increases by £1,214,000 from £75,984,000 to £77,198,000.

The cash limit for class V, vote 2—administration and transport services—will be reduced by £232,000 from £154,877,000 to £154,645,000. The reduction in the cash limit arises from a claim on the reserve for track access grants of £6,000,000 and inter-vote transfer from class V, vote 5 of £500,000 for expenditure associated with the channel tunnel rail link consultancy, offset by inter-vote transfers between this vote and class V, vote 1, for expenditure consolidating administrative budgets and the Highway's Agency's early retirement programme of £1,214,000 class V, vote 3, for expenditure relating to the Croydon tramlink of £4,527,000, and class V, vote 6 for expenditure relating to the clean-up operation for the Sea Empress of £327,000, and to the Marine Agencies' early retirement programmes of £664,000. Running costs provision for this vote is reduced by £2,205,000 from £107,987,00 to £105,782,000.

The cash limit on class V, vote 3—transport industries—will be increased by £5,100,00 from £10,167,000 to £15,267,000. The increase is met by a claim on the reserve for increased expenditure and receipts associated with rail consultancies and rail privatisation offset by an inter-vote transfer to class V, vote 2 of £500,000 for expenditure associated with the channel tunnel rail link consultancy.

The cash limit on class V vote 4—Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency—will be increased by £2,125,000 from £178,326,000 to £180,451,000. The increase is met by claims on the reserve for increased expenditure on the development of photographs on driving licences at £2,274,000, and on higher volumes of vehicle licensing business generated under the terms of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's demand financing regime of £1,024,000, offset by an inter-vote transfer of deferred expenditure for the statutory off-road notification project of £1,173,000 to class V, vote 6 for the clean-up operation for the Sea Empress. Running costs provision for this vote is increased by £3,441,000 from £173,132,000 to £176,572,000.

The cash limit on class V, vote 5—roads and local transport—will be reduced by £20,473,000 from £392,038,000 to £371,565,000. The reduction comes about because of the transfer of responsibility for the Croydon tramlink project from this vote to class V, vote 3, section H, London Transport's core business.

The cash limit on class V, vote 6—other transport agencies—will be increased by £8,164,000 from £86,065,000 to £94,229,000. The increase is met by a claim on the reserve of £6,000,000 and inter-vote transfers from class V, vote 2 of £327,000 and from class V, vote 4 of £1,173,000 for the costs associated with the clean-up operations for the Sea Empress, and a transfer for the Marine Agencies' early retirement programmes of £664,000, also from class V, vote 2. Running costs provision for this vote increases by £664,000 from £38,841,000 to £39,505,000.

As a result of these changes, the Department of Transport gross running costs limit will be increased by £3,114,000 from £395,944,000 to £399,058,000.

The Department of Transport local authority capital cash limit will be increased by £447,000 from £312,644,000 to £313,091,000. This increase results from a transfer of funds from class VI, vote 2 of the Department of the Environment for the development of the Conway Park railway station.

In addition, the cash limit on class V, vote 7—passenger rail services—will be increased by £65,329,000, from £1,787,668,000 to £1,852,997,000. The additional provision is required to provide support for the provision of passenger rail services in 1996–97, and adviser costs in connection with the letting of franchises. The Office of Passenger Rail Franchising running costs limit will also be increased by £444,000 from £7,556,000 to £8,000,000 to take account of receipts in respect of seconded staff.

The overall increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Rail Industry (Performance)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his latest assessment of the railway industry's performance in 1996–97. [14130]

Sir George Young: The railway industry's recent performance has been particularly good. For example, in the last four months, levels of punctuality and reliability have been higher than for the same period in any previous year since data for British Rail's passenger charter began to be collected in 1991–92. On average, 91.8 per cent. of trains arrived within five to 10 minutes of their schedules arrival time and 99.1 per cent. of scheduled services ran. These high levels of performance reflect the success of the new performance regimes, which give all parties direct financial incentives to ensure that services run to time. The franchising director is consequently making payments to the train operating companies for their improved performance. These payments are reflected in the additional provision for passenger rail services included in the proposals I have announced today for changing my Department's cash limits and running costs limit for 1996–97.

Railway Maintenance

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what instructions he has given to the Rail Regulator to ensure that Railtrack provides the contractual level of maintenance of the rail network. [13429]

Mr. Watts: None. The Rail Regulator's duties are contained in the Railways Act 1993. He has recently published a statement setting out the regulatory objectives for Railtrack's infrastructure renewal and investment programme.

Seafarer Training (English Language)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the implementation of English language speaking requirements under EU directives on seafarer training; and what progress has been made with implementing the directives. [13425]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 30 January 1997]: We have received four representations on the draft regulations which are intended to implement the English language requirements in directive 94/58/EC. We have also received representation from the European Commission about the implementation of this remaining provision of the directive into UK law. The draft regulations covering the language provision are currently being finalised following consultation.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Maintained Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates her Department has made in respect of the changes in (a) pupil numbers and (b) primary class size levels in maintained schools in England by 2000. [12191]

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of pupils in maintained schools in England in January 1996 was 7,370,000 full-time equivalents. By the year 2000, this is expected to increase to 7,596,000.

The Department does not make estimates of class size levels. Class size is determined by the head teachers and governors of individual schools.

Higher and Further Education, Lancashire

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what policies have been introduced to encourage more people to enter (a) higher and (b) further education in Lancashire since 1992. [13278]

Mr. Forth: Government policies, as set out in the 1991 White Papers, "Education and Training for the 21st Century", CM 1536, and "Higher Education: A New Framework", CM 1541, have led to a substantial increase in participation in further and higher education since 1992. Numbers in further education in England have increased by 25 per cent. between 1992–93 and 1995–96. The proportion of young people entering higher education in Great Britain has increased from nearly 28 per cent. in 1992 to one in three. Separate figures for participation rates in Lancashire are not available.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people went into (a) higher and (b) further education in Lancashire in each year since 1992. [13277]

Mr. Forth: The information, based on location of institution rather than the domicile of students, is as follows:

Entrants[1] to further and higher education in Lancashire

Thousands

Academic year	Entrants to FE	Entrants to HE
1992–93	72.3	[2]19.9
1993–94	73.1	20.9
1994–95	76.6	20.0
1995–96	n/a	[3]21.0

n/a=not available.

[1] Full-time and part-time students in their first year of study.

[2] Excludes part-time students in "old" universities of which there were some 1,000 in 1993–94.

[3] Includes estimates of HE students in FEIs.

Medical Students

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the cost per medical student for each year of study in each year since 1992; and for each year what was the percentage change on the previous year. [12973]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 29 January 1997]: Figures are not available in the form requested.

The Higher Education Funding Council for England publishes each year the figures that higher education institutions report for the average council grant for teaching allocated to each academic subject category. The figures for pre-clinical and clinical medicine are shown in the table, together with figures for the average level of tuition fee for medical students.

Academic year	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
Average unit of council funding[1] (clinical/ pre-clinical medicine)	4,209	4,203	5,719	5,769
Tuition fees[2]	4,099	4,099	2,320	2,320
Total	8,308	8,302	8,039	8,089
Percentage change	—	–0.1	–3.2	0.6

[2] Average fee for all medical students, assuming constant distribution of students across the five years of study.

Data collected on maintenance awards and student loans do not distinguish between subject of study. Hence the average expenditure on awards and loans per medical student is not available.

Nursing and Employment Service

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) for what reasons staffing reductions were made to the nursing and healthcare employment service in 1996; and which posts were affected; [13391]

(2) what professional advice was sought before the decision to make reductions at the nursing and healthcare employment service; [13393]

(3) by what method the reductions in the number of nursing consultants in the Employment Service were achieved; what was the cost to the Employment Service of these reductions in 1996–97; and where the total costs of these reductions came from; [13395]

(4) what were the staffing levels of the nursing and healthcare employment service on (a) 1 December 1995 and (b) 1 January 1997; [13390]

(5) what legal advice he has taken about how the Employment Service currently complies with the Nurses Agencies Act 1957; [13392]

(6) what are the estimated costs of purchasing contingency advice from an outside agency for the nursing and healthcare employment service. [13394]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ray Phillips to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 31 January 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your questions regarding the Nursing and Healthcare Employment Service (NHES), the reasons for reductions in the Service in 1996, the numbers of posts which were affected, the legal and professional advice sought in respect of the impact of the reductions, the ES responsibilities under the Nurses Agencies Acts 1957 (1951 Scotland) and the current service levels and the costs of purchasing contingency advice from an outside agency in support of the NHES.

On 1 December 1995 the staff levels of the NHES were:

1 Chief Nursing Consultant (Head Office based)

4 Nursing Consultants (regional—outstationed)

1 Personal Secretary

1 Administrative Assistant

On 1 January 1997 the levels were:

1 Chief Nursing Consultant

1 Nursing Consultant

1 Personal Secretary

1 Administrative Assistant

The NHES was reduced in size and scope in 1996 as part of a range of economy measures agreed by the Employment Service Board. In reaching the decision to reduce the Service the Board took full account of legal advice regarding ES compliance with the Nurses Agencies Acts 1957 (1951 Scotland) and of the views of its Chief Nursing Consultant. The ES currently demonstrates the duty of care under the Act by submitting only those appropriately qualified nurses required to fill healthcare employer vacancies.

Reductions in the number of nursing consultant posts were achieved through voluntary severance and early retirement effecting a saving of £123,607. The budget identified for the purchase of contingency cover by way of a 'call off' contract to provide emergency cover for sickness absence is £12,000. This cover is available via an outside agency and was achieved through the competitive tendering process.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Further Education

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has received from the Further Education Funding Council concerning the state of college finances; and if she will make a statement. [13697]

Mr. Paice: The Department is in regular contact with the funding council on a range of matters.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each FE college in England the number of (a) teaching and (b) other posts lost through redundancy for each year since incorporation. [13698]

Mr. Paice: This information is not collected centrally.

Cash Limits

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she plans changes to cash limits and running cost limits on votes within her responsibility for 1996–97. [14254]

Mr. Robin Squire: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IX, vote 1—Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services—and class IX vote 3, Employment Service, will be amended as follows:

Class	Vote	Existing cash limit £	Change £	New cash limit £
IX	1	8,745,142,000	–58,515,000	8,686,627,000
IX	3	1,288,977,000	–20,303,000	1,268,674,000

The cash limit for class IX, vote 1, will be decreased by £58,515,000 from £8,745,142,000 to £8,686,627,000. This is the result of a transfer of £56,000,000 from section A, I and J to the non-cash-limited demand-led element of funding for further education, section B; £8,100,000 in expenditure from section A is to be transferred to the non-voted DfEE/LACAP cash limit.

Transfers to other Departments and votes include £17,000 to the Department of the Environment as a contribution to the Manchester bomb appeal, £60,000 to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for salary-related costs of British teachers working in overseas countries, £2,300,00 to the Department of Social Security in respect of bridging allowances, £190,000 to the Employment Service in relation to post-merger administrative changes, £165,000 and £66,000 of running costs and capital provision respectively to the Office for National Statistics in respect of machinery of Government changes and premises costs.

These transfers have been partially offset by the take-up of £7,000,000 running costs end-year flexibility entitlement, as announced by the Chief Secretary to the House of Commons on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326–31, an increase of £1,000,000 in publicity expenditure funded through a transfer from the Employment Service and increases of £143,000 on specialist schools expenditure and £240,000 on the private finance initiative expenditure offset by corresponding decreases in the DfEE/LACAP cash limit.

As a result of the changes, the DfEE/LACAP cash limit will be increased by £7,717,000 from £46,523,000 to £54,240,000.

The cash limit for class IX, vote 3—Employment Service—will be decreased by £20,303,000 from £1,288,977,000 to £1,268,674,000. The running costs limit for vote 3 will be decreased by £2,993,000 from £910,151,000 to £907,158,000 as a result of a net transfer of £31,423,000 to the Department of Social Security to cover staff and services transferred to the Benefits Agency as part of the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance, a transfer to the Cabinet Office of £750,000 for advance funding of annual compensation payments for early departures, a transfer of £10,000 to the Inland Revenue to cover the transfer of responsibility for accommodation at Bognor Regis, the take-up of £29,000,000 under the running costs end-year flexibility scheme and a transfer of £190,000 from the Department for Education and Employment to cover work now undertaken by the Employment Service.

The ES's other current provision will be reduced by £21,000,000 from £111,571,000 to £90,571,000 as a result of a transfer to the Department for Education and Employment, to help cover an increase int he demand-led element of further education expenditure and publicity expenditure.

The ES's capital provision will be increased by £3,690,000 from £86,200,00 to £89,890,000 as a result of the take-up of £3,000,000 of the capital end year flexibility entitlement, as announced by the Chief Secretary to the House of Commons on 12 July 1996, Official Report, cols. 326–31, and £690,000 from the Department of Social Security for the refurbishment of the Doncaster local office following the reassignment of the lease to the Employment Service.

The running costs provision for class IX, vote 1, will be increased by £6,645,000 from £367,263,000 to £373,908,000. The running costs provision for class IX, vote 3, will be decreased by £2,993,000 from £910,151,000 to £907,158,000. The gross running costs limit for the Department for Education and Employment is increased by £3,652,000 from £1,277,414,000 to £1,281,066,000.

HEALTH

Toothpaste

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of levels of consumption of toothpaste in the north-west relative to the south of England. [12471]

Mr. Malone: We have made no such assessment.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to issue guidance to water companies regarding fluoridation of public water supplies; if he will list those (a) individuals and (b) organisations consulted on this guidance indicating the date of consultation; and if he will place in the Library copies of all responses. [12631]

Mr. Malone: We have no plans to issue guidance to water companies about the fluoridation of public water supplies.

Dental Hygiene

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of children not cleaning their teeth (a) in Bolton and (b) nationally. [12472]

Mr. Malone: We have no plans to make such an assessment.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 162, what was the income of the highest earning NHS dentist in 1995–96 carrying out primary non-orthodontic work. [13903]

Mr. Malone: The largest gross fee payment in 1995–96 to a national health service dentist who had no other dentist working for him and who carried out primarily non-orthodontic work was £363,000.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 162, how many (i) adult patients and (ii) children were registered with the highest paid NHS dentist in 1995–96. [13856]

Mr. Malone: The dentist with the highest level of gross fee earnings in 1995–96 who had no other dentists working for him had no registrations and was engaged mainly in orthodontic treatment.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 162, how many practices the highest earning NHS dentist has; and in which counties they are located. [13855]

Mr. Malone: To give this information would be in breach of the open government code of practice, which exempts information which could facilitate an unwarranted invasion of privacy.

Hospital Consultants

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) casualty and (b) accident and emergency consultants there were in each of the last five years. [13246]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is:

Accident and emergency consultants in England

Fulwood Hospital, Sheffield

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the sale and development of the site of the Fulwood hospital, Sheffield. [13305]

Mr. Horam: Fulwood hospital is surplus to the requirements of the national health service and has been placed on the market for sale. A number of offers have now been received, which will be evaluated before selecting the preferred purchaser. Proceeds from such sales are reinvested in health care projects.

Cash Limits

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes will be made to the cash limits of his Department in 1996–97. [14207]

Mr. Dorrell: Subject to the approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XI, vote 1—hospital, community health, family health and related services, England—will be reduced by £16,641,000, from £27,807,821,000 to £27,791,180,000. This reduction allows for a transfer of £124,896,000 following a reappraisal of drugs budget requirements and a transfer of £8,000 to Department of Health and Social Services Northern Ireland for the National Poisons Information Service. The reduction is partially offset by increases of £81,121,000 in respect of the take up of entitlement under the end-year flexibility scheme; £25,000,000 for a claim on the reserve to support priority services, and by a transfer of £2,142,000 from class XVIII, vote 4—Office of the Parliamentary Commissioner and health service commissioners—as an offset for previously funded activity not now required.

The cash limit for class XI, vote 2—Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health and personal social services, England—will be reduced by £169,000, from £1,208,599,000 to £1,208,430,000. This reduction allows for transfers of £494,000 to class XII, vote 3—Department of Social Security: administration—made up of £366,000 (£329,000 running costs) for accommodation charges, £68,000 running costs for telecommunications and £60,000 for services provided by staff at Richmond house and a transfer of £117,000 to DHSS, Northern Ireland to obtain advice and information about medical devices. The reduction is partially offset by a transfer of £442,000 from class XII, vote 3—Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services—made up of £352,000 running costs for the production of milk tokens, £70,000 running costs for the provision of petty cash services at Richmond house and £20,000 towards the administrative costs of Age Concern.

The Department's gross running cost limit will be reduced by £5,099,000 from £280,057,000 to £274,958,000. This reflects a reduction of £5,124,000 mainly to meet shortfalls on receipts, partially offset by the transfers listed.

All increases will either be offset by savings, increased receipts or transfers to or from other votes or charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Volatile Substance Abuse

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State Health what assessment he has made of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs in its report on volatile substance abuse. [14208]

Mr. Burns: The Government welcome this thoughtful and thorough report and its recommendations. A copy of the Government's response has been placed in the Library.

The Government share the advisory council's view that although volatile substance abuse has characteristics in common with other types of drug misuse, it has particular problems of its own which merit specific attention.

While the number of deaths associated with VSA has fallen from 151 in 1990 to 57 in 1994, the Government are committed to continuing the pressure to reduce and ultimately eliminate such deaths. Since the advisory council's report was presented to Ministers, a wide range of action which broadly reflects the ACMD's recommendations has been taken, including:

the Department of Health has agreed a contract with St. George's hospital medical school to produce an annual report on the number of VSA-associated deaths; the Department funded the Health Education authority 1995 national drugs campaign survey which brought to light new information on the prevalence of VSA. The HEA has extended the 1996 survey to include items about prevalence and behaviour patterns associated with VSA;

the Department has funded the National Children's Bureau solvent misuse project to become a national resource for the collection and dissemination of information on VSA, including details of education and training materials;

the National Children's bureau has surveyed drug action teams to establish the extent of their involvement in VSA work at local level;

the Department for Education and Employment has issued guidance to schools on VSA. The Department of health and the British Manufacturers Association have jointly funded the Advisory Council on Alcohol and Drug Education—TACADE—to produce a resource pack to facilitate VSA education in primary schools;

the Department also funded an HEA advertising campaign in autumn 1996, targeted at parents to raise awareness of the dangers of VSA;

a VSA Industry Forum has been established to examine the advisory council's recommendations specific to industry. The Department of Trade and Industry has sponsored research on behalf of the forum into the effectiveness of product labelling. The forum is considering the introduction of voluntary product labelling; manufacturers and retailers of cigarette lighter gas refills have voluntarily introduced 25 ml refill cans and emphasis has shifted from larger cans.

Emergency and Intensive Care Services

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list those regions of the NHS for which he has requested reports on emergency care and intensive care; and if he will place copies in the Library; [13884]

(2) when he intends to publish the report to Alan Langlands on intensive care provision in the North West region of the NHS. [13883]

Mr. Horam: All regional offices of the National Health Services Executive were asked to report to the chief executive of the NHS on intensive care in their regions. We regard these reports as internal discussion and advice and do not intend to publish them.

Elective Admission Waiting List

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the size of the resident-leased waiting list for elective admission at the second quarter of 1995–96 for (a) ordinary admission, (b) day care admission and (c) all admissions; and how many patients have been awaiting admission for (i) 0 to five months, (ii) six to 11 months, (iii) 12 to 17 months and (iv) more than 18 months, for each specialty and for each health authority separately. [13701]

Mr. Horam: This information is contained in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England (Resident Based)—at 30 September 1995", copies of which will be placed in the Library.

St. Thomas's Hospital

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the proposal to develop St. Thomas's hospital under the private finance initiative was included in the calculation of the Departmental total in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report"; what was the value of that proposal; and if he will make a statement on its current status. [13807]

Mr. Horam: The figure in table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" does not represent a control total—it represents an estimate of the anticipated spend on private finance schemes. In deciding the level of the estimate my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health took account of all private finance initiative schemes being prepared within the national health service including the St. Thomas's scheme. Approval has just been given for the trust to draw up a revised outline business case in the light of changed purchaser requirements.

Life Expectancy

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the life expectancy in each region for (a) men and (b) women in each year since 1992. [13704]

Mr. Burns: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 23 January 1997, Official Report, columns 703–4. The reply referred to figures for 1992, which is the most recent year for which regional analyses are available.

NHS Employees

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many employees there were in the NHS in England by (a) NHS trust, (b) health authority and (c) general practice surgeries in the last year for which figures are available. [8491]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 12 December 1996]: Information on the number of staff employed by each national health service trust and health authority, and the number of general medical services practice staff by each family health service authority, will be placed in the Library. Information on the number of staff employed by individual general practice surgeries is not available centrally.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organophosphates

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of illnesses connected with organophosphate toxicity have been reported to his Department in the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13872]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to him of 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 107. Numbers of incidents of human suspected adverse reactions to all veterinary medicines are contained in the annual reports of the appraisal panel for human suspected adverse reactions, all of which have been published and are available in the Library of the House. Since 1 January 1992 there have been 516 reports of human suspected adverse reactions to organophosphate veterinary medicines, of which 416 related to sheep dips.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the reasons behind the recent outbreaks of Newcastle disease in (a) Ross on Wye and (b) Sussex; and if he will make a statement. [13607]

Mrs. Browning: The State Veterinary Service is actively investigating the current outbreaks of Newcastle disease, but no source of infection has yet been identified.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out his policy on compensation for farmers whose poultry are slaughtered for (a) contracting and (b) coming into contact with birds affected with Newcastle disease; and if he will make a statement. [13611]

Mrs. Browning: The Animal Health Act 1981 makes provision for the slaughter of diseased or suspected poultry or poultry exposed to the infection of disease. The Act requires the Minister to pay compensation for poultry, other than diseased poultry, at the value of the bird immediately before it was slaughtered.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how long a vaccine against Newcastle disease has been available; for what periods it has been withdrawn; and if he will make a statement. [13610]

Mrs. Browning: Newcastle disease vaccines have been available in the UK for more than 30 years. Both live and inactivated vaccines are currently available. However, on the advice of the independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee, which advises the Government on all matters relating to the authorisation of veterinary medicines, live La Sota and Clone 30 vaccines were suspended in 1981. This was because of concerns that high virulence strains of these vaccines could interfere with the diagnosis of disease and could spread to non-vaccinated flocks. In 1993 the VPC reviewed the suspension in the light of Commission decision 93/152/EEC on the criteria for vaccines in the EU. Vaccines containing low-virulence strains of live Clone 30 were re-authorised on the basis of the VPC advice and are therefore also currently available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of (a) chickens and (b) turkeys on farms in England are currently vaccinated against Newcastle disease; and if he will make a statement. [13600]

Mrs. Browning: There is no statutory requirement for routine vaccination against Newcastle disease and the information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the vaccine against Newcastle disease on (a) farmed poultry and (b) other captive birds; and if he will make a statement. [13604]

Mrs. Browning: All veterinary medicines marketed in the UK must satisfy statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. The licensing authority is advised on this by the independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee. Newcastle disease vaccines currently marketed in the UK are authorised for use in fowls, whether farmed or otherwise kept. Veterinary surgeons have discretion to use such vaccines on other captive birds under their care in accordance with the provisions of the Medicines (Restrictions on the Administration of Veterinary Medicinal Products) Regulations 1994. Veterinary surgeons may wish to consult the manufacturer of the product on the dose to be administered and whether there is any information on the safety and efficacy of the product in captive birds other than fowls.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recommendations his Department makes to farmers with regard to the vaccination of poultry against Newcastle disease; and if he will make a statement. [13609]

Mrs. Browning: Poultry farmers are advised to vaccinate their flocks against Newcastle disease. This advice has been confirmed in the recent press releases concerning the current outbreaks of the disease.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if any of the birds involved in the (a) Ross on Wye and (b) sussex outbreak of Newcastle disease had been given the vaccine prior to contamination; and if he will make a statement. [13605]

Mrs. Browning: Of the five cases identified up to 29 January, in only one involving turkeys had the birds been vaccinated. It is not yet known whether or not the vaccination took place before contamination with Newcastle disease, but in any event the vaccine would not have had sufficient time to develop protection in the birds.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the risks to farmed ostriches from Newcastle disease; and if he will make a statement. [13620]

Mrs. Browning: Ostriches are susceptible to Newcastle disease, as are other birds. The risk to ostriches will depend on the virulence of the strain of the disease concerned.

Ostriches

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recommendations his Department issues to people farming ostriches; and if he will make a statement. [13622]

Mrs. Browning: The welfare of farmed ostriches is protected by legislation. This is supplemented by guidelines issued by the Farm Animal Welfare Council. We are, in addition, working with colleagues in the Council of Europe on a recommendation to the welfare of farmed ratites—ostrich, emu and rhea—which we hope will be adopted later this year.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of ostrich farms in operation in each of the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [13621]

Mrs. Browning: None. Information on ostrich farms is not collected centrally.

Quarantine Premises

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of quarantine premises state veterinary staff will inspect before compiling the information required for his Department's voluntary code of practice; and if he will make a statement. [13540]

Mrs. Browning: All quarantine premises that have undertaken to comply with the voluntary code of practice for the welfare of dogs and cats in quarantine premises will be inspected by the State Veterinary Service to ensure compliance.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects information to be published regarding the quarantine kennels which comply with the welfare standards set out by his Department's document voluntary code of practice on welfare standards in quarantine premises; and if he will make a statement. [13541]

Mrs. Browning: Information on the quarantine premises that comply with the voluntary code of practice for the welfare of dogs and cats in quarantine premises will be included in the literature sent out to prospective importers of pet dogs and cats after all the premises that have undertaken to comply with the code have been inspected by the State Veterinary Service.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) sheep, (b) calves and (c) pigs were rejected as unfit to travel prior to export from the United Kingdom in each month of 1996. [13542]

Mrs. Browning: The numbers of animals rejected as unfit to travel from Great Britain were as follows:

	Ovine	Bovine	Porcine
January	471	103	128
February	204	251	60
March	131	28	69
April	0	0	80
May	1	0	71
June	14	4	27
July	379	7	62
August	574	0	27
September	608	0	42
October	410	0	130
November	547	1	20
December	390	2	55

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who takes legal responsibility for unaccompanied consignments of livestock that are ferried from Dover port from the time a driver leaves his consignment of livestock at Dover port to the time he rejoins his vehicle at the continental port of arrival. [13545]

Mrs. Browning: None of the consignments referred to are unaccompanied.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) in cases where consignments of livestock cannot be accompanied by their driver during the sea crossing from Dover to continental ports, what steps he takes to ensure that the person in charge of the animals during the journey is declared in accordance with articles 7 or 8 of the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1994; [13546]

(2) when unaccompanied vehicles containing livestock are permitted to leave the port of Dover on the MV Cap Afrique, what steps he takes to ensure that the animals' journey is not delayed because of the absence of drivers at the port of arrival. [13547]

Mrs. Browning: The operators of the Cap Afrique employ a competent stockman who takes responsibility for animals which are not accompanied by their drivers. The cross-channel travel arrangements for the drivers who cannot be taken on the Cap Afrique are such that they should arrive in time to meet the vessel at the port of destination.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food where on the MV Cap Afrique provision has been made for isolation of ill or injured animals during the voyage. [13548]

Mrs. Browning: The Department is not of the view that point 18 of schedule 3 to the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994 concerning provision of facilities for isolation of ill or injured animals during the voyage applies when animals are being carried on a roll-on/roll-off ferry.

Hedley Lomas (Ireland) Ltd.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if Hedley Lomas (Ireland) Ltd. or its livestock export consultant has now provided particulars of its claim against his Department for damages. [13549]

Mrs. Browning: No.

Sheep (Collection Centres)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to amend the United Kingdom regulations which do not accurately reflect the provisions in Community legislation including

Council directive 91/68/EEC referred to in his answer of 12 June 1996, Official Report, column 207; and if he will make a statement. [13550]

Mrs. Browning: The Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995, as amended, will shortly be replaced by the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1997 which will clarify that holdings operating as collection centres have to be approved only if they are handling cattle or pigs intended for intra-Community trade.

Rice

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements the European Community had for the import of rice from its overseas community territories; in what quantities and from which territories; what changed arrangements have now been made for each of these territories and for what reasons; and what treaty instruments and administrative arrangements of the Council or Commission have been made to implement these changes, and for what period of time. [13906]

Mr. Baldry: Article 101 of Council decision 91/482/EEC, on the association of the overseas countries and territories with the European Economic Community, provides for products originating in or processed in an OCT to be imported into the Community free of customs duties and charges having equivalent effect. No quantitiatve limits for rice are imposed by the decision. Imports have been rising over the last five years. In the marketing year 1 September 1995 to 31 August 1996 they were just under 240,000 tonnes—source: EU Commission—principally from the Netherlands Antilles but also from others including Montserrat and the Turks and Caicos Islands. Article 109 and annex IV of the decision provide for the Commission to take emergency safeguard action to limit imports when these are causing serious disturbance to the EU market. As a temporary measure, the Commission has taken such action to limit imports to 42,650 tonnes of rice in the first four months of 1997. Of this, 4,594 tonnes has been reserved for Montserrat and 1,328 tonnes for the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Deer

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in the establishment of deer management groups in the counties of Devon and Somerset. [13539]

Mr. Boswell: There are currently five deer management groups in Devon and Somerset. A further two groups are currently being established.

Cash Limits

Mr. Couchman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes are proposed to the cash limits for class III, vote 2 Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for 1996–97. [14204]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class III, vote 2—Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food—will be reduced by £3,789,000 from £916,375,000 to £912,586,000.

Provision of £2,160,000 is being transferred from the Ministry of Defence for the storm tide warning service. Reductions are being made in the cash limit to take account of a transfer to the Office of Science and Technology for staff transfers and redundancies at Horticultural Research International of £1,800,000, a transfer to MAFF's non-voted cash limit for supplementary credit approvals of £1,150,000 and the reimbursement of funds to the Exchequer in respect of aid to the tanning industry of £3,000,000. Provision has been included for additional payments and matching receipts of £20,000,000 in respect of EU beef support measures. Provision for payments to the rendering industry of £118,000,000 has been reclassified within the vote.

The MAFF/LACAP cash limit for supplementary credit approvals will be increased by £2,011,000 from £14,422,000 to £16,433,000. The increase comprises two elements; £861,000 relates to the Ministry's entitlement to end-year flexibility, which takes account of slippage in the construction of a number of coast protection schemes, such as those at Hythe and Eastbourne. The balance is to be matched by the reduction of £1,150,000 in MAFF's voted cash limit class III, vote 2.

The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on farm incomes. [14213]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Provisional figures show that total income from farming fell by 8 per cent. in real terms in 1996. However, incomes remain higher in real terms than in 1994 and the preceding 10 years, and in the four years up to 1995 they rose by more than 75 per cent. in real terms. Detailed estimates of the income, output and productivity of United Kingdom agriculture in 1996 were published this morning and have been placed in the Library of the House.

WALES

Social Lettings

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Sectetary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of social lettings which are available for the year 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [12977]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There were 21,088 social lettings, excluding transfers and exchanges in 1995–96. I am not aware of any specific grounds to expect the 1996–97 figure to be greatly different.

Council House Sales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the total amount of council house sales receipts returned to councils in 1995–96; and if he will make a statement; [12979]

(2) what was the total amount of council house sales receipts held by each district and borough council in the years 1994–95 and 1995–96. [12980]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Local authorities are required to set aside 75 per cent. of receipts from the sale of council houses against their credit liabilities, in accordance with section 59 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Authorities are able to use the remaining 25 per cent.—the usable part—to set aside against their credit liabilities or for new capital spending, in accordance with section 60 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

The table gives the receipts received by local authorities from the sale of council houses in 1994–95 and 1995–96; the usable part of these receipts for 1995–96; and the accumulated receipts, set aside and usable, at 31 March 1995 and 31 March 1996. The set aside receipts are the total for the housing revenue account. It is not possible from local authority returns to disaggregate set-aside receipts from the sale of council houses from other set-aside receipts held in the housing revenue account.

Notes:

[1] Under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, authorities are required to set aside a proportion of capital receipts as provision to meet credit liabilities ("the reserved part"). The amounts shown are such receipts which, at the date shown, were yet to be used to meet those liabilities. European Union grants are included.

[2] All set aside housing revenue account receipts, including housing receipts other than from the sale of council houses.

[3] The usable part of in-year receipts after deduction of "the reserved part".

[4] Provisional.

[5] Cash backed accumulated receipts returns have not yet been received for 1995–96 for Glyndwr or Rhuddlan and are therefore not included in the totals.

European Summit

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what role Swansea will play int he 1998 European summit. [13148]

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister announced on 28 January, Official Report, column 160, that the June 1998 European Council will be held in Cardiff. This provides a unique opportunity for not only Cardiff but also the rest of Wales. I will be considering how its benefits can be spread as widely as possible.

Poll Tax Arrears

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many poll tax arrears cases currently involve the use of bailiffs; and if he will make a statement; [13557]

(2) how many poll tax arrears cases there are for each of the former district council areas. [13558]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Electricity Supplies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps his Department has taken to improve the electricity distribution system in Wales following the recent occurrences of supply cut-off during cold weather. [13316]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is a matter for the regional electricity companies and the Director General of Electricity Supply.

Beaches

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many beaches qualifying for a European blue flag there were in Wales in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [13864]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 24 January 1996, Official Report, columns 301–2.

Cash Limits

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he is proposing to make to the cash limits for his Department and the office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in Wales for the current year. [14256]

Mr. Hague: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit on class XIV, vote 2 will be reduced by £9,533,000 from £704,178,000 to £694,645,000; the cash limit on class XIV, vote 3 will be increased by £15,000,000 from £524,870,000 to £539,870,000; the cash limit on class XIV, vote 4 will be increased by £139,000 from £1,910,125,000 to £1,910,264,000 and the cash limit on class XIV, vote 6 will be reduced by £625,000 from £9,789,000 to £9,164,000.

The Department's running cost limit will be increased by £70,000 from £75,178,000 to £75,248,000 to cover the costs associated with the sale of the Housing for Wales Loan Book.

The cash limit reduction on vote 2 results from a technical transfer of resources from the cash limited budget of the Further Education Funding Council into the demand-led Further Education Funding Council budget, to cover the costs associated with an increase in student numbers. In addition, there has been a virement of £290,000 from the central government grants to local authorities, in respect of the provision of vocational qualifications at West Cardiff Collegium.

The cash limit increase on vote 3 allows for additional spending on the central government roads programme. This additional expenditure is being covered mainly from underspends in previous years on the provision for the European regional development fund.

The cash limit increase on vote 4 results from transfers of £129,000 from class XVIII, vote 4 in respect of underspends by the Health Commissioner's officer and £10,000 from class VII, vote 1 in respect of the Department's share of seized drugs assets. A further increase of £5,000,000 as a result of end-year flexibility take-up for the all-Wales capital programme, has been offset by a transfer of £5,000,000 from the cash limited general practitioner fundholders' drugs provision to the non-cash limited pharmaceutical provision.

The cash limit decrease on vote 6 results from lower than expected expenditure on inspections of nursery places.

None of the above changes will add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Bodies (External Audit)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will outline the progress that has been made on the commitment, contained in the Nolan Committee's first report, "Standards in Public Life", to review the external audit arrangements of certain public bodies. [14257]

Sir John Wheeler: Following consultation with the Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland, it is proposed that the local government and health audit functions should be attached to the Northern Ireland Audit Office. The change will put the external audit arrangements for these sectors on an independent basis similar to practice in the rest of the United Kingdom.

Cash Limits

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the cash and running costs limits for the Northern Ireland Office/Northern Ireland departmental services, the Independent Living Fund, certain national agricultural schemes and discretionary rent allowance payments for 1996–97. [14258]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, it is proposed that the cash limit for class XV, vote 1—the Northern Ireland Office—will be increased by £46,216,000 from £862,858,000 to £909,074,000. This reflects the take-up of end-year flexibility on capital and departmental running costs, additional expenditure on compensation and police costs, the additional expenditure required to meet the cost of elections held in Northern Ireland on 30 May 1996 for the purpose of providing delegates to the forum for the promotion of dialogue and understanding within Northern Ireland, the expenditure to cover the cost of setting up and servicing the forum, the associated political talks and related purposes as well as allowances and expenses of delegates attending the forum and the political talks, and other minor technical changes.

The cash limit which covers most Northern Ireland departmental services will be increased by £35,209,000 from £4,151,983,000 to £4,187,192,000. This increase reflects the take-up of end year flexibility on capital, departmental running costs and health, the transfer of £47,198,000 to the Northern Ireland Office cash limit on class XV, vote 1 and other technical changes.

The cash limit for the independent living fund—Northern Ireland Department of Health and Social Services, vote 6—has been reduced by £337,000 reflecting lower than expected demands on this fund.

The cash limit covering national expenditure capital grant schemes and certain assistance for production, marketing and processing and the fishing industry will increase by £646,000 from £19,957,000 to £20,603,000 as a result of the take up of entitlement to end-year flexibility on capital.

The cash limit for discretionary rent allowance—Northern Ireland Department of Health and Social Services vote 6—has been reduced by £71,000 reflecting lower than expected demands on this fund.

The combined gross running cost limit for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments will be increased by £33,902,000 from £787,695,000 to £821,597,000. This reflects the take-up in 1996–97 of £32,000,000 of the end-year flexibility entitlement announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 330–31, a net transfer of £1,885,000 from the Department of Social Security in respect of agency services and minor transfer totalling 17,000. Of the revised gross running cost provision, £174,354,000 if for the Northern Ireland Office and £647,243,000 is for Northern Ireland Departments.

The increase will be offset by transfers or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements have been made in Northern Ireland for the payment in 1996–97 of the additional hill livestock compensatory allowance allocation for the 1997 scheme agreed in the 1996 public expenditure survey. [14259]

Mr. Ancram: Additional HLCA expenditure in 1996–97 totalling £11.2 million will be met by a repayable advance from the Northern Ireland contingencies fund. Parliamentary approval of this expenditure will be sought in the 1997–98 main estimates when the full additional funding for HLCAs of £12.4 million will be included.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Funds (Applications)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful applications have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the last four years to obtain EU subsidies for study and research centres; and what funds have already been allocated to the United Kingdom for these purposes. [12340]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The EU framework programme provides funding for collaborative research projects. UK researchers participate vigorously in the EU's framework programmes. Commission statistics show that 2,337 UK research teams participated in projects funded under the third framework (1990–1994); more than in any other member state. Full information on research projects funded in individual member states is held only by the European Commission, and is not distributed to member states. Accordingly, information on the numbers of successful and unsuccessful applications from the UK, as well as the precise funds allocated, is not available.

Cash Limits

Sir Mark Lennox-Boyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes will be made to cash and running cost limits within his responsibility for 1996–97. [14201]

Mr. Lang: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for class IV, vote 1—programmes and administration—will be decreased by £22,105,000 from £1,315,585,000 to £1,293,480,000. This decrease results from the following reductions in expenditure.

(i) £11,992,000 on regional selective assistance;

(ii) £5,300,000 on business enterprise services;

(iii) £3,000,000 on international trade;

(iv) £1,583,000 on the small firm loan guarantee scheme; and

(v) £230,000 on innovation and technology support.

Within this total, the gross running costs limit for the Department of Trade and Industry is being increased by £7,406,000 from £381,819,000 to £389,225,000. This change comprises:

(i) £8,212,000 resulting from the transfer of all industrial tribunal provision to running costs;

(ii) £2,436,000 increase in grant in aid to the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service provision to cover relocation and refurbishment costs;

(iii) £16,000 increase resulting form the movement of further central services to a net control regime;

offset by

(iv) –£3,258,000 following the transfer of existing provision to assist in the funding of the disaster recovery costs associated with the Radiocommunications Agency's headquarters facility.

The cash limit for class IV, vote 2 will be increased by £6,735,000 from £1,312,563,000 to £1,319,298,000. This increase results from:

(i) £4,605,000 relating to the take-up of capital end year flexibility under the end-year flexibility scheme announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326–31;

(ii) £1,800,000 to enable the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council to meet the costs of certain redundancies at Horticulture Research International;

(iii) £230,000 in respect of redundancy costs at the British Geological Survey; and

(iv) £100,000 to meet the costs of the UK's subscription to the International Oceanographic Commission.

The last three increases are offset by similar reductions in class III, vote 2, class IV, vote 1 and class II, vote 5 respectively and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The cash limit for class IV, vote II—Office of Telecommunications—will be increased by £150,000 from £10,212,000 to £10,362,000 and the running cost limit will be increased by £150,000 from £9,736,000 to £9,886,000. The increase is required to meet professional advisory costs resulting from the proposed merger of British Telecom and MCI Communications. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The cash limit for class IV, vote 12—Office of Gas Supply—will be increased by £500,000 from £9,743,000 to £10,243,000 and the running costs limit will be increased by £500,000 from £10,452,000 to £10,952,000. The requirement for an increase results from an increase in running costs associated with the referral to the Monopolies and Mergers commission on price controls. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Research Councils

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the success rates of (a) applications for funding and (b) alpha-graded applications for funding to each research council in each year since 1979. [12053]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 21 January 1997]: There has been some increase in the number of grant applications, fuelled by the increase in numbers of researchers in the system, both as a result of the change of status of the "new" universities and increasing numbers of contract researchers drawn into the "old" universities by the growth in research funding in the university system.

This information is not available for some of the earlier years. The success rates by number of grant applications for later years are as follows:

[1] Figures for AFRC, BBSRC, NERC and PPARC are for financial years, rather than calendar years.
[2] In 1994 the BBSRC took over the former responsibilities of the Agriculture and Food Research Council. AFRC figures from 1986–87 to 1993–94 cannot be directly compared with BBSRC figures from 1994–95 as BBSRC responsibilities, principally for biological sciences, run wider than did AFRC's.
[3] From 1 January 1995 BBSRC replaced the former alpha/beta system with a numerical grading system. The last two percentages given are BBSRC's best estimate of figures on a basis comparable with the previous system.
[4] The responsibilities of the Science and Engineering Research Council transferred to other research councils—principally EPSRC and PPARC—in 1994.
[5] EPSRC does not grade proposals on the basis of alpha, beta etc.
[6] ESRC's research grants scheme only started in 1987. Alpha grades were not used until 1988.
[7] NERC figures are for non-thematic grants, equivalent to responsive grants for other councils.
[8] The figures for 1995–96 are not comparable with previous years as the staff element for experimental grant applications made under the particle physics programme was not considered in that year. PPARC supports the particle physics community through four-year rolling grants which are reviewed every two years. In 1995–96 PPARC decided to defer the review by one year because of the uncertainty over the likely future level of the UK subscription to CERN. This meant that particle physics awards were limited to two years support for non-staff costs only. These figures reflect this position.

SPUR and SMART

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated expenditure on (a) the support for products under research scheme and (b) the small firms merit award for research and technology scheme for (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [12783]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 27 January 1997]: On 15 October 1996, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced a significant rationalisation of the current range of programmes for promoting research and development, including plans for a new scheme in England combining the current SMART, SPUR, SPUR-plus and innovation element of regional enterprise grants. A copy of the announcement, DTI press notice p/96/756, is available in the Library of the House. A further announcement with details of the new scheme, including funding levels for 1997–98 and 1998–99, will be made in due course. Different arrangements will apply in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Work is also being done to enable these schemes to reflect foresight objectives.

Exotic Animal Imports

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many non-CITES listed venomous snakes have been imported into the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; and if he will list them by species; [12625]

(2) what is the total number of non-CITES-listed venomous snakes which have been imported by (a) zoos, (b) individuals and (c) dealers in each of the last five years. [12626]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 29 January 1997]: The information requested is not available from the United Kingdom overseas trade statistics because the system under which trade is recorded does not separately identify imports of non-CITES venomous snakes from imports of other live animals, and also does not identify the destination of imports.

Exports (Iraq)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the impact of the easing of restrictions on firms negotiating directly with the Iraqi Government to supply essential civilian goods. [13311]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 30 January 1997]: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 13 January 1997, Official Report, column 139.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines his Department issues to engineering companies in respect of export orders for Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [13310]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 30 January 1997]: My Department issues a detailed guidance note on the sanctions imposed on Iraq in accordance with various resolutions of the United Nations Security Council. The guidance is aimed at all sectors of industry and sets out the scope of the controls on the freedom of companies to communicate with Iraq about the supply of goods and, in addition, makes clear that a licence is required before any such supplies may take place.

Ammonium Nitrate

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (a) labelling arrangements and (b) other measures exist as part of the anti-dumping action in relation to the importation of ammonium nitrate; and if he will make a statement. [13534]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Imports of ammonium nitrate fertiliser from Russia and Lithuania are currently subject to EU anti-dumping measures. An anti-dumping duty of ECU 102.9 per tonne applies in the case of imports from Russia, while Lithuania has undertaken to restrict her exports to the UK to 100,000 tonnes per annum. Labelling provisions for ammonium nitrate and other fertilisers are contained in the Fertilisers Regulations 1991, as amended. There are no special labelling requirements associated with the anti-dumping measures.

Armoured Vehicles (Indonesia)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, relating to armoured vehicles exports, what assessment his Department made of the conformity of the sales with international conventions relating (a) the sale of arms to the prevailing human rights in destination countries and (b) the transfer of equipment to its possible end use to suppress human rights. [10737]

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

Our policy is not to license for export any UK defence equipment which we judge likely to be used for internal repression. Such human rights considerations were taken fully into account before the decision was taken to allow the export of this equipment in accordance with international criteria.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, relating to the issue of export licences to Indonesia what account his Department took of international criteria for military exports relating to the behaviour of the buyer country with regard to international law; and what view his Department took of Indonesia's observance of international laws in respect of East Timor. [10736]

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

We do not recognise Indonesian sovereignty over East Timor. We fully support the efforts of the UN Secretary General to find a just and comprehensive settlement to the question of East Timor, and we continue to raise with the Indonesian Government our concerns about the situation in East Timor.

Along with several of our EU partners, we do not consider that Indonesia's annexation of East Timor precludes the sale of defence equipment to Indonesia. Indonesia plays a leading role in regional and international forums and is a major contributor to peacekeeping forces.

Under article 51 of the United Nations charter, every sovereign state has a legitimate right to self-defence. We continue to consider licence applications for the export of defence equipment on a case by case basis. We do not licence for export any equipment which we judge likely to be used for internal repression in Indonesia or East Timor. We remain committed to the criteria agreed by the UN, the EU and the then Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, which are intended to guide national decision-making.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, relating to exports of armoured vehicles to Indonesia, what account his Department took of the use by the Indonesian army in April 1996 of previously exported armoured vehicles to counter student demonstrations; and what assurances his Department has received from the Indonesian authorities regarding the future use of the vehicles. [10757]

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

We have investigated the reports of the April 1996 incident in South Sulawesi and have discussed it with the Indonesian authorities. The Indonesians have themselves acknowledged that the way in which this equipment was used was inappropriate, and a number of soldiers have been tried and sentenced for excessive use of force. These considerations were taken fully into account before the decision was taken to allow the export of armoured vehicles for the Indonesian military.

We have received assurances from the Indonesian authorities that British-supplied military equipment will not be used against civilians in Indonesia or East Timor.

TREASURY

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the impact on the public sector borrowing requirement (a) in the current year and (b) in subsequent years, of a letter of comfort provided to financial institutions by the Secretary of State for Health underwriting outstanding liabilities of a private finance initiative hospital project in the event of the demise of the hospital trust undertaking it. [11253]

Mr. Waldegrave: No letter of comfort has been issued in support of private finance initiative hospital projects. A letter of explanation has been provided which gives details of the Secretary of State's responsibilities in respect of trusts that run into financial difficulties. If a trust is dissolved, the NHS (Residual Liabilities) Act 1996 provides for the transfer of the trust's residual liabilities to another health body or to the Secretary of State for Health.

The public sector borrowing requirement measures the public sector's net cash transactions with the rest of the economy. As such, contingent liabilities have no effect on the PSBR.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy with regard to the level of funding of the public sector borrowing requirement. [12014]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government's annual financing objective is to sell sufficient gilts of any maturity, Treasury bills and National Savings products to finance the central Government borrowing requirement, plus maturing gilts and any net increase in the foreign exchange reserves. The Treasury's published gilts remit to the Bank of England for 1996–97 states that the bank should aim to sell gilts at a broadly even pace through the year. Within-year fluctuations in the pattern of central Government expenditure and revenue will be met by other financing means, including changes to the weekly Treasury bill tender.

Mr. Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Government's policy in respect of the use of Treasury bills to finance the public sector borrowing requirement; and what assessment he has made of the impact of this policy on inflation. [12029]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer January 1997]: As stated in the Treasury's debt management report for 1996–97, there is no intention that net Treasury bill issuance should contribute to the financing of the central Government borrowing requirement in 1996–97. However, the monthly pattern of issuance will fluctuate in the light of the needs of money market management. This policy will have minimal impact on annual monetary growth.

Pools Betting Levy and National Lottery

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax revenue has been raised by (a) the pools betting levy and (b) the national lottery in each year since 1994–95. [13206]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information requested is given in the table.

	1994–95 £ million	1995–96 £ million
Pool betting duty[1]	341.6	190.8
Lottery duty[2]	103.9	611.9

Notes:

[1] The following rates of duty were applicable to pool betting during those financial years.

[2] The first draw of the national lottery took place on 19 November 1994.

Rate Percentage	Date of introduction
37.5	17 August 1991
32.5	6 May 1995
27.5	3 December 1995

The rate was further reduced to 26.5 per cent. on 5 May 1996.

Dorneywood

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the running costs of Dorneywood in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13616]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Dorneywood is financed and administered by the Dorneywood Trust, a private trust for which I am not responsible.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many days he spent in residence at Dorneywood in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13617]

Mr. Clarke: The amount of time that I spend at Dorneywood depends on the constraints of my diary, but since I became Chancellor in 1993 I have resided there on numerous occasions.

Privatised Companies

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of ownership of each of the privatised utilities and companies the Government retain. [13905]

Mr. Jack: The Government have sold the vast majority of its residual holdings in the privatised utilities and other companies. Other than the relatively small numbers of shares required to be held to meet future bonus share entitlements of retail investors in previous privatisations, the Government retain disposable shareholdings in only two companies: BT—0.18 per cent. of share capital; and the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company—13.89 per cent. of share capital.

Privatisation Proceeds

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will calculate the revenues raised from the privatisation of each of the privatised utilities and companies expressed in 1996–97 prices. [13904]

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson) on 8 July 1996, Official Report, column 36. That answer included a cumulative total for privatisation proceeds to the end of 1995–96, in 1996–97 prices, of £83.86 billion. Estimated proceeds this financial year are £4.5 billion, taking the cumulative total, in 1996–97 prices to £88.36 billion.

Cash Limits

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the cash limit and net running costs limit for the Government Actuary's Department for 1996–97. [14199]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The net running costs limit for the Government Actuary's Department within class XVI, vote 13, will be decreased by £184,000 from £389,000 to £205,000 and the cash limit will be reduced by £201,000 from £6,396,000 to £6,195,000. The decreases arise from the imposition of penalties following the breaches of the net running costs limit and cash limit in the previous year, 1995–96. The Government Actuary's Department has reported that its systems and procedures have been reviewed to prevent a recurrence of the breach.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed in the cash limit and running cost limit for 1996–97 for Customs and Excise. [14214]

Mr. Oppenheim: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVI, vote 3, will be increased by £23,050,000 from £827,572,000 to £850,622,000 and the running cost limit for Customs and Excise by £23,057,000 from £720,093,000 to £743,150,000.

The increase in the running cost limit arises from the take up of £23,000,000 of the end-year flexibility entitlement, £30,000 running costs provision transferred from the Department of the Environment to meet the costs of the Security Facilities Executive's advisory service, £29,000 running costs provision transferred from the Home Office as the Department's share of the seized assets fund, and an additional £7,000 related to the recovery of input VAT on other business activities. The supplementary estimate also serves to provide an additional £9,000 from running costs for a contribution to the central drugs co-ordination unit, and £7,000 appropriations-in-aid provision related to the recovery of input VAT on other business activities. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the cash limit and running costs limit for the Office for National Statistics for 1996–97. [14215]

Mrs. Knight: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVI, vote 12—Office for National Statistics—will be increased by £231,000 from £112,600,000 to £112,831,000 and the running costs limit will be increased by £165,000 from £106,939,000 to £107,104,000.

This reflects an increase in running costs provision of £165,000 and in capital provision of £66,000. These sums cover work formerly carried out by the Employment Department which has been transferred to the Office for National Statistics. The increases will be offset by transfers and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the cash limit and running costs limit for 1996–97 for the Inland Revenue. [14216]

Mr. Jack: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVI, vote 4 will be increased by £40,027,000 from £1,607,569,000 to £1,647,596,000 and the running costs limit will be increased by £39,020,000 from £1,654,535,000 to £1,693,555,000.

The vote is eligible for a cash limit increase of £39,000,000 running costs and £507,000 capital in respect of end year flexibility entitlement as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326–31.

In addition there are transfers of £10,000 running costs from the Office of Public Service, class XVII, vote 1, for advice work on repayment terms by the Security Facilities Executive Agency; £10,000 running costs from Employment Services, class IX, vote 3; and £507,000 capital from the Department of Social Security, class XII, vote 3 as a contribution towards refurbishing St. Peter's house, Doncaster, previously occupied by the Benefits Agency.

All the increases other than those relating to the interdepartmental transfers will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what basis his Department calculated that introducing a higher rate of insurance premium tax would yield £235 million in its first year of operation; and if he will make a statement; [11465]

(2) what forecast yields have been calculated for 1997 to 2002 for the increased revenue of insurance premium tax in respect of insurance sold with television hire; on what basis those calculations have been made; and if he will make a statement; [11466]

(3) what forecast yields have been calculated for 1997 to 2002 for the increased revenue in respect of insurance premium tax at a rate of 17.5 per cent.; and if he will make a statement. [11467]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 22 January 1997]: The estimated tax revenue yield of £235 million in 1998–99 is the yield from charging the higher rate of insurance premium tax on travel insurance, mechanical breakdown insurance and insurance sold with TV and car hire. The estimate uses data from a number of sources including the Association of British Insurers and is consistent with the Budget costings methodology explained in annex A to chapter 6 of the 1997–98 "Financial Statement and Budget Report". It therefore incorporates assumptions about changes in behaviour in response to the increased rate of insurance premium tax; but excludes any affect of the tax change on the overall level of income and spending.

The 1997–98 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" estimated the revenue yield from the introduction of a higher rate of insurance premium tax to be £160 million, £235 million and £260 million in 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000 respectively. Approximately £20 million, £25 million and £30 million of this is attributable to the higher rate insurance premium tax on insurance sold with television hire.

Public Sector Debt

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the size of the net public sector debt as at the end of March 1997; and what were the equivalent figures at (a) end March 1991 and (b) end March 1979. [12791]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Budget forecast was that net public sector debt would stand at £350 billion at end-March 1997. Equivalent outturn figures for end-March 1991 and end-March 1979 were £153 billion and £91 billion respectively. However, such comparisons are not particularly meaningful since they take no account of the impact of inflation or the size of the economy. As a per cent. of money gross domestic product, net pubic sector debt in end March 1997 is expected to be 45½ per cent. compared with 49 per cent. in 1979.

Interest Rates

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual cumulative savings to the Exchequer which would result from lower debt interest costs if United Kingdom interest rates were (a) 0.5 per cent., (b) 0.75 per cent., (c) 1 per cent. and (d) 1.5 per cent. lower across the yield curve for (1) 1997–98, (2) 1998–99, (3) 1999–2000, (4) 2000–01 and (5) 2001–02. [12784]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Estimated reductions in central Government net debt interest payments resulting from lower interest rates are presented in the table.

£ billion

	Savings made from stated reduction in interst rates
	0.5 per cent.	0.75 per cent.	1.0 per cent.	1.5 per cent.
1997–98	0.3	0.5	0.6	0.9
1998–99	0.5	0.7	0.9	1.4
1999–00	0.6	0.9	1.2	1.7
2000–01	0.7	1.0	1.3	2.0
2001–02	0.7	1.0	1.3	2.0

These estimates show the total reduction in debt interest payments for a given year which might be expected from a reduction in interest rates of the magnitude shown. They assume the fall in interest rates is sustained throughout the forecast period.

Such estimates are dependent on the assumed path of Government borrowing. These figures are calculated using the Budget 1996 borrowing forecast.

Company Cars

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the exchequer what plans he has to review taxation relating to company car usage. [13336]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 30 January 1997]: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan), on 16 January 1997, Official Report, column 449.

Value Added Tax (Domestic Fuel)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue has been raised from VAT on the fossil fuel levy on domestic bills in each of the last three years. [13484]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The revenue from VAT on the fossil fuel levy on domestic bills in each of the last three years is estimated to be as follows:

1993–94: £0 million

1994–95: £40 million

1995–96: £50 million.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chevening

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what have been the running costs of Chevening in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13614]

Mr. Rifkind: The running costs of Chevening house are the responsibility of the Chevening estate and are not borne by Government. The management of Chevening house is under the Chevening Trust, a public trust established by Parliament with certain tax exemptions. When Chevening house is use with my permission for meetings and conferences, the costs are assessed on a commercial basis and charges levied accordingly.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many days he has spent in residence at Chevening in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13615]

Mr. Rifkind: I resided at Chevening for the following numbers of days:

1996: 18

1995: 20

1994: 20

1993: 20.

Information for 1992 is not available.

No. 1 Carlton Gardens

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what have been the running costs of No. 1 Carlton gardens for each of the last five years; what accommodation is available on those premises; and if he will make a statement. [13619]

Mr. Rifkind: No. 1 Carlton gardens, a grade 1 listed building, has been the official London residence of successive Foreign Secretaries since 1945 when it was acquired on lease from the Crown Estates for Mr. Ernest Bevin.

The accommodation comprises state rooms, used solely for official functions, on the ground and first floors and an apartment for the Foreign Secretary on the second and third floors.

Information on maintenance expenditure for 1991–92 and 1992–93 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

1991–92	[1]136,077
1992–93	[1, 2]137,150
1993–94	[2]136,729
1994–95	283,635
1995–96	342,741

Expenditure is given in cash terms.

[1] Rent and utilities only.

[2] In addition, about £3.5 million was spent on the total refurbishment of the state rooms and major supporting services. This was the first major refurbishment since the house suffered bomb damage in the second world war.

Cash Limits

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further changes he proposes to make in his Department's diplomatic wing cash limits and running costs limits for 1996–97. [14200]

Mr. Hanley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for class II, vote 4—the British Council—will be increased by £4,237,000 from £98,147,000 to £102,384,000. The increase is required to take in a transfer of £5,500,000 from the Overseas Development Administration. This increase is partly offset by a negative overseas price.

In addition, the cash limit for class II, vote 1—overseas representation—will be reduced by £4,474,000 from £671,359,000 to £666,885,000. This reduction takes account of the negative overseas price movement claim of £5,224,000 partially offset by a transfer in of £750,000 from the Overseas Development Administration as a contribution towards the Bosnia peace implementation conference. The gross running costs limit on class II, vote 1, will be reduced by £1,720,000 from £520,693,000 to £518,973,000.

The increase will be charged to the reserve, or offset by savings and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Entitlement Awareness

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will make a statement on the role of benefit offices in making (a) pensioners and (b) others entitled to benefit aware of their entitlements; [12547]

(2) what initiatives he is taking to ensure that pensioners in Wales are made aware of their benefit entitlements; and if he will make a statement. [12545]

Mr. Heald: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 30 January 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking if he will make a statement on the role of benefit offices in making pensioners and others entitled to benefit aware of their entitlements and; what initiatives he is taking to ensure that pensioners in Wales are made aware of their benefit entitlements.

The Benefits Agency (BA) is committed to giving all customers equal access to the benefit system. The BA expects to provide general advice about benefit entitlement, clear and accurate information about all claims which have been made and details of benefits in payment. Staff in BA offices have access to computer and clerical records, enabling provision of a personalised advice and information service.

Home visits can be arranged for customers who have difficulty attending their local office where the matter cannot be cleared by correspondence or over the telephone.

Pensions Direct Helpline was specifically set up to offer a comprehensive service to retirement and widow pensioners who receive payment of benefit direct into their bank and building society accounts. Pensions Direct will also give general advice and information on benefits to all pensioners and will send out claim packs for Income Support where appropriate.

The Benefit Enquiry Line provides free help and advice for sick and disabled people and their care. Specialist braille and textphone services are also offered and there are benefit specific advice services which offer specialist advice for certain customer groups, for example the Family Credit Helpline. In addition, benefit literature and leaflets covering all social security benefits are widely available in BA local offices, post offices and numerous other outlets. Information is also available in booklets and leaflets which are produced in other languages, audio and video tape and in braille.

The BA conducted a national campaign—"Pension and Benefits for Older People" from 13 January to 26 January 1997. This was aimed at information older people and their carers of the benefit help and services that may be available to them. Regional information staff promoted the campaign through appearances in the local media and at community initiatives. This campaign was actively promoted within Wales.

Additionally a media pack was issued to all national radio and TV outlets, and all regional as well as local newspapers. A copy of the specially produced leaflet giving further information is enclosed.

The Benefits Agency in Wales participates in specific events which are aimed to raise awareness of benefit entitlement. Information officers have regularly given talks to pensioner groups on benefit entitlement and have also actively liaised with pensioner organisations. In September 1996, the Agency participated in a "Pensioner Week" by providing information in a live broadcast on S4C TV.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of outstanding cases for the Child Support Agency in each year since its inception; what has been the highest number of cases outstanding; and what information he collates on the distribution of cases throughout different areas of the United Kingdom. [12862]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 30 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about cases on hand in the Child Support Agency.

It is not possible to give a complete answer to your question. A breakdown of child maintenance applications on hand in the Child Support Agency Centres (which cover specific geographical areas) is available only for the year ending 31 March 1996 and for the current year to 31 December 1996. An overall total is available for the year ending 1994–95. An estimate is given for 1993–94; this represents the highest number of such cases on hand since the Agency began. As in the previous two years, the Agency is currently on track to reduce the total number of maintenance applications on hand by the end of the year i.e. by 31 March 1997.

The information available is provided in the attached table. The figures represent those applications which have not been fully cleared, either by assessment or for other reasons, and are therefore counted as work on hand. The base data is drawn from scans of the Child Support Computer System which have been enhanced as the Agency's business has evolved. The number of cases on hand at any time must be taken in context with the increasing number of cases that the Agency has dealt with. This has risen form 858,000 at the end of 1993–94 to over 1.8 million at 31 December 1996.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances the Child Support Agency varies maintenance awards or arrears to reflect overpayments made by an absent parent when these arise due to the parent with care (a) under-declaring her or his income and (b) in some other way defrauding the benefits system; and what assessment he has made of whether existing arrangements with regard to fraudulent claims might be improved. [13021]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 30 January 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about maintenance overpaid to the Child Support Agency.

A maintenance assessment will be reviewed and any arrears adjusted where the Agency is notified, or becomes aware, that there has been a change in circumstances or that the original circumstances were not accurately represented by either party involved.

Where a reviewed assessment results in the absent parent having overpaid maintenance, this can be dealt with in one of three ways. It can be used to reduce any arrears, reduce future maintenance payments or in certain exceptional circumstances a lump sum repayment may be made to the absent parent. The appropriate action would depend on the circumstances of the case.

As part of the Closer Working Programme with the Benefits Agency, the Child Support Agency has a number of initiatives in place to help improve the security of benefit payments. In particular a Benefits Agency fraud liaison officer is stationed in each mainland Child Support Agency Centre both to improve fraud awareness and to monitor fraud referrals. Work under this programme continues to explore the interaction between the Agencies, one of the main objectives being to further tighten security on benefits payments.

I hope this is helpful.

War Pensions Agency

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were employed in the War Pensions Agency in (a) 1985, (b) 1990 and (c) 1995 and (d) in the current year; and at what cost at constant prices. [13450]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Mr. Kevin Caldwell, chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. Winston Churchill, dated 30 January, 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the numbers of people employed in the War Pensions Agency in 1985, 1990, 1995 and also in the current year.

Comparable staffing and paybill figures for this Agency for the years 1985 and 1990 are not available. The War Pensions Agency began operating in April 1994. Before that staff numbers were included in the Benefits Agency complement and before 1991 in the Department of Social Security figures.

The average number of staff employed by this Agency in 1995/1996 was 1648 and for 1996/97 it is 1346. This reduction in staff numbers is due to the decreasing intake of work and the investment in modern technology, notably the War Pensions Computer System introduced in late 1995.

The Agency paybill for 1994/1995 was £26,447,348 and for 1996/97 it is £21,967,048 (at constant 1996/97 prices).

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 566, how many of the income support for mortgage interest payments were made in error; how many of these were underpayments; and how many underpayments exceeded (a) £5,000, (b) £2,500, (c) £1,000, (d) £500 and (e) £250. [13295]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Denham, dated 30 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking pursuant to his Answer of 21st January, Official Report, column 566, how many of the Income Support for mortgage interest payments made in error, how many of these were underpayments and how many underpayments exceeded (a) £5,000, (b) £2,500, (c) £1,000, (d) £500 and (e) £250.

Of the 308,590 cases in error, 54,635 were underpayments. We do not collect centrally a breakdown of these underpayments and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will introduce amendments to the jobseeker's allowance regulations to protect the position of share fishermen; and if he will make a statement. [13428]

Mr. Roger Evans: The jobseeker's allowance regulations already contain a number of special provisions for share fishermen. They are specifically designed to ensure that share fishermen claiming contribution-based jobseeker's allowance are in a broadly similar financial position to that which they enjoyed under unemployment benefit.

We are closely monitoring the effects of the introduction of jobseeker's allowance on share fishermen. This monitoring has not identified any difficulties which would require the regulations to be amended.

Mortgage Interest Payments

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the standard interest rate upon which help with interest payments for mortgages are made to those on income support will be increased. [13833]

Mr. Roger Evans: The standard rate of interest used to calculate payments of income support mortgage interest—currently 6.89 per cent.—is based on the weighted average rate provided by the top building societies. It is calculated and published monthly by the Office for National Statistics. Any movement in the rate of ±0.25 per cent. will trigger a change in the standard interest rate. We expect recent rises in interest rates to be reflected in the weighted average rate shortly but cannot predict exactly when this will trigger an increase in the standard interest rate.

Cash Limits

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on changes in the (a) cash limits and (b) running costs limit of his Department for 1996–97. [14128]

Mr. Burt: The cash limit for class XII, vote 2—housing benefit subsidies, council tax benefit subsidies and administration, payments into the national insurance fund and the social fund and other grants—will be increased by £394,000 from £437,479,000 to £437,873,000. The cash limit of class XII, vote 3—Department of Social Security, administration—will be increased by £62,373,000 from £2,263,983,000 to £2,326,356,000.

The revision for vote 2 takes account of funding for the London organised fraud investigation team of £1,000,000, a pilot project to investigate organised housing benefit fraud, an increase in the grant in aid to Motability of £346,000 towards its administrative expenses, offset by a corresponding decrease in Department of Social Security, Administration, class XII, vote 3, and a reduction of £952,000 in challenge funding, offset by a corresponding increase in Department of Social Security, Administration, class XII, vote 3.

Vote 3 revisions take account of increased requirements arising from the re-instatement of withheld administration provision following comparable additional benefit savings of £19,000,000 running costs, an increase of £4,000,000 running costs under the end-year flexibility scheme as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 July 1996, Official Report, columns 326-31 for the security and control package, the reinstatement of a £5,000,000 running costs shortfall resulting from the untying of the repayment service with the Department for Education and Employment for the administration of the unemployment benefit service and £2,000,000 running costs for the parent plus project. Other changes result from a net increase of £31,423,000 towards the administrative cost of the jobseeker's allowance, offset by a corresponding reduction in Department for Education and Employment, Employment Service class IX, vote 3, an increase of £600,000 running costs offset by a corresponding reduction on the Lord Chancellor's and Law Officers' Departments, Lord Chancellor's Department, class VIII vote 1, a reduction of £45,000 running costs offset by a corresponding increase on Department of Health administration and miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England class XI, vote, a reduction of £8,000 running costs, offset by a corresponding increase on Department of Health and Social Services Northern Ireland, vote 3, an increase of £30,000 running costs for repayment to the Security Facilities Executive, a reduction of £40,000 running costs for fallow period compensation payments, a net increase of £606,000 running costs from a transfer of provision from Department of Social Security, housing benefit subsidies, council tax benefit subsidies and administration, payments into the national insurance fund and the social fund and other grants, class XII, vote 2, and an increase in running cost cover of £960,000 for services provided by and to the Department of Health on a repayment basis. Further running cost changes arise from a transfer of £20,486,000 to a net section of the vote, a re-allocation of £8,429,000 from capital expenditure and a shortfall of £11,008,000 is offset by a corresponding reduction in running costs.

Cash limit changes arise from a transfer of £37,000 from Department of Health, administration and miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England, class XI, vote 2, a transfer of £500,000 to Inland Revenue administration class XVI, vote 4, and a transfer of £690,000 to Department for Education and Employment, employment services, class IX, vote 3.

As a result of these changes, the running cost limit of the Department of Social Security will be increased by £40,461,000 from £3,161,911,000 to £3,202,372,000.

The increases will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

DEFENCE

Cash Limits

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on changes to the class 1 cash limits and defence operating costs limit for 1996–97. [14205]

Mr. Portillo: A spring supplementary estimate is to be presented to the House to take up additional provision of £244 million which, subject to parliamentary approval, the Government have agreed will be provided from the reserve in 1996–97 to meet the additional costs of the military operation in the former Yugoslavia, as I announced on 25 November 1996, Official Report, columns 28–29.

The additional funding to be drawn on to class 1, vote 1 will, in accordance with supply procedure, be funded through a further partial appropriation of receipts from the sale of the married quarters estate in England and Wales. Parliamentary supply procedures dictate that any increase in provision on a vote must, in the first instance, be funded by an additional appropriations in aid that are available to the vote.

This appropriation is in addition to the receipts appropriated in aid to fund the entitlement to end year flexibility on class 1, vote 1 in the winter supplementary estimates, which my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces announced to the House on 1 November 1996, Official Report, columns 269–70.

The balance of the married quarters sale receipt, some £641 million, will be surrendered to the consolidated fund as extra receipts.

The class 1 cash limits will change as follows:

£000s

Class 1 vote	Current cash limit	Change	Revised cash limit
1	10,994,897	–99	10,994,798
2	4,687,170	42,112	4,729,282
3	6,049,870	26,056	6,075,926

The reduction in the cash limit for class 1, vote 1 reflects the net effect of the transfer of responsibilities to another Government Department.

The impact of these changes on the Ministry of Defence operating costs limit is as follows:

Class 1 vote	Current cash limit	Change	Revised cash limit
1	10,989,352	–99	10,989,253
2	4,687,170	42,112	4,729,282
3	806,347	—	806,347

Royal Yacht

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many nights the royal family spent on the royal yacht in 1995–96 and when; and where the yacht was at the time. [13402]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is as follows:

Date	Location	Number of nights
1995
19–21 March	Simons Town and Capetown	2
24–25 March	Durban	1
31 May to 2 June	Falmouth, Pembroke Dock and Avonmouth	2

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how many days the royal yacht has been used for inward investment seminars since 1989. [13400]

Mr. Soames: HMY Britannia has been used around the world to promote British exports and attract inward investment to the United Kingdom on 63 days since 1989. The figure does not include the transit times to and from the UK. On some days, however, more than one event was held.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what defects have been found in the (a) hull, (b) main and auxiliary machinery, (c) superstructure and (d) major items of marine equipment of the royal yacht Britannia requiring replacement or major repairs in order to maintain its sea going condition; [13586]

(2) what personnel and maintenance costs are required by the royal yacht Britannia which would not be incurred by its planned replacement. [13587]

Mr. Soames: Britannia is now a very elderly ship, built with 1940s technology, including steam-powered engines. She takes a great deal of manpower to maintain, with a ship's complement larger than that of the latest generation of Royal Navy frigates, and would have needed a refit this year costing £17 million in order to remain seaworthy for a further five years. Necessary work, much of it age related, would have included reappraisal and repair of around 80 frame connections between the frame, deck and shell; survey and replacement where required of lined surfaces; replacement of a significant portion of the main electrical cabling; and replacement of radar and communications equipment. Her running costs would not reduce from their average of about £10 million per annum.

The new yacht will incorporate the latest technology and her design will reflect the fact that she will not be required to sail long distances with the Queen abroad. The precise size of her crew has yet to be determined, but it will be substantially smaller than that required by Britannia. We expect average annual running costs to be not much more than half of those of Britannia.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many days in each year since 1967 Her Majesty the Queen has been on board Her Majesty's yacht Britannia. [13699]

Mr. Soames: Since 1967, Her Majesty the Queen has spent the following number of days on board HMY Britannia:

Year	Days
1967	12
1968	21
1969	27
1970	62

[1] Major refit year.

These figures do not reflect the often considerable transit times to and from the UK. Britannia is, of course, also used by other members of the royal family, and used to promote British exports and attract inward investment to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on (a) refitting, (b) refurbishing and (c) maintaining the royal yacht since 1967. [13694]

Mr. Soames: The information is not available in the breakdown requested. However, total expenditure on repair and refit is:

[2] Estimate.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements he proposes to make in respect of provision of transport by sea for Her Majesty the Queen after Her Majesty's yacht Britannia is decommissioned and before the proposed replacement yacht is brought into service. [13700]

Mr. Soames: The royal yacht is a national asset, which projects the image of Britain, provides a platform for state and official occasions, assists in promoting British economic interests and provides a suitable royal residence overseas. It is not a primary means of royal transport. Should Her Majesty have a requirement for sea travel before the new yacht enters service, this will be addressed at the appropriate time.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many days HMY Britannia was at sea in 1996; what functions were carried out; what was the total cost to his Department of the royal yacht in 1995–96; and what estimate he has made of the costs up to the date of decommissioning. [12391]

Mr. Soames [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1997, Official Report, column 688–89]: I regret that the figure given for the running costs of HMY Britannia in the year 1995–96 was incorrect. The correct figure is £8,423,000.

Royal Flight

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates in 1996 when aircraft of the Queen's flight were used by members of the royal family for private journeys indicating in each case the member of the royal family concerned, the starting point and destination and the amount re-imbursed to public funds in 1996. [13891]

Mr. Soames: The information is as follows:

Date of journey	Passenger	Route	Cost reimbursed £
1 January 1996	Prince of Wales	Mildenhall to Zurich	1,232
16 March 1996	Duke of Edinburgh	Nassau to Rock Sound (Caribbean)	890
3 May 1996	Duke of Edinburgh	Hereford to Stanmer Park	1,793.33
1 September 1996	HM the Queen	Aberdeen to Teesside	1,186.67
3 September 1996	HM the Queen	Teesside to Aberdeen	1,483.33
8 December 1996	HM the Queen	Blackpool to Northolt	1,216.67
13 December 1996	Duke of Edinburgh	Aberdeen to Lydd[1]	1,064.38
31 December 1996	Prince of Wales	Stansted to Zurich	Bill not yet submitted

[1] Only the London to Lydd distance represented private use.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which persons other than members of the royal family are entitled to make official use of the royal flight. [13671]

Mr. Soames: No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron is established to fulfil communications, VIP and royal flying tasks. In addition to the royal family, squadron aircraft are used by Government Ministers, senior officers and officials of the MOD in fulfilment of their official duties, as well as meeting operational, exercise and flying training requirements. Visiting foreign dignitaries may also be flown, when appropriate. Such additional use contributes to overall cost-effectiveness.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights have been made in each of the last five years by members of the royal family for (a) official use and (b) personal use. [13673]

Mr. Soames: The information is available in the format requested only for financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97 and is set out in the table. Prior to April 1995 only total figures are available.

Year	Official	Private	Total
1991–92	—	—	1,088
1992–93	—	—	1,066
1993–94	—	—	966
1994–95	—	—	870
1995–96	871	9	880
1996–97[1]	589	7	596

[1] To 31 December 1996.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the rules on the use of the royal flight aircraft for the personal use of members of the royal family. [13674]

Mr. Soames: No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron may be used for private purposes only by HM the Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh, HM Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother and HRH the Prince of Wales: such use is at the personal discretion of HM the Queen. In accordance with the wishes of Her Majesty the Queen, since 1 April 1995 the costs of private flights in aircraft of No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron by members of the royal family have been reimbursed to the MOD.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those members of the royal family entitled to use the royal flight. [13675]

Mr. Soames: No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron may be used by any member of the royal family on official business, subject to HM the Queen's permission. In addition to HM the Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh, HM Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother and HRH the Prince of Wales may use the Squadron for private travel at their own expense, subject to HM the Queen's permission.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service and civilian staff are employed (a) full time and (b) part time by the royal flight by numbers and rank; and at what annual cost to public funds. [13676]

Mr. Soames: No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron consists of the personnel set out in the table. Costs of these personnel amount to some £3.7 million per year. The squadron is supported by service, civilian and contractor personnel at RAF Northolt.

Wing commander: 1
Squadron leader: 4
Lieutenant commander (Royal Navy): 3
Flight lieutenant: 38
Master aircrew: 1
Flight sergeant: 1
Chief technician: 2
Sergeant: 12
Corporal: 17
Senior aircraftsman: 18
Typist: 1
Retired officer 3: 1.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to public funds of journeys made by royal passengers using the royal flight in each of the past three years if they had been undertaken by commercial services. [13677]

Mr. Soames: It would not be possible to determine a relevant estimate of this nature without disproportionate effort. The majority of royal tasks undertaken by No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron could not readily be provided by commercial services and would have required special charter arrangements.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the aggregated cost per passenger mile of a royal flight aircraft. [13678]

Mr. Soames: An average cost per passenger mile flown could not be provided without disproportionate effort.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft make up the royal flight, listed by aircraft type, seating capacity and date of introduction to the flight. [13680]

Mr. Soames: The information is as follows:

Aircraft number and type	Seating	Remarks
3 x BAe 146	18	bought between 1986 and 1991
8 x BAe 125[1]	7	bought between 1983 and 1984
2 x Wessex	5–7	1969
2 x leased Twin Squirrels	5	1996

[1] Seven plus one in-use reserve.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of the royal flight broken down by (a) aircraft depreciation, (b) running and maintenance costs, (c) airport charges and (d) personnel costs. [13681]

Mr. Soames: The information is not immediately available in the form requested. I will write to the hon. Member.

Duke of York (Helicopter Flight)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people were on board the naval helicopter on the training sortie on 13 November 1996 involving the Duke of York; and what were their operational roles. [13695]

Mr. Soames: There were three people on board the naval helicopter on the training sortie on 13 November 1996 including HRH the Duke of York. The operational roles of the other two were pilot and observer.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received in respect of the cases of Scots Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. [13907]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 29 January1997, Official Report, columns 209–10.

Castlemartin Camp

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number and location of properties that have received compensation from his Department for damage allegedly caused by firing operations at Castlemartin camp, Pembrokeshire, in each of the last 15 years. [13800]

Mr. Soames: The information required pre-1987 is not readily available and I will write to the hon. Member. From 1987, my Department paid compensation to property owners in the Castlemartin area as follows:

Year	Number	Location
1987	1	Castlemartin
1988	2	Warren and Rhoscouther
1989	0	—
1990	0	—
1991	1	Maidenvells
1992	1	Rhoscouther
1993	0	—
1994	3	Hundletom, Castlemartin and Stackpole
1995	1	Stackpole
1996	0	—

Hawk Aircraft

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Hawk aircraft the RAF owns; and how many have been procured since 1992. [13275]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The RAF currently has 125 Hawk aircraft. Other Hawks are operated by the Royal Navy and Procurement Executive, giving a combined fleet of 145. No Hawks have been procured since 1992.

Mull of Kintyre (Air Crash)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will establish a judicial inquiry into the crash of Flight Zulu Delta 576 on the Mull of Kintyre. [13799]

Mr. Soames: An extremely thorough investigation into this tragic accident has already been carried out by RAF experts and civilian specialists from the air accidents investigation branch, with assistance from the manufacturers of the aircraft and its systems. All possible causes were exhaustively examined, including that of some malfunction in the aircraft's systems. The investigation concluded that the accident was caused by the two pilots, who wrongly continued to fly their aircraft towards the high ground of the Mull of Kintyre below a safe altitude in unsuitable weather. No new evidence has emerged subsequently which would cause us to doubt the accuracy of this conclusion. My right hon. Friend does not believe that there would be any purpose in setting up a judicial inquiry.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many in-patient, day care episodes involved a wait of longer than one year in each NHS hospital trust and health board in 1996; and what proportion of the total number of discharges these episodes represent. [11951]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table. From April this year, the Government guarantee that no patient will wait longer than 12 months for in-patient and day case treatment.

Discharges after admission from the waiting list and numbers and percentage who waited over one year in the year ending 31 December 1996

Business Rates

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the revenue raised from business rates in 1996–97 for (a) Scotland and (b) Scottish local authorities. [13667]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The most recently available estimates of the revenue to be raised from business rates in 1996–97 are the mid-year estimates that councils submitted in November 1996. The total estimated non-domestic rate income for Scotland in 1996–97 is £1.34 billion. The relevant figure for each local authority is set out in the table.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the proportion of business rates in Scotland raised from (a) local government, (b) central Government, (c) public corporations, (d) private sector and (e) other. [13668]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Information is not available in the form requested. The table shows the latest available information on the rateable values of non-domestic subjects analysed by type of subject. This analysis does not separately identify central Government, local government, public corporations and private sector subjects. Shares of rateable value do not give precise estimate of shares paid, as reliefs and exemptions may differ from different categories of subject.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the proportion of business rates raised by each industrial sector, broken down by the standard industrial classification 1992 categories. [13669]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Information on rates paid by the manufacturing sector is available from the Scottish production database, and is shown in table 1 for 1994, the latest year for which information is available. The best available information for other economic sectors comes from work carried out in the compilation of 1993 Scottish input-output tables. The calculations are based on the level of rates paid by industries across the UK as a whole. Table 2 provides a percentage split between seven broad economic sectors in 1993.

EU Finances

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the criteria for calculating the United Kingdom's contribution to European Union finances; and if he will estimate the Scottish contribution to the European Union based on these criteria. [13798]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The arrangements for financing the EC budget are set out in the Community's "Own Resources Division" Council decision 94/729/EC, Euratom, adopted by the Community in 1994. A copy of the ORD is held by the Library. The most significant effect of the ORD is to increase the Community's own resources ceiling from 1.2 per cent of Community GNP in 1994 to 1.27 per cent. in 1999. Because the data used to determine own resources contributions are collated for the UK as a whole, it would only be possible to estimate a disaggregated contribution for Scotland at disproportionate cost.

Algrade Trust

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on the progress of the investigation by the Scottish charities office into allegations about the Algrade trust raised in an Adjournment debate by the hon. Member for East Lothian on 16 January 1996. [13705]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The investigation under the supervision of charities legislation uncovered evidence of maladministration, but not dishonesty, on the part of the former trustees. This took the form of inefficiencies in management brought about by their advancing years and a reluctance to adapt to changing ideas for and approaches to the care of those with learning difficulties. The former trustees resigned following the intervention of the charities office and were replaced by trustees experienced in management and in the care of those with learning difficulties.

Lyme Disease

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the incidence of Lyme disease in the highlands of Scotland and in each of the other health board areas in each of the last three years; and what steps are being taken to prevent its spread. [13911]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Lyme disease has been a notifiable disease in Scotland since January 1990. The number of statutory notifications, by health board area, for 1994, 1995 and 1996 is as follows:

Notifications of Lyme Disease by Health Board Area[4] 1994 to 1996[1]

Year	Argyll and Clyde	Ayrshire and Arran	Fife	Grampian	Greater Glasgow	Highland	Lothian	Tayside
1994[2]	2	—	1	—	1	2	2	1
1995[2]	—	1	—	1	1	2	—	—
1996[3]	—	—	—	—	2	1	—	—

[2] Confirmed notifications
[3] Provisional notifications subject to amendment where a revised diagnosis is subsequently received
[4] There were no statutory notifications from 7 Health Boards.

Lyme disease is transmitted from animals to man by the bite of the adult female tick. It is not a common condition in Scotland, but the notification requirements introduced in 1990 enable monitoring of its incidence to be maintained.

The Forestry Commission and Scottish Natural Heritage have issued guidance to their field staff on precautions that should be taken to avoid tick bites.

ENVIRONMENT

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to impose a ban on the import and use of asbestos products in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [13561]

Mr. Clappison: The United Kingdom takes the view that prohibitions on the marketing and use of asbestos should be based on agreements within the European Union. The Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1992 and the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1993 implement directive 91/659/EEC and prohibit the importation and use of many forms of asbestos. Efforts will continue within the United Kingdom to find suitable alternatives to the remaining uses of asbestos, and to encourage the use of substitute products, but a total ban will not be instituted without EU agreement.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what current research his Department has commissioned on the safe removal of asbestos from buildings in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [13560]

Sir Paul Beresford: None, but the Health and Safety Executive has commissioned such research in the past. HSE keeps under review the available techniques for asbestos removal and issues guidance as appropriate.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the most recent review was undertaken of the asbestos licensing scheme in the United Kingdom; how many companies have been grated such licences; what are the criteria for granting such a licence; and if he will make a statement. [13562]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Commission last reviewed the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983 in 1988.

The Health and Safety Executive does not distinguish in its records between licences granted to companies and those granted to individuals or partnerships. On 28 January 1997, a total of 730 licences were in force.

Applicants for licences are required to demonstrate during a formal interview a good theoretical and practical knowledge of the requirements of the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987, the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983, the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and the approved code of practice for work with asbestos insulation, asbestos coating and asbestos insulating board published by the Health and Safety Commission.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the policy of his Department on the labelling of asbestos installed in buildings; and if he will make a statement. [13559]

Mr. Clappison: The Asbestos Products (Safety) Regulations 1985, as amended, require that any products containing asbestos are labelled in accordance with the schedule to the regulations. The label serves as a warning that asbestos is present and gives details of precautions to be taken in handling the product.

The Department of the Environment's guidance on asbestos, "Asbestos Materials in Buildings", recommends that the presence of an asbestos material should be noted on plans or other records, and that building owners should make known the existence of asbestos to workers or others who may be affected.

Reserved Capital Receipts

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the gross value of reserved capital receipts held by local authorities; how much of the total relates to housing benefit receipts; and to what extent receipts are supported by cash. [13397]

Sir Paul Beresford: Figures for the value of reserved capital receipts held by local authorities, and the amount relating to housing receipts, are not available. These form part of the provision for credit liabilities, which is reported the Department, but which also includes amounts set aside from revenue.

The provision for credit liabilities may be held as cash or investments, or may be used temporarily to finance expenditure as a substituted for new borrowing. Information on the extent to which the provision for credit liabilities is supported by cash is not available.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13460]

Sir Paul Beresford: Total expenditure by my Department on paid publicity initiatives in each of the periods requested is in the table. Paid publicity campaigns usually involve a variety of multimedia elements and disaggregating expenditure into the categories requested is not possible except at disproportionate cost. The figures exclude expenditure by Departmental agencies and on central recruitment advertising.

	£000
Budgeted expenditure for January to March 1997	4,400
Actual expenditure for January to March 1992	1,597
1993	9,999
1994	3,410
1995	4,107
1996	2,950

Local Authority Assets

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department collates on the gross capital value of assets shown on the balance sheets of local authorities in England and Wales. [13396]

Sir Paul Beresford: The total value of fixed assets, at 31 March 1996, for local authorities in England, was about £130 billion. A list of figures for each local authority has been placed in the Library of the House.

Information relating to local authorities in Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Lord Lieutenants

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if Hertfordshire and Rutland will be (a) counties for the purposes of the Local Government Act 1972 and (b) eligible for Lord Lieutenants under the terms of the Lieutenances Bill [Lords]. [14061]

Sir Paul Beresford: Rutland and Hertfordshire will both be counties for the purposes of the Local Government Act 1972, following local government reorganisation in April 1997 and April 1998 respectively. They will have their own lieutenancies.

Sellafield

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will reopen the inquiry into plans for an underground laboratory at Sellafield to examine the need for additional data in respect of the underground rock. [14139]

Sir Paul Beresford: We are considering the matter.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Risley Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to publish the report by HM chief inspector of prisons into the female wing of HMP Risley. [13494]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for the publication of the report into the female wing at Her Majesty's prison, Risley lies with the chief inspector of prisons. I understand that the chief inspector plans to publish this report on 21 February.

Geoffrey Thomas

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the investigation into the circumstances surrounding the physical restraint of Geoffrey Thomas in a hospice in Cardiff will be completed. [13532]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Phil Wheatley to Mr. Ron Davies, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your Question about the completion of his investigation into the circumstances surrounding the physical restraint of Geoffrey Thomas in a Cardiff hospice.

The inquiry has been completed and the Director General has received the final report. The report raises a number of issues which require careful but urgent consideration. An announcement will be made in due course.

Whitemoor Prison (Escape)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he had read a transcript of the trial of the men accused of the 1994 escape from HMP Whitemoor before his announcement that he was considering legislation that would allow the prosecution to appeal against judges' rulings stopping trials. [13419]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 30 January 1997]: No transcript was available at the time of my announcement on Friday 24 January, but I had been fully briefed on the outcome of the proceedings and the reason given for his decision by the trial judge.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will (a) alter the conditions under which those accused in connection with the Whitemoor prison escape are held and (b) hold an independent inquiry into how far the conditions under which the accused are held are responsible for the health of the accused. [13417]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from S. G. Norris to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about conditions under which those accused in connection with the Whitemoor prison escape are held.

The prisoners who escaped from Whitemoor prison in September 1994 have all been categorised as Exceptional Risk Category A prisoners and their security category and escape risk classification are subject to annual reviews. Exceptional Risk Category A prisoners must be held in accommodation with an appropriate level of physical security. The units used are known as Special Secure Units (SSUs).

In June 1996, Sir Donald Acheson of the Department of Public Health and Safety at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, was asked by the Prison Service to examine what effect, if any, the current SSU regime may have on prisoners' health. As a result of his report, a system of reviewing the health of individual prisoners every three months was introduced. There are no plans to hold a further inquiry into this particular issue.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will request a report from the Director General of the Prison Service on the evidence of (a) Mr. Brodie Clarke and (b) Mr. Richard Vart at the trial of the men accused of the 1994 escape from Whitemoor prison; and if he will make a statement; [13418]

(2) if he will order a fresh inquiry into the 9 September 1994 escape from HMP Whitemoor in the light of claims by senior counsel that prison officers assisted in organising the escape. [13412]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 30 January 1997]: The circumstances surrounding the escape from Her Majesty's prison, Whitemoor on 9 September 1994 were thoroughly investigated by Sir John Woodcock. While his inquiry found evidence of many loopholes in the adopted practices and procedures, it found no evidence that prison officers assisted in organising the escape. The report of the inquiry was published on 19 December 1994 and is available in the Library. Cambridgeshire constabulary has also carried out a thorough and detailed investigation of the escape. No charges have been brought against any member of Prison Service staff as a result of that investigation. If any person has any additional information concerning the escape, this should be made available to the police as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to locate the missing Prison Service category A books logging the movements of the six men accused of the 1994 escape from HMP Whitemoor; and if he will make a statement. [13420]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Phil Wheatley to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about missing Prison Service Category A books logging the movements of the six men accused of the 1994 escape from HMP Whitemoor.

The six category A Exceptional Risk prisoners who escaped from Whitemoor Prison in 1994 did not have category A books during their period at Whitemoor in the Special Secure Unit.

Secure Units

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what are the criteria under which prisoners in England and Wales are selected for detention on special secure units; [13415]

(2) what guidance he has issued on the maximum time prisoners in England and Wales may be held in special secure units; [13414]

(3) what explanation is supplied to prisoners in England and Wales for their detention in special secure units. [13416]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from S. G. Norris to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions asking what are the criteria for allocating prisoners to special secure units, what guidance is issued in respect of the maximum time prisoners may be held in such units and what explanation is supplied to prisoners in England and Wales for their detention in special secure units.

Special secure units hold prisoners who have been classified Category A with an exceptional escape risk classification. Prisoners are categorised as exceptional risk because they have a history and background which suggests that they have the motivation and the resources to make a concerted escape attempt and they are usually criminals who pose a particularly grave danger to the public.

There are no time limits relating to the period of detention in special secure units. Once a prisoner is no longer classified as exceptional risk he will be moved out of the unit.

Remand prisoners who Prison Service Headquarters have decided meet the criteria for such a classification are provisionally categorised pending conviction and sentence. At this stage, reasons for the decision are not automatically provided but it is the practice of the Prison Service to do so if requested.

Following conviction and sentence, all such prisoners have their cases reviewed by the Category A Committee in accordance with procedures introduced following the judgement in the case of Regina v. the Secretary of State for the Home Department ex-parte Duggan. Under these arrangements, prisoners are provided with the gist of those matters of fact and opinion relevant to the determination of their security category and given the opportunity to make representations. These arrangements also require that a prisoner be given the reasons for any decision which results in him remaining a Category A prisoner and, if appropriate, being classified as a high or exceptional escape risk.

The security category and escape risk classification are thereafter reviewed annually in accordance with the same procedures.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers who absconded in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [14016]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not available.

Prisoner Danny McNamee (Inquiries)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what explanation he has requested from the Director General of the Prison Service for the injuries to prisoner Danny McNamee shown in police photographs taken on 13 September 1994; and if he will make a statement. [13422]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dr. Mike Longfield to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent question about what explanation has been requested for the injuries to Mr. McNamee shown in police photographs taken on 13 September 1994.

The allegation of assault upon Mr. McNamee was referred to the Cambridgeshire Constabulary on 14 September. I understand that, on 8 June 1995, Mr. McNamee's solicitors were advised by the police the CPS would not be proceeding with any prosecution on the grounds there was insufficient evidence in order for there to be a realistic proposal of a conviction.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, to significant environmental effects. [12701]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The work of the Home Office has no significant environmental impact.

Roisin McAliskey

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what medical facilities are currently available to Roisin McAliskey at HMP Holloway; and to which hospital she will be taken for her confinement. [13294]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the medical facilities available to Roisin McAliskey at Holloway, and the hospital to which she will be taken for her confinement.

Nursing staff are available at Holloway 24 hours a day. Ms McAliskey is seen daily by a qualified midwife and a qualified nurse. A doctor is available 13 hours a day and is 'on call' for the remainder. She has also been seen, on a number of occasions by a gynaecologist.

I am afraid that, for security reasons, I cannot say where Ms McAliskey will be taken for her confinement.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what restrictions have been placed on the receipt of printed material by Roisin McAliskey in Holloway prison; and if he will make a statement. [13252]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from S. G. Norris to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the restrictions on the receipt of printed material by Roisin McAliskey in Holloway prison.

In common with all high security prisoners, Ms McAliskey must receive all her newspapers, periodicals and magazines direct from publishers, newsagents or booksellers either at the order of relatives or friends or by payment from her private cash or prison pay. She may receive books direct from relatives or friends.

Immigration (Detention and Deportation)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people detained under Immigration Act powers in the United Kingdom were held in detention at the end of (i) October, (ii) November and (iii) December; in which establishments were they held; what were their (a) nationalities and (b) gender; and how many were deported and from which establishments. [12323]

Mr. Kirkhope: The available information on persons in detention is given in the tables. The numbers of persons who had been detained at any time and subsequently removed from the United Kingdom under the deportation process were 47 in October and 69 in November 1996. These figures are provisional and include persons departing voluntarily after deportation action had been initiated, but exclude persons removed as illegal entrants or under port refusal procedures. A corresponding figure for December 1996 is not yet available. An analysis of the deportation data, showing where the person had been detained, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how his Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans it has to extend their use in future within the Department. [12272]

Mr. Howard: As the 1994 publication, the Department of the Environment's "Sustainable Development—The United Kingdom Strategy" showed, the Home Office has no direct role in the achievement of the Government's sustainable development objectives. Nevertheless, my Department keeps itself fully informed of progress on, and alert to any opportunity to contribute to, these objectives. In particular, we pay close attention to the United Kingdom indicators for sustainable development.

UK Citizenship (Hong Kong)

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures he has established to process the applications for United Kingdom citizenship which he has received from members of the Hong Kong ethnic minority community; and if he will set out the special provisions proposed by Her Majesty's Government for this group. [13323]

Mr. Kirkhope: Some members of the ethnic minority community in Hong Kong have applied successfully for citizenship under the British nationality selection scheme. The Government also made provision in the Hong Kong (British Nationality) Order 1986 to prevent any British dependent territories citizen from becoming stateless, and have guaranteed that any solely British members of the ethnic minority community who come under pressure to leave Hong Kong after the handover will be able to come to the United Kingdom for settlement.

Data Protection

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what progress has been made in respect of data protection measures to implement European directives; what further steps are being taken by Ministers; how long it has taken to implement European directives in this field (a) on average and (b) relative to other policy areas; and how progress in this area has compared with the speed with which other directives have been implemented by the Government; [13576]

(2) what European Community directives on data protection have been made; and what is the date by which measures must be implemented by the Government. [13575]

Mr. Sackville: Directive 95/46/EC is the only European Community directive on personal data protection to have been adopted. We have carried out a consultation exercise and will bring forward proposals in time to meet the implementation date of 24 October 1998. The work needed to implement directives varies, and there is no sound basis for comparing progress.

Young Offenders

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Welsh young offenders have been placed in detention institutions for each of the last five years for which figures are available, by (a) age of offender and (b) category of offence; and if he will make a statement. [12836]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from S. G. Norris to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 3 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of Welsh young offenders placed in detention institutions in the last five years, by (a) age of offender and (b) category of offence.

The information on where prisoners originate from is not available. However, statistics relating to persons who were first committed to custody under sentence by a court in Wales, is given in the attached table.

Dangerous Dogs Act 1991

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to respond to the recommendations contained in the first report of the Home Affairs Select Committee on the operation of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991, HC 146, Session 1996–97. [13770]

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to respond to the Home Affairs Select Committee report on the operation of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 during February.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Child Care

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what proposals are being considered by the Administration Committee for a staffed creche or nursery for the use of hon. Members. [13500]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: None.

Security Passes (Contractors)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee how many Palace of Westminster security passes are (a) available and (b) currently in use for contractors; and if he will make a statement. [13063]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Photographic identity passes are made available for issue to contractors as and when the need arises; currently 2,176 passes for contractors are in use.

New Parliamentary Building

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee when construction of the new parliamentary building will commence; and if he will make a statement. [11925]

Sir Raymond Powell: I am pleased to report that good progress is being made with the design and procurement of the new building. Contracts for over 70 per cent. of the work by value have been awarded. For example, prefabrication of the roof is proceeding apace in Lancashire, of the stone columns in Derbyshire and the contractors are well advanced with the detailed design and ordering of the mechanical and electrical services.

It had been planned that work would start on site today, 3 February 1997. Unfortunately London Underground Ltd. and its contractor have not made as much progress as they planned with the construction of the new Westminster station and are not able to hand back the site. My Committee has taken evidence in public and in private from the chief executive of LUL and from the project director on a number of occasions and, while we appreciate the magnitude of their task, they have been left in no doubt of the considerable disappointment that they have not been able to return the site on the due date. In due course the House will be pursuing the remedies available under the terms of the agreement with LUL.

At this stage I cannot advise the right hon. Member when work will start on site. There have been progressive slippages in the forecast date for the first stage handover and all the indications are that the current forecast of 29 July 1997 may not be achieved. My Committee continues to press London Underground and will keep the matter under continuous scrutiny.

Until there is a date from London Underground in which we can have confidence, it is not possible to give a firm date for the completion of the building. The aim, however, is that occupation should start during the summer recess 2000.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Global Environment Facility

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's policy will be in respect of funding for the global environment facility at the meeting of the ad hoc working group of the Commission on Sustainable Development on 24 February. [13820]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Government remain strongly committed to the global environment facility and will be encouraging support for a satisfactory replenishment of it during the forthcoming negotiations.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy on the global environment facility replenishment negotiations in Paris in March. [13809]

Dr. Fox: The global environment facility replenishment negotiations will begin in Paris on 12 March with a meeting to outline the process and timetable. The UK intends to take a positive role in the negotiations.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how her Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans it has to extend their use in future within the Department. [12276]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department is primarily concerned with raising standards of educational achievement and skill and with promoting an efficient and flexible labour market. The environmental impact of our work is therefore relatively slight. None the less, we use the indicators for sustainable development to inform policy options and will continue to do so.

Hawksworth Hall School

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what factors underlay her decision that the behaviour of teachers at Hawksworth Hall school had not fallen below the standards of propriety expected of the teaching profession; and if she will make a statement; [13511]

(2) what consideration she gave to whether there was fraud or deception by teachers at Hawksworth Hall school under the terms of the teachers misconduct circular 11/95; and she will make a statement. [13512]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department gave careful consideration to all the evidence available to it about events at Hawksworth Hall school, including the report of the independent inquiry commissioned by Scope. That evidence did not warrant action by the Secretary of State against any teachers at the school on grounds of misconduct.

College Funding

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate of the likely size of the claim for the funding of the demand-led element of colleges by the Further Education Funding Council was made by her Department prior to the submission of the claim. [13565]

Mr. Paice: Expenditure on the demand-led element programme depends on the termly claims made by individual colleges to the Further Education Funding Council for England. The funding council then advisers the Department of its net funding requirement in February, April and July each year. The next claim from the funding council is therefore expected shortly. On the basis of advice from the funding council, the Department estimated that it would need to provide an additional £82 million to meet the likely size of the February claim.

GCSE Grades

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each local education authority in rank order the percentage change in the number of students gaining five or more GCSEs at grade C or above from 1995 to 1996. [13387]

Mrs. Gillan: The percentage change in the number of 15-year-old pupils in maintained schools gaining five or more GCSEs at grade C or above from 1995 to 1996 by local education authority in England is as follows:

Education Wastage Rates

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the most recent estimated United Kingdom education wastage rates for full-time students studying for first degrees. [13563]

Mr. Forth: The wastage rates for full-time and sandwich students for first degrees in the UK in 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available, is estimated to be in the range of 17 to 18 per cent.

School Performance (Southend)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the performance of schools in Southend-on-Sea on A-level, GCSE, and the test for seven-year-olds on reading and spelling relative to the national average. [13510]

Mrs. Gillan: The performance of maintained schools in Southend-on-Sea on A-level and GCSE in 1996 are as follows. School-by-school key stage 1 national curriculum assessment results for seven-year-olds are not published centrally.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children are eligible to receive a voucher for the summer term 1997; and how many voucher application forms have been sent out in respect of each of the local authorities piloting the nursery voucher scheme. [13203]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 31 January 1997]: An estimated 640,000 children are eligible for a voucher in the summer term 1997, of whom approximately 14,595 live in phase 1 local education authority areas. Of these, 5,580 and 3,961 applied for a voucher in the autumn term 1996 and the spring term 1997 respectively, and will be eligible for a voucher for the summer term 1997. The following tables provide a breakdown of these figures for each phases 1 LEA area.

Further Education

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what directions she has given to the Further Education Funding Council in respect of the increase in the number of further education colleges with operating deficits. [14064]

Mr. Paice: Colleges are independent, autonomous bodies and are responsible for managing their own financial affairs. However, under its financial memorandum with the Department, the Further Education Funding Council is required to keep the financial health of colleges under regular review.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will instruct the Further Education Funding Council to review the decision of Nelson and Colne college to make 37 full-time equivalent posts redundant. [14063]

Mr. Paice: No. It is for colleges in the further education sector such as Nelson and Colne to manage their resources, including staff, as they see fit in the light of changing needs and circumstances.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements are in place for ensuring that the Further Education Funding Council and her Department are informed of the number of students enrolled at further education colleges. [14065]

Mr. Paice: Further education colleges are required to supply information on student numbers to the Further Education Funding Council twice in each academic year. These figures are forwarded to the Department after processing, and shortly before their publication.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cost to public funds of the teachers' early retirement scheme for each of the last five years. [14062]

Mrs Gillan: This question requires calculations by the Government Actuary, which could not be carried out in the time available. I will reply as soon as possible.

Training (North Yorkshire)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 30 January, Official Report, column 338, what is the number of people aged under 25 years living in north Yorkshire, and in any sub-division of North Yorkshire for which figures are available, attending a Government-funded training scheme (a) currently and (b) at the same date in each of the previous five years. [14268]

Mr. Paice: The information requested is available for North Yorkshire training and enterprise council, and is given in the following table.

Date	Number of in-training
October 1996	4,000
October 1995	3,100
October 1994	3,000
October 1993	3,000

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Statements

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the application of the principles of Pepper v. Hart to ministerial comments (a) in the Official Report, (b) in ministerial correspondence and (c) outside the House; and if he will make a statement. [13599]

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The decision in Pepper v. Hart enables courts in certain circumstances, if legislation is ambiguous or obscure, to take account of statements made in Parliament by Ministers or other promoters of a Bill in construing that legislation. It does not have application to statements made in correspondence or otherwise outside Parliament.

Textural clarity and precision, and the avoidance of ambiguity, are of course high priorities in the drafting of legislation. None the less, administrative procedures are in place for avoiding or correcting any errors or ambiguities arising out of ministerial statements during the passage of legislation. In particular, speeches and speaking notes will generally be reviewed by departmental legal advisers for possible influence on interpretation; the Hansard record of Ministers' contributions to debates on legislation will similarly be reviewed to consider whether there is any inaccuracy; and, where it seems sensible to do so, Ministers may more frequently offer to reflect and take further advice on points of interpretation that are raised in debate.

If it does prove necessary to correct a ministerial statement, the aim will be to do this as promptly as possible at an appropriate point during the further consideration of the Bill.

Senior Business Panel

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the panel of senior business figures he appointed last year will be submitting its report; and if he will make a statement. [14230]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The panel, chaired by Sir Bryan Nicholson, has reported to me and I am today placing copies of its report in the Libraries of the House. I am very grateful to the panel members for the time and energy they have freely devoted to this task. The Government believe strongly in the value of interchange in improving individuals's skills and in fostering co-operation and understanding between the public and private sectors. It whole-heartedly endorses the panel's conclusion that interchange between these sectors serves the national interest as well as the interests of individuals and their employers.

The panel has made a wide-ranging set of recommendations designed to bring about an increase in the size of the current interchange programme and improvements in its focus. The Government accept all the panel's recommendations and Departments and agencies are now beginning work on an action plan for implementation. Any new and reinvigorated programme of interchange will, of course, also benefit a wide range of private sector organisations and once a preliminary action plan is drawn up I will be inviting key figures and organisations in the private sector to consider how best they can co-operate.

HEALTH

Intensive Care

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many intensive care beds are currently available in the Northern and Yorkshire region. [12921]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available centrally in the form requested. The average daily number of available beds in intensive care wards, other than for children or elderly patients, in national health service hospitals in the Northern and Yorkshire region in 1995–96 was 402.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13464]

Mr. Horam: Budgeted expenditure on paid publicity for the period January to March 1997 is £8.96 million, of which £1.83 million is estimated to be spent on advertising.

Actual expenditure for the periods January to March in earlier years was:

£ million

	Total paid publicity	Advertising
1995–96	8.77	1.70
1994–95	8.55	2.37

In the years before April 1994, our budgetary record systems do not allow us to break down expenditure into specific quarters, only whole years.

Health Authority Funding

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average amount allocated to health authorities in each of the past three years; what was the percentage increase each year; and if he will provide equivalent figures for the South East Essex health authority. [13508]

Mr. Horam: Before 1996–97, allocations to health authorities were made by the regional health authorities. Comparable figures before this year are therefore not available centrally. The information requested for 1996–97 and 1997–98 is shown in the table.

	1996–97	1997–98
National average allocation (£000)	208,860	218,164
National average percentage cash increase	3.86	3.93
Allocation to South Essex Health Authority (£000)	273,134	288,089
Percentage cash increase	7.06	4.76

NHS Patients (Private Hospitals)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS hospitals in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Leeds are currently paying private sector hospitals to treat NHS patients; if he will list the hospitals; and what are the costs involved. [13810]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 7 March 1996 at column 320.

Intensive Care Units

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds there are in intensive care units in Leeds infirmary, St. James' hospital, Leeds and Pinderfields hospital, Wakefield. [13817]

Mr. Horam: Information on the daily number of available beds by ward classification is collected annually from each trust. The latest published information shows that in 1995–96 the average daily number of available beds in wards classified as adult intensive care was as follows:

	Number
United Leeds Teaching Hospitals National Health Service Trust	29
St. James' University Hospital National Health Service Trust	11
Pinderfields Hospital National Health Service Trust	26

1. Figures on numbers of beds by Trust are published annually in 'Bed Availability for England' copies of which are available in the Library.
2. The figures above exclude neonatal intensive care cots and paediatric intensive care beds.

Medical Staff (West Yorkshire)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors and nurses have been employed in NHS hospitals in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Leeds since 1990; and how many vacancies for doctors and nurses in West Yorkshire and Leeds remain unfilled at present. [13815]

Mr. Malone: Individual hospital units cannot be separately identified in the Department of Health's hospital and community health services work force censuses, but staff can be sub-divided between those working in hospitals and those working in the community on the basis of their area of work. The table gives information available centrally for West Yorkshire health authority area—formerly Huddersfield, Dewsbury and Calderdale district health authorities—and Leeds health authority area—formerly Western Leeds, Eastern Leeds and Leeds district health authorities.

Notes:

[1] Learners are nurses on traditional nurse training courses and are directly employed by the NHS HCHS. Project 2000 training was introduced in 1989 and has gradually replaced traditional pre-registration nurse training. Project 2000 students are funded by bursaries. They are supernumerary, not employees, and thus excluded from the count of NHS HCHS nursing staff. Figures for Project 2000 students are not available by health authority.

n/a = Not available. It is not possible to provide figures for hospital doctors below regional level before 1995 or to provide numbers of nursing and midwifery staff in hospital areas of work after 1994.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 21 January, Official Report, column 765, if he will list the 32 private finance initiative schemes which have been finished. [14103]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg) on 29 January 1997 at columns 269–72.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists are employed in dental practices by general dental practitioners who contract with the health service in the latest year for which figures are available. [14066]

Mr. Malone: The table sets out the number of dental assistants and vocational trainees employed by general dental practitioners at 30 September 1996.

[1] Assistants are fully qualified dentists who do not have their own health authority contract number but work on that of a principal.
[2] Vocational trainees are newly qualified dental graduates who must complete a year's vocational training in a selected practice before commencing unsupervised dental practice as a principal in the general dental service.

TREASURY

Census (Languages)

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to collect information on the level and location of spoken indigenous languages in the next census; and if he will make a statement. [10551]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 23 January 1997]: A major census test will be conducted in selected areas of England and Scotland in June this year. Test questionnaires to be used in Scotland will include a question asking if the respondent can speak, read, write or understand Gaelic but this question will not be asked in England. Following consultation and research, the Government have concluded that a question on Scots could not be justified for inclusion in the next census and therefore will not be included in the June test. For the 2001 census, we expect to ask questions about Welsh in Wales and Gaelic in Scotland. There are no plans to extend questions on Scottish Gaelic, and the Welsh language outside the respective countries. The Government will publish their proposals for questions to be included in the census in a White Paper in mid-1998. The White Paper will invite comment.

EU Education Expenditure

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the percentage of GDP spent on education in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other EU countries. [13253]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. John Marshall, dated 3 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the percentage of GDP spent on education in the United Kingdom and other EU countries.

The information requested for the latest year for which data are available for all EU countries is shown in the table. The latest figure for the United Kingdom is 5 per cent for 1995. The figures are published in table DD of Education Statistics for the United Kingdom 1996, which in turn is derived from information provided by each country to OECD for its latest edition of Education at a glance. Lone Parents

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the number of lone parents who are out of work (a) in Great Britain and (b) in other European countries. [11392]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Jean Corston, dated 3 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the number of lone parents who are out of work in Great Britain and other European countries.

According to the Labour Force Survey (LFS) there was in Great Britain in summer 1996 a total of 136,000 unemployed lone parents with dependent children (15 year olds and under and 16–18 year olds in non-advanced further education). The LFS uses the International Labour Organisation (ILO) definition of unemployment. This covers people without a job who were available to start work in the two weeks following their LFS interview and who had either looked for work in the four weeks prior to interview or were waiting to start a job they had already obtained. The ILO unemployment rate for lone parents was 15.7 per cent. This rate is defined as all those ILO unemployed as a percentage of all those either ILO unemployed or in employment.

European comparisons are published in the annual Eurostat publication Labour Force Survey Results which is available in the House of Commons Library. The lower half of Table 115 gives unemployment rates for various household types including '1 adult and children'. A copy of this table is attached. The EUR15 figure is a weighted average of the national figures, weighted by the size of the relevant economically active population in each country.

The rates published in the table are not directly comparable with the rate quoted above for a variety of reasons. The Eurostat figures do not cover all lone parents with dependent children. For example they exclude lone parents whose youngest dependent child is aged 15 to 18 and those lone parents who are not the only adult in the household. These exclusions are likely to increase the unemployment rate. The Eurostat figures are also less up to date and refer to the United Kingdom rather than Great Britain as specified in your question. Estimates of the number of unemployed lone parents are not available from the Eurostat publication.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the number of lone parents who are out of work in (a) Great Britain and (b) other European countries. [11394]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 3 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the number of lone parents who are out of work in Great Britain and other European countries.

According to the Labour Force Survey (LFS) there was in Great Britain in summer 1996 a total of 136,000 unemployed lone parents with dependent children (15 year olds and under and the 16-18 year olds in non-advanced further education). The LFS uses the International Labour Organisation (ILO) definition of unemployment. This covers people without a job who were available to start work in the two weeks following their LFS interview and who had either looked for work in the four weeks prior to interview or were waiting to start a job they had already obtained. The ILO unemployment rate for lone parents was 15.7 per cent. This rate is defined as all those ILO unemployed as a percentage of all those either ILO unemployed or in employment.

European comparisons are published in the annual Eurostat publication Labour Force Survey Results which is available in the House of Commons Library. The lower half of Table 115 gives unemployment rates for various household types including '1 adult and children'. A copy of this table is attached. The EUR15 figure is a weighted average of the national figures, weighted by the size of the relevant economically active population in each country.

The rates published in the table are not directly comparable with the rate quoted above for a variety of reasons. The Eurostat figures do not cover all lone parents with dependent children. For example they exclude lone parents whose youngest dependent child is aged 15 to 18 and those lone parents who are not the only adult in the household. These exclusions are likely to increase the unemployment rate. The Eurostat figures are also less up to date and refer to the United Kingdom rather than Great Britain as specified in your question. Estimates of the number of unemployed lone parents are not available from the Eurostat publication.

Capital Stock

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the capital stock per worker in dollars in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) France, (d) Japan and (e) the European Union in (i) 1979, (ii) 1992 and (iii) the latest year available, showing the percentage change between these years. [13442]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Hain, dated 3 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the capital stock per worker.

Figures for capital stock per worker in dollars are not available, but can be derived from information on gross capital stock at current prices, employment and exchange rates. Figures of gross stock at current prices are not available for Japan or the European Union. Information on gross stock for the United Kingdom, Germany and France are available in the OECD publication Flows and Stocks of Fixed Capital. Figures for exchange rates and employment are available in Volume I, Table 8.2 and Volume II, Table 15 of the OECD publication National Accounts. Copies of these publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

The latest figures for gross capital stock at current prices for the United Kingdom are not shown in the OECD publication Flows and Stocks of Fixed Capital. These figures are given in the table.

Gross capital stock at current prices for the United Kingdom

Year	Billions of pounds sterling
1992	2,395.9
1993	2,462.9
1994	2,630.2
1995	2,889.6

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the percentage change in real gross domestic product between (a) 1979 and the latest available year and (b) 1992 and the latest available year for (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) Germany, (iii) France, (iv) Japan and (v) the European Union. [13441]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The change in real gross domestic product between 1979 and 1995, and between 1992 and 1995, can be calculated from figures available in the OECD publication "National Accounts," volume II, which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Unemployment (York)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of people aged 25 years or under living in the York parliamentary constituency who (a) were registered unemployed and (b) had been registered unemployed for six months or more in each month since March 1992. [13582]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 3 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on claimant unemployment in your constituency.

A complete count of the total number of claimant unemployed by age and duration is available quarterly, for the months of January, April, July and October. For other months, age and duration data are restricted to those claimants whose records have been computerised (about 99.5 per cent of the total). In each case the data are not seasonally adjusted, nor do they make allowances for discontinuities in the count.

All this information can be accessed from the Nomis database held by the House of Commons Library.

Company Cars

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number and percentage of United Kingdom company cars whose tax claims for business mileages fall within the bands (a) 0 to 2,499 miles, (b) 2,500 to 17,999 miles and (c) 18,000 and miles above. [13338]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Estimates for 1997–98 are given in the table. "Company cars" are cars made available for the private use of employees and directors. Other cars registered in a company name—that is, short-term hire cars and "pooled cars"—are not included.

Annual business mileage	Number of recipients (000s)	Percentage of company cars
0–2,499	150	9
2,500–17,999	1,000	59
18,000 and above	550	32
Total	1,700	100

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue effect of raising the lower business mileage break point for company car taxation from 2,500 miles per annum to 5,000 miles per annum; and if he will make a statement. [13340]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 30 January 1997]: It is estimated that, in 1997–98, raising the lower business mileage break point from 2,500 miles to 5,000 miles per annum would yield about £200 million in income tax and about £60 million in employers' national insurance contributions.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the income tax yield from the taxation of company car scale benefits in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [13335]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 30 January 1997]: It is estimated that the income tax yield from the taxation of private use of company cars will be about £1,500 million in 1996–97 and £1,550 million in 1997–98. There will be a further yield from employers' national insurance contributions of about £450 million in each year.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue which would be raised by eliminating the reductions of income tax liability on company cars triggered by higher mileage thresholds. [13339]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 30 January 1997]: It is estimated that, in 1997–98, the income tax yield from eliminating mileage discounts on company cars would be about £1,100 million. There would be a further yield of about £325 million from employers' national insurance contributions. This is the direct yield before taking into account changes in behaviour. Employers and employees, faced with substantial national insurance contributions and tax increases—tripled for essential high business mileage company cars—would move away from company cars to employee car purchase schemes and personal leasing, with allowances paid to employees at tax-free rates for their business mileage. This could considerably erode the Exchequer yield from company cars.

Domestic Rail Fares (Tax Relief)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual cost of providing income tax relief at the lower band rate of tax for all United Kingdom domestic rail passenger fares, assuming that such a change had no demand effects; and if he will make a statement. [13341]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Such a relief would be equivalent to an indirect subsidy to the rail companies, with uncertain effects on rail fares. If the relief were to be given at source, then the full-year cost, based on 1995–96 fare levels and assuming no change in demand, would be about £475 million. This includes the element attributable to non-taxpayers which would score as public expenditure.

Offshore Accounts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what benefits accrue to (a) Her Majesty's Treasury and (b) a United Kingdom citizen and resident in respect of bonuses paid into offshore accounts. [13775]

Mr. Jack: An individual, whether or not a UK citizen, who is resident and who carries out the duties of an employment in the UK, is taxable on his earnings from that employment, including bonuses, regardless of whether they are paid in the UK or offshore.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on the practice of companies paying bonuses into offshore accounts. [13774]

Mr. Jack: None.

Labour Statistics (Ealing)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the change in unemployment figures in the Ealing, North constituency between 1992 and 1997. [12012]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Ealing is sharing fully in the success of the British economy, which is enjoying a combination of low inflation, falling unemployment, low mortgage rates and rising living standards not seen for a generation. Unadjusted claimant unemployment in the Ealing, North constituency has fallen by over 30 per cent. in the past four years, from 5.311 in December 1992 to 3,634 in December 1996, the latest month for which data are available.

DEFENCE

Defence Procurement Contracts

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on north-west industry of the orders for (a) the Eurofighter, (b) Nimrod and (c) Hawk aircraft since 1992. [13269]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Work on the Eurofighter programme has an important and positive impact on industry in the north-west of England. Although detailed employed figures are not readily available specifically for the north-west, approximately 6,000 jobs in the UK are sustained by the Eurofighter development programme. We expect this to increase to some 14,000 in production. At this stage, the quadrinational Eurofighter programme is in the full development phase. We hope to be in a position, in conjunction with our partners, to move to the production investment and production phases of the programme in the very near future. Contractual negotiations are continuing.

The prime contract for Nimrod 2000 was placed with BAe in December 1996. Considerable high-quality engineering work will be undertaken at BAe Warton. A number of other British defence companies will also benefit from involvement in the programme. We expect that about 2,600 UK jobs will be sustained through the contract.

The last Hawk aircraft to be ordered for the Royal Air Force was in 1982. British Aerospace has been very successful in selling Hawk to a number of countries worldwide. These valuable overseas orders have resulted in a considerable amount of work and prosperity in the north-west, primarily at BAe Warton.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Her Majesty's Government plan to advertise the tender contracts for the proposed new royal yacht in the Official Journal of the European Communities. [13399]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The invitation to tender for the construction of the new royal yacht will be advertised in the MOD's "Contracts Bulletin" in the usual way.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the inventory of the publicly owned contents of the royal yacht. [13777]

Mr. Soames: Full details of the publicly owned items aboard Britannia are not currently available. An inventory to establish those items belonging to the royal household, the Royal Navy and the Ministry of Defence is currently under way, in preparation for Britannia's decommissioning in December this year.

Army Personnel (Northern Ireland)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many part-time Army personnel were stationed in Northern Ireland in 1992; and how many are currently. [13665]

Mr. Soames: There were 2,785 part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment on 31 December 1992. The figure for December 1996, the last month for which we have complete figures, was 2,027

Trident

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 23 January, Official Report, column 686, if he will list the (a) uncommitted and (b) unspent parts of the sum allocated to the Trident programme. [13646]

Mr. Arbuthnot: A breakdown of the remaining expenditure on the Trident procurement programme is as follows:

£ million

	Uncommitted	Unspent commitment
Submarine	136	260
Strategic weapon system	303	154
Tactical weapon system	0	62
Buildings/works	7	1
Dockyards	256	2
Warhead/miscellaneous-unallocated contingency	161	71
Totals	863	550

Eurofighter

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Eurofighters each of the participating countries proposes to order; and what is the value of each order. [13650]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The UK's commitment will be 232 aircraft to replace the Tornado F3 and Jaguar. Our partners have declared their requirement to be: Germany—180, Italy—121, Spain—87. Contractual negotiations with companies in the four partner nations for the production investment–production and support phases of the programme continue.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the export potential of the Eurofighter; and what potential markets have been identified. [13656]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The prospects for export orders for Eurofighters appear to be excellent; several countries have already expressed interest. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it would be inappropriate at this stage to identify potential customers and I am therefore withholding this information under exemption 7 of the code of practice on access to government information.

Army Recruitment

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what languages, apart from English, are used in connection with publicity material for recruitment to the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [13865]

Mr. Soames: Apart from English, recruiting publicity material is printed in Bengali, Gujerati, Hindi, Punjabi, Urdu and Welsh.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current officer recruiting deficit expressed as a percentage. [13498]

Mr. Soames: The armed forces are currently 166 officers short of the financial year 1996–97 recruiting target; this represents a deficit of 10 per cent.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department estimates that the Army will reach its full manning requirement. [13496]

Mr. Soames: The Department is currently considering additional measures to further improve recruitment and retention and restore the Army to full manning over the next few years.

Food Supply Contract

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances and in what ways the contract for supply of food for the armed forces announced on 28 January can be varied by (a) his Department and (b) the Booker Foodservice Group. [14116]

Mr. Soames: The food supply requirement for the armed forces is not static and can change sometimes at short notice, in both volume and location. The contractor will be required to respond effectively to any such changes, including supplies needed for operations and exercises. The contract could therefore be varied by the Department to take account of changes in the contracted requirement. It could also be varied by mutual agreement to reflect economies or efficiencies in operation identified by either party if considered to be in the Department's interest.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what external or consultancy advice was used to evaluate tenders received in the competition for the follow-on contract for the supply of food to the armed forces announced on 28 January. [14120]

Mr. Soames: Four commercial advisers, all senior managers from blue chip companies in the food industry, together with a consultant, were appointed to provide expert advice and independent scrutiny of the evaluation process.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the tender document for the contract to supply food for the armed forces announced on 28 January. [14115]

Mr. Soames: The tender document contains commercially sensitive information and cannot be made available.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the criteria against which bids for the contract to supply food to the armed forces announced on 28 January were judged. [14119]

Mr. Soames: Tenders were subject to thorough commercial and technical evaluation. The commercial factors assessed included price, buying policy and strategy, efficiency and improvement proposals and contract conditions, as well as company financial status. The technical factors evaluated included the proposals on management, phase-in, quality, commodities, ordering and distribution, and information technology as well as the response to meet overseas requirements and the need of exercises, operations and war. The competitors were briefed on the evaluation criteria at the outset of the competition.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what respects the contract with Booker Foodservice Group for the supply of food to the armed forces reflects the recommendations of the National Audit Office report "Ministry of Defence: Supply of Food to the Armed Forces," HC 66 of Session 1996–97. [14127]

Mr. Soames: The lessons learned from the first contract identified in the National Audit Office report have been taken fully into account.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the value of the contract for supply of food for the armed services announced on 28 January; and on what date the first and subsequent payments will be made. [14117]

Mr. Soames: The estimated value of the contract will be in excess of £400 million over five years. Payments for the cost of food supplied will be paid fortnightly in arrears against verified receipts. Legitimate costs incurred by Booker Foodservice Group before the start of operations in October will be paid against agreed and verifiable milestones. The date of the first payment has not yet been established.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those parties that submitted tenders in respect of the contract for the supply of food for the armed forces announced on 28 January, indicating on what date each tender was received; and when was the closing date for the receipt of tenders. [14121]

Mr. Soames: Tenders were received from Booker Foodservice Group Ltd. and NAAFI. Both tenders were received on the closing date of 25 July 1996.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the follow-on contract for supply of food to the armed services announced on 28 January will run for five years in place of the current three-year contract. [14118]

Mr. Soames: The current food supply contract was awarded to NAAFI without competition in 1994 because, at that time, the requirement could not be adequately defined and was expected to change significantly as a result of "Options for Change" and the defence cost studies. It was considered that NAAFI, which already provided 50 per cent. of the food, was best placed to meet the task and that three years was the minimum time required to establish a service from which a competition for a follow-on contract could be devised. The new contract will be for a five-year period, which is considered the most appropriate to secure the best value for money.

Naval Helicopters (School Visits)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, columns 198–99, how much notice was given to the head teacher of Cowarth Park school of the visit of the naval helicopter on 13 November; and what is the usual period of notice for such visits to schools. [14093]

Mr. Soames: Cowarth Park school was given four weeks notice of the intended visit on 13 November. It is our normal practice to give three to four weeks' notice in such cases.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, columns 198–99, how many naval helicopters on training sorties visited schools in each year since 1992. [14094]

Mr. Soames: This information is not recorded centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, by way of illustration, over the last 12 months, helicopters from RNAS Portland undertook some 20 school visits.

Electronic Warfare Capability

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the Army's current requirements for an electronic warfare capability. [14224]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Vixen system was selected to meet the Army's requirement for an automated electronic warfare—EW—system capable of collecting and disseminating accurate signals intelligence from a high-density, dynamic, electronic environment. A decision has been taken to terminate the contract with the prime contractor, Siemens Plessey Systems—SPS—because tests conducted during 1995 and 1996 demonstrated that Vixen has operational shortcomings. Various technical problems have delayed the project by several years and there is little prospect that these could be overcome by SPS without further significant delay and expense. MOD is considering its legal position and, if appropriate, will pursue a claim for compensation. The cost of the Vixen project has been around £50 million. A limited EW capability is already in service in Bosnia and the procurement of additional commercially available equipment is being considered while longer-term requirements are addressed. The decision to cancel Vixen was taken only after careful consideration of the operational, contractual, financial and industrial implications.

PRIME MINISTER

Defence Projects

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what changes he has made in the rules for reporting decisions to undertake major defence projects since 1991. [14011]

The Prime Minister: It remains the Government's normal practice to announce decisions to undertake major defence projects to Parliament at the earliest convenient time.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Arts (Business Sponsorship)

14. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the Government's initiatives to promote business sponsorship of the arts. [12231]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government's arts pairing scheme, established in 1984 with the intention of bringing new sponsors into the arts, continues to be a success. To date, the scheme has made awards totalling more than £37 million, matching business sponsorship of over £77 million—more than £115 million in new money. Already in 1996–97 the number of awards made is 9 per cent. higher than in the whole of the previous year: over £4.8 million in awards, matching over £10 million in business sponsorship.

National Lottery (Historic Buildings)

15. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total sum awarded by the national lottery for the restoration or refurbishment of historic buildings. [12232]

Mr. Sproat: The heritage lottery fund has announced 198 grants totalling £127.1 million for the restoration and refurbishment of historic buildings.

English Heritage

16. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the number of regional offices English Heritage has. [12233]

Mr. Sproat: English Heritage's historic properties department has six regional offices that between them manage over 400 properties throughout England. The offices are located in London, Tonbridge, Bristol, Northampton and Newcastle and at Stonehenge. Each office is led by a regional director, and the regional structure is headed by a director located in English Heritage's London headquarters.

National Lottery

17. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to increase the number of participants in the national lottery. [12234]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am delighted with the great success of the national lottery. Any plans that the operator might have to increase the number of participants would need to be approved by the Director General of the National Lottery who has a duty under the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 to protect the interests of participants.

21. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the impact of the national lottery on the British film industry. [12238]

Mrs. Bottomley: The national lottery has had a huge impact on the British film industry. Already, more than £66 million has been awarded to some 164 projects. This includes nearly £39 million for 106 film productions, 24 of which went into production last year. This is a tremendous achievement in so short a time which I know is welcomed by the film industry.

24. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the impact of the national lottery on the voluntary sector in Greater London. [12241]

Mrs. Bottomley: The introduction of the national lottery has given charities and voluntary organisations in all parts of the United Kingdom an unparalleled opportunity to secure new funding for projects and initiatives across a wide range of activities. The National Lottery Charities Board alone has made 838 awards, worth almost £73 million, to charities and voluntary organisations in Greater London, and a large proportion of the 843 awards, worth almost £230 million, made by the other national lottery distributing bodies for arts, sport, heritage and millennium projects in Greater London have gone to charities and voluntary organisations. These figures exclude grants made to London-based national organisations.

Playing Fields

18. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will take steps to halt the sale of playing fields; and if she will make a statement. [12235]

Mr. Sproat: The Government have made it clear that they do not want playing fields which may be needed now or in the future to be redeveloped. The Sports Council has been made a statutory consultee for planning applications affecting playing fields, with strong policies for retaining playing fields, and minimum area and quality standards have been retained for school playing fields where other controls on schools have been removed. We will consider further action if that proves necessary.

Churches and Synagogues

19. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the work that English Heritage has undertaken to preserve the nation's historic churches and synagogues. [12236]

Mr. Sproat: Grants from English Heritage towards the preservation of historic churches and other ecclesiastical buildings are available for grade I and grade II* listed properties, and grade II listed properties in conservation areas. Over the five years from 1991 to 1996, English Heritage has provided £47.2 million in such grants, and aims to have spent a further £1.2 million in 1996–97.

22. Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what contribution the national lottery has made towards preserving the country's historic churches. [12239]

Mr. Sproat: The national lottery provides a tremendous opportunity for the preservation of historic churches and cathedrals in this country. To date, the heritage lottery fund has made 123 grants totalling £14.3 million to preserve our ecclesiastical heritage.

The heritage lottery fund and English Heritage have also developed a single procedure whereby churches and other places of worship can apply for funding from both sources through a single route: £20 million a year could be available through this joint scheme, which will make it easier for congregations to apply for funding.

Arts Council of England

20. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how the work of the Arts Council of England has been affected by the provision of funding from the national lottery. [12237]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The national lottery has more than doubled the funds available for distribution by the Arts Council of England, enabling a level of support for the country's arts facilities that has never been seen before. It has enabled the Arts Council to work with, and support, a far wider range of arts projects covering the whole spectrum of arts activity from amateur groups to the commercial sector.

Heritage Sites

23. Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to encourage more people to visit important heritage sites. [12240]

Mr. Sproat: My Department, principally through the Historic Royal Palaces agency and English Heritage, is continually striving to develop its historic properties to make them more attractive and accessible to visitors. The Historic Royal Palaces agency has recently completed a programme of major improvements at its properties, and an additional £15 million will be spent on further works over the next two years. English Heritage is undertaking a range of initiatives at its most visited sites, such as new exhibitions, audio tours, and an increasing use of foreign language tours—all designed to encourage both domestic and overseas visitors.

Millennium Exhibition

25. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the outstanding deficiencies in the sums required to guarantee the national millennium exhibition. [12242]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Millennium Commission has agreed an indicative budget on which a grant of £200 million could be made. The commission has a target of £150 million for sponsorship and the balance will be raised from receipts and commercial income. Any project of this size carries risks. An order will be introduced to extend the funding life of the commission for one year should it prove necessary to cover contingencies and inflation.

Radio Station, Doncaster

26. Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made in respect of a radio station for Doncaster referred to in her statement of 2 July 1996, Official Report, column 873. [12243]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Responsibility for the advertising, award and regulation of independent radio licences rests with the Radio Authority, acting within the terms of the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996. The authority announced on 9 October 1996 that, subject to receiving evidence of interest from prospective applicants, it proposes to advertise a licence designed to cover most or all of the metropolitan borough of Doncaster. This licence is one of a series it plans to advertise from autumn 1997 onwards. As yet, no final decision has been taken to advertise the licence; nor has a specific time scale been announced.

Football Clubs

27. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received from football clubs outside the premier league on the levels of support available from the Football Trust. [12244]

Mr. Sproat: The Department has received a number of letters in respect of Football Trust funding from clubs outside the premier league. I am meeting the trust shortly to discuss its future funding programme.

Film Industry

28. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures her Department is taking to support the British film industry. [12245]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The British film industry is in a buoyant state, with record numbers of films going into production and record cinema attendances in 1996. The Government will continue to provide significant public funds to support the industry. Next year, my Department will provide around £23.5 million to the British Film Institute, the National Film and Television School, British Screen Finance, the European co-production fund and the British Film Commission. Substantial support will also be given to various European programmes.

In addition, the national lottery has already awarded more then £66 million. This includes nearly £39 million for 106 film productions. The Government are also taking forward a number of initiatives recommended by the Advisory Committee on Film Finance.

Sport

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on (a) the British Academy of Sport and (b) other proposed sporting centres of excellence. [12464]

Mr. Sproat: The closing date for receipt of bids to set up and run the BAS was 31 October 1996 and the Department of National Heritage and the United Kingdom Sports Council received 26 bids. The first stage of the evaluation process was completed in December and 13 of the 26 bids were placed on the first list of bids which are currently the subject of detailed technical evaluation. A decision on the successful bidder will be made in early spring.

Details of the Government's proposals for regional centres of sporting excellence will also be published in early spring.

Provincial Touring Companies

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to increase financial support for provincial touring companies. [12583]

Mr. Sproat: Ministers are keen to ensure that as many people as possible have access to the great artistic traditions of this country. In addition to the grant in aid funding, the Arts Council already invests in touring, the new lottery scheme, "Arts for Everyone", will enable support for new and additional touring activity, allowing audiences to be reached.

Cash Limits

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what changes she proposes to her Department's cash limits and running cost limits for 1996–97. [14321]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to the parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class X, vote 1 will be increased by £2,412,000 from £962,867,000 to £965,279,000 and running costs limit increased by £12,000 from £29,477,000 to £29,489,000. This is to provide additional appropriations in aid for receipts from admission fees for Windsor castle offset by an increase in the grant in aid to the royal household; to provide funds from the public buildings and monuments' capital budget for the refurbishment work by English Heritage on the Albert memorial; to provide additional appropriations in aid for the Historic Royal Palaces agency matched by increases in gross expenditure; to provide for an increase in gross running costs expenditure arising from the transfer of responsibility for voluntary services from the Home Office; to provide for a reduction in the Department's capital expenditure; to provide cover for final payments to local authority capital projects assisted under completed European regional development fund initiatives as a result of a shortfall in receipts from the EU; and to provide for the use of proceeds from the disposal by the Women's Royal Voluntary Service of properties held for the Crown to facilitate the move of its headquarters offices from Brixton to Abington. The increases will be offset by transfers, savings and charges to the reserve, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what promotional and public information campaigns his Department is (a) currently running and (b) planning to run during the next six months; and for each campaign (i) how much it will cost, (1) in total and (2) to his Department, (ii) what agencies or bodies are undertaking the work and (iii) what is its planned duration. [7413]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is as follows:

Headquarters

Publicity campaigns currently running during the 1996–97 financial year are as follows:

Pensions campaign

Providing information to specialists groups, including employers, scheme administrators and trustees, about the implications of the 1995 Pensions Act.

The estimated cost is £1.3 million. Plans for the next six months have not yet been finalised.

The majority of the work is commissioned through the Central Office of Information.

Disability campaign

A public information campaign on the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, aimed at service providers, employers, adviser groups and members of the public (including disabled people).

Activity for the next six months is not yet finalised and will depend partly on the results of research into the success of recent publicity activity and partly on the continuing demand for information materials generated by publicity activity during the past three months.

The total cost for period April 1996 to March 1997 is estimated at £2.5 million. [See background note at (1)]

Anti-fraud

The departmental headquarters is running national and local anti-fraud campaigns in conjunction with the Benefits Agency. This year, we have run two phases of local "Spotlight on Benefit Cheats" campaigns, and national publicity to launch the national benefit fraud hotline.

Activity for the next six months has not yet been finalised but we may run further campaigns between January and March 1997.

Cost to headquarters and Benefits Agency security branch is estimated at £1.75 million.

Working with Benefits

The Department's headquarters is running a national campaign to promote awareness of in-work benefits—that is, family credit and disability working allowance.

This campaign is running in two phases; the first in July–August 1996; the second in January—February 1997.

The estimated cost is estimated at £2.655 million.

Earnings Top-up Pilot

The departmental headquarters will promote earnings top-up on a pilot basis in eight areas.

The campaign began in September 1996 and will run through to the end of the financial year.

The estimated cost is estimated at £1.2 million.

Parent Plus

This is a pilot scheme to help lone parents return to work.

Preparation has already begun on the work which will begin in March 1997. Plans for its continuance are flexible over the general election period.

The estimated cost is £108,000.

Benefits Agency

Pensions

This is a locally delivered information campaign aimed at raising awareness of benefits for pensioners and is planned to start in late January.

The estimated cost to the Benefits Agency is £80,000 and the work is commissioned by the Benefits Agency press and publicity officers to independent companies such as printers and exhibition organisers. The duration of the campaign is estimated to be four weeks.

Disability

This is a planned campaign to raise awareness of a new disability living allowance child claim pack and is set to begin in April 1997.

The cost to the Benefits Agency is estimated to be £50,000. A mail shot will last for approximately two weeks. From then on, the claim pack will be available in local offices and post offices.

Anti-Fraud

This is a local campaign in support of the national campaign run by headquarters and the cost to the agency is estimated at £700,000.

Working with Benefits

A local campaign in support of the national campaign run by headquarters and the estimated cost is £240,000.

Contributions Agency

The agency has a continuing programme of publicity aimed at informing employers and employees of contributions requirements including mailshots, leaflets and exhibitions. In particular, it has an on-going campaign to encourage payment of class 2 contributions by direct debit. The total estimated cost will be £1,904,056.

All publicity is undertaken on a rolling basis and is on-going throughout succeeding financial years.

Child Support Agency

Nothing current or planned.

War Pensions Agency

Nothing current or planned.

Information Technology Services Agency

Nothing current or planned.

Notes:

It is not possible to separate promotional activities from public information campaigns. The figures quoted are for publicity only.

Benefit Information

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the organisations to which benefit information can be lawfully supplied by local authority, (b) the permitted lawful uses of benefit information by a local authority and (c) the organisations to which benefit information can be lawfully supplied by his Department. [11191]

Mr. Heald: The Department and each local authority must comply with the common law duty of confidentiality. This is backed up by the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984 and section 123 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992, which will be extended by provisions in the Fraud Bill. Information on an individual's claim to benefit is given to a third party only where there is legislative provision, where a court order has been issued, where disclosure is in the public interest or where the person has given consent. Therefore, although there is specific legislative provision—much of it emanating from outside this Department—which allows local authorities and the Department to disclose benefit information in a variety of circumstances to a range of organisations, information can be supplied to any organisation when a person has given his or her consent.

An authority may lawfully use benefit information for the exercise of its functions relating to housing benefit and council tax benefit and in the exercise of other functions where this is lawful, whether by virtue of statutory authority or otherwise.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how his Department has used the UK indicators for sustainable development in (a) the production of the Department's annual report, (b) monitoring progress towards meeting the objectives set out in the UK sustainable development strategy and (c) assessing the environmental implications of policy options; and what plans it has to extend their use in future within the Department. [12274]

Mr. Burt: The Department of Social Security, in the production of its annual report, concentrates on reporting progress towards the environmental objectives of the Department's environmental strategy. This in turn complements the sustainable development strategy, which includes energy efficiency targets, reductions in carbon emissions and waste minimisation. The Department is ranked low in terms of significant environmental impact and has no plans to assess the environmental implications of policy options or to use the indicators for sustainable development before the Department of the Environment completes its review and publishes a revised set in 1998.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average number of weeks for which cold weather payments have been made in each of the weather areas for each of the past 10 years. [12299]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Invalidity and Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of savings resulting from the replacement of invalidity benefit by incapacity benefit for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98, (d) 1998–99 and (e) 1999–2000 and of the cumulative total for those years, broken down into structural savings and savings arising from the introduction of the all work test. [13048]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Estimated annual cash savings (£ million) from the replacement of invalidity benefit by incapacity benefit

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–1999	1999–2000	cum. total
Changes made to structure of the benefit	220	490	660	820	960	3,140

Total	280	790	1,350	1,830	2,190	6,440

1. Savings are rounded to the nearest £10 million.
2. Numbers may not sum because of rounding.
3. Includes offsetting costs of estimated additional expenditure on income-related benefit.

Benefits Fraud Hotline

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls have been received by the social security fraud hotline; and what are the estimated resulting savings. [12834]

Mr. Heald: Up to the end of December 1996, calls to the national benefit fraud hotline were in the region of 130,000. The estimated fraud savings resulting from calls to the hotline are over £27 million.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Paramilitary Assaults

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the numbers of paramilitary assaults (a) by beating and (b) by shooting in the past five years, stating whether committed by loyalist or republican groups, and specify the annual and individual average amounts paid out in compensation each year, and the annual total estimated hospital costs. [12178]

Sir John Wheeler: Casualties as a result of terrorist gang assaults for the past five years are as follows:

Year	Attributed to loyalist	Attributed to republican	Total
1992	38	38	76
1993	35	6	41
1994	38	32	70
1995	76	141	217
1996	130	172	302

Casualties as a result of terrorist gang shootings for the past five years are as follows:

Year	Attributed to loyalist	Attributed to republican	Total
1992	72	61	133
1993	60	25	85
1994	68	54	122
1995	3	0	3
1996	21	3	24

It is not possible to provide details of costs associated with assaults and shootings. However, for illustrative purposes, I can advise that a victim of a "punishment" attack who suffered a broken leg and spent 10 days in hospital could cost the public purse £9,000 in potential medical and policing costs and subsequent compensation awards.

Punishment Beatings

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many assaults described as punishment beatings have taken place in Northern Ireland in each of the last six years and in the current year to date; and what estimate he has made of the number carried out in each year by (a) the Provisional IRA, (b) other republican terrorists, (c) the UDA, (d) the UVF and (e) other loyalist organisations. [12861]

Sir John Wheeler: The number of assaults described as punishment beatings for the period January 1991 to 26 January 1997 is:

	Attributed to loyalist groups	Attributed to republican groups	Total
1991	22	40	62
1992	38	38	76
1993	35	6	41
1994	38	32	70
1995	76	141	217
1996	118	158	276
1997[1]	7	12	19

[1] As at 26 January 1997.

It is not possible to specify which individual group carried out an offence. These figures do not include punishment shootings.

Social Fund

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the average time taken by each department of government in Northern Ireland to respond to bids for European social funds; [13066]

(2) how much European social funding available to Northern Ireland in each of the past five years could not be drawn down because of delay at Government level in responding to bids submitted. [13067]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Roy Beggs, dated 30 January 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your questions about the European Social Fund (ESF).

Question 13066

The majority of Northern Ireland applications to the Fund are processed by this Agency. Applications are invited through press advertisements each time funds become available. They are then scored against programme criteria and ranked by a Selection Committee. While the time taken to reach decisions is directly related to the number of applications to be assessed at each "call", the process is normally completed within 3 months of the application closing date.

Question 13067

I am pleased to say that at no time over the past 5 years has there been a failure to draw down monies from the European Social Fund because of delays in responding to bids. While there was an underspend on ESF in 1994, this was due to the delay in the approval of the Northern Ireland Single Programme. The full amount of the underspend was rolled forward to subsequent years and so will be fully spent.

Contracts (Andersen Group)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many contracts were awarded by his Department and its agencies to the Andersen group of companies between 1986 and 1993; and what were the gross value of these contracts. [13401]

Sir John Wheeler: Between 1986 and 1993 the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland Departments and their agencies have paid the Andersen group of companies £3,144,010. The number of contracts that this amount covers is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Thornton Report

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what factors underlie his Department's delay in responding to the Thornton report concerning the Casement Three, sent to his office on 11 June 1996; [13297]

(2) when he plans to respond to the Thornton report, concerning the Casement Three; [13298]

(3) what assessment he has made of the implications of the submission from Peter Thornton QC relating to the Casement Three; and if he will make a statement. [13299]

Sir John Wheeler: In June 1996, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State received representations from the Committee on the Administration of Justice arguing that the cases of Patrick Kane, Michael Timmons and Sean Kelly should be referred back to the Court of Appeal. The submission took the form of a lengthy legal opinion from Mr. Peter Thornton QC. Having obtained detailed advice on the complex legal issues raised, he is now considering the representations in depth and hopes to be able to make his conclusions known to the committee within the next few weeks.

Racially Motivated Incidents

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prosecutions there were for racially motivated incidents in each of the last five years in Northern Ireland. [13834]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not available.

Minority Communities

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) individuals of (i) Chinese and (ii) Asian ethnicity and (b) members of the travelling community he estimates live in Northern Ireland. [13835]

Mr. Ancram: No official estimates have been made of the size of the Chinese and Asian communities in Northern Ireland. In 1996 the university of Ulster carried out research, commissioned by the Government's central community relations unit and the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency, which estimated between 3,125 and 5,125 members of the Chinese community, 1,050 members of the Indian community and 641 members of the Pakistani community.

A Government survey in March 1993 estimated that there were 1,115 members of the Irish traveller community in Northern Ireland. The 1996 university of Ulster study gave an estimate of 1,366.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of (a) assault, (b) damage to property and (c) verbal racial abuse towards members of ethnic minority communities were reported in 1996 in Norther Ireland. [13836]

Sir John Wheeler: Figures for 1996 are not yet available for publication.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents assessed by the RUC to be racially motivated have been reported in each of the last five years. [13837]

Sir John Wheeler: Figures for the past five years are not available.

In 1995, without a legislation framework, the Royal Ulster Constabulary voluntarily undertook the monitoring of racial incidents among the ethnic minorities using the Association of Chief Police Officers guidelines for England and Wales.

A total of 66 racial incidents were reported to the police in 1995; the nature of the incident reported is shown:

Assault: 10

Damage to property: 27

Verbal abuse: 20

Intimidation (phone call): 1

Other: 8

It is felt that the number of incidents reported is less than the actual number that occurred. Through building a network of contacts with representative groups, and the provision of advice and support to victims, the RUC hopes to encourage victims to report every incident.

Examination Results

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of young people in Northern Ireland achieved two GCE A-levels, advanced GNVQ or NVQ level 3 by the age of 21 in each of the past two years. [13839]

Mr. Ancram: For the most recent two years for which the figures have been compiled, the percentages were as follows:

1992–93: 43.0

For 1994–95 figures are due to be compiled within the next two months.

For 1995–96 figures will not be available before the summer.

Nature Reserves

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what plans he has to privatise national nature reserves in Northern Ireland; [14014]

(2) what role non-governmental organisations will have in the process of privatising national nature reserves in Northern Ireland. [14015]

Mr. Moss: I have no plans to privatise national nature reserves in Northern Ireland. The environment and heritage service of the Department of the Environment is exploring ways of increasing the involvement of district councils, voluntary organisations and the private sector in the management and maintenance of the service's 250 properties.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

36. Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will set a cash limit for the legal aid budget in 1997–98. [12253]

Mr. Streeter: The Government have embarked on a radical reform programme to put in place the controls that we need to cash-limit legal aid spending. The key changes must be carefully piloted and some require legislation. Last year's White Paper made it clear that the reforms will take four to five years to implement in full.

38. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent representations he has received on his proposals for reform of the legal aid system. [12256]

Mr. Streeter: I frequently receive representations on this matter from professional bodies and associations, pressure groups, advice services, individual lawyers, Members of Parliament and members of the public.

40. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people received legal aid in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [12258]

Mr. Streeter: In 1995–96, being the latest year for which figures are available, the number of acts of assistance totalled 3.5 million. This represents an increase of almost 17 per cent. in the last five years.

Public Defender Services

37. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of the operation of public defender services overseas. [12255]

Mr. Streeter: Officials from the Lord Chancellor's Department visited contracted and salaried services for criminal and civil legal aid in north America last year as part of a fact-finding exercise. No general assessment of public defender services overseas has, however, been made.

Magistrates Courts Committees

39. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which bodies he has met regarding the proposed amalgamations of magistrates courts committees. [12257]

Mr. Streeter: I have recently had a meeting with a delegation from Coventry magistrates courts committee to discuss the proposed amalgamation of the Birmingham, Coventry and Solihull magistrates courts committees.

I have also had meetings with the Magistrates Association, the Central Council of Magistrates Courts Committees, the Justices' Clerks Society, the Standing Conference of Justices' Chief Executives and Clerks to Magistrates Courts Committees, the Association of Magisterial Officers, and Her Majesty's chief inspector of the magistrates courts service, at which the question of the Government's policy on the amalgamation of magistrates courts committees formed part of the agenda.

Sheriffs

41. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will review the (a) powers and (b) accountability of sheriffs and under-sheriffs. [12259]

Mr. Streeter: In view of the decision that the next stages in the civil enforcement agents review should focus on the conduct of certificated and private bailiffs, as announced by my hon. Friend the Member for Brecon and Radnor (Mr. Evans) on 2 April 1996, Official Report, column 87, no review of the powers or accountability of high sheriffs, under-sheriffs and sheriffs officers is planned at this time.

Court Buildings, Normanton

42. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to visit the courts covering the Normanton parliamentary constituency to examine the quality of the buildings used by the courts; and if he will make a statement. [12260]

Mr. Streeter: I currently have no plans to visit courts in the Normanton parliamentary constituency to examine the quality of buildings used by the courts.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Political Movements (Funding)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the financial contribution made by (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) the European Union in each year since 1980 to (i) the European Movement and (ii) the Campaign for an Independent Britain. [12475]

Mr. David Davis: Until 1985, the Government made grants of £30,000 a year to the European Movement. Grants given since 1985 were:

1985–86: £20,000
1986–87: £15,000
1987–88: £10,000
1988–89: £5,000
1992: £30,000
1994: £10,000

No grants have been made to the European Movement since 1994.

The Government are not aware of any official funding for the Campaign for an Independent Britain during this period.

Chapter A–30 of the EC budget provides a broad outline of Community subsidies, including to "bodies and projects advancing the idea of Europe".

The European Commission does not, however, publish a detailed list of such grants.

China

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning forced labour in China. [13528]

Dr. Liam Fox: In recent years, we have received a number of representations about forced labour in China from Members of Parliament, human rights groups such as Anti-Slavery International, and individuals, including Harry Wu, the US-Chinese campaigner against prison labour. We regularly raise our concerns about such abuses of human rights with the Chinese authorities.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 423, when he expects to reach a conclusion concerning what action the EU should take regarding the imprisonment of Ngawang Choepel; and if he will make a statement. [13645]

Mr. Hanley: We have now discussed the case of Ngawang Choepel with our EU partners, who share our concern. The regular representations which we have made, both bilaterally and in conjunction with our EU partners, will have left the Chinese in no doubt about the strength of our concern about the human rights situation in Tibet, and about the harassment and detention of individuals.

Crete

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many cases of alleged rape of British holidaymakers in Crete by persons native to Crete were brought to court in Crete in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [13515]

Dr. Liam Fox: We are aware of one case. The attack took place in 1994 and was brought to court in 1996.

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many accusations of rape were made by British holidaymakers in Crete against persons native to Crete in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [13514]

Dr. Fox: The numbers of accusations of rape made by British holidaymakers in Crete which were reported to our consular staff were:

1993: 7
1994: 5
1995: 5
1996: 1

Only two of the alleged perpetrators in 1993 and 1994 were known to be Greek nationals—not necessarily Cretan.

EU Council of Ministers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will place in the Library a list of section A decisions taken by the Ministerial Council of the European Community during 1996; [13389]

(2) if he will state in respect of section A decisions at meetings of the Ministerial Council of the European Community (a) if those decisions can relate to any business within the remit of the council irrespective of its notional subject title and (b) where a list of such decisions is available for public inspection. [13388]

Mr. David Davis: Yes. Part A of the agenda of each Council of Ministers meeting covers decisions on which no further discussion is expected to be necessary. The subjects covered therefore need not relate directly to the substantive matters for consideration at that meeting.

A list of part A decisions taken at Council of Ministers meetings is either placed in the Library by the relevant Department, or given in the statement made to the House on the meeting.

Albania

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of (a) British and (b) European Union business men being involved in pyramid selling schemes in Albania; what new financial aid is being considered to support that country's economy; and if he will make a statement. [13408]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have no reports of involvement by British or EU business men in pyramid selling schemes in Albania. Albania will receive £1 million of UK bilateral assistance in 1997 in the form of know-how fund projects. Albania is also set to receive 140 million ecu of EU assistance in the period 1996 to 1999 under the Phare programme.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to reform the European Court of Human Rights. [12254]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I refer the hon. Member to my statement during the debate in the House on 6 March 1996, at columns 314–15.

Mr. Ghazanfer Ali

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement concerning the application for a visit visa by Mr. Ghazanfer Ali; [13909]

(2) when Ghazanfer Ali was released on bail from prison in Azab Kashmiiz; when he applied for a visa to visit the United Kingdom; when his case was referred to the Home Office in London; when the Home Office made a recommendation; what was the recommendation; how many letters he received from hon. Members in support of Mr. Ali's application; if he will identify the hon. Members and on what date Mr. Ali will be required next to appear in court. [13910]

Dr. Liam Fox: It is policy on the ground of confidentiality for Ministers not to comment publicly on individual applications for entry clearance. I wrote to the hon. Member on 23 January giving most of the information requested. I will write again with the answers to the rest of the hon. Member's question.

Crowd Control Equipment

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the use of United Kingdom-supplied water cannons at the demonstration in Bandung, West Java, in June 1996; and if he will review his policy in respect of the use of United Kingdom-supplied crowd control equipment to disperse demonstrators. [14099]

Mr. Hanley: We are studying reports, including one from the hon. Member, of the use of water cannon in this incident. Export licence applications for all destinations are considered case by case in the light of the established criteria to which we are committed. We have no plans to review this policy.

TRANSPORT

Cap Afrique

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) passengers and (b) crew were carried on the motor vessel Cap Afrique on 14 January 1997. [13544]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 31 January 1997]: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Elliot Morley, dated 3 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question relating to the sailing of the MV CAP AFRIQUE on 14 January 1997.

The ship's manifest for the date in question indicates that there were 12 drivers (passengers) on board and the crew list records 14 crew.

Prestwick Airport

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safety requirements are being built into the private finance initiative contract for the new air traffic control centre at Prestwick; and what assessment he has made of these requirements. [13806]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 31 January 1997]: In common with all current en-route air traffic control centres, safety for the proposed new air traffic control centre at Prestwick is the responsibility of the operator—National Air Traffic Services Ltd. Operational safety at all current and future air traffic control centres is then regulated by the safety regulation group of the Civil Aviation Authority.

The NATS safety management system requires the formal assessment for safety for all systems and services supplied to NATS, irrespective of the contracting process. The safety requirements for the new Scottish centre have been fully specified and tenderers have offered full compliance with these requirements. It is NATS's responsibility, as the air traffic control operator, to provide an operational safety case encompassing systems and services to the satisfaction of the regulator, SRG. In this respect, the responsibility for safety for the new air traffic control centre at Prestwick will be no different from the current major project to build the new en-route centre at Swanwick.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13463]

Mr. Bowis: Most of the Department of Transport's publicity comprises public information campaigns on safer road use. It is not possible to separate advertising, publicity and public information; therefore, the answer is provided in an alternative format to that requested. The major advertising campaigns are planned for the most appropriate time of year with the bulk of the publicity budget spent on the "Kill Your Speed" campaign in May and September and the "Drink Drive" campaign in June and December. The majority of supporting publicity expenditure is on-going and cannot be specifically dated.

Table A: Budgeted expenditure on publicity campaigns for the period January to March 1997

	Campaigns in period January to March	Budgeted expenditure January to March (£)[1]	Budgeted expenditure for all campaigns in full financial year (£)
1997	Child road safety	500,000	9,648,000
	Kill Your Speed	350,000

Table (b): The main publicity campaigns for the period run from January to March for the past five years

Year	Campaigns in period January to March	Expenditure January to March (£)[1]	Expenditure for all campaigns in full financial year (3)
1992	—	[2]—	—
1993	Seat belts	990,000	8,760,000
	Cycle helmets	288,000
1994	Seat belts	584,000	8,275,000
1995	Child road safety	300,000	8,039,000
	Pass Plus	190,000
1996	Pass Plus	160,000	8,356,000
	Child road safety	470,000
	Child seat belts	195,000
	Kill Your Speed	280,000
	Railtrack	831,000

[1] Figures include advertising expenditure and supporting publicity where applicable.

[2] I will write to the honourable member with the figures for the period January to March 1992.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. Hoon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the (a) water and (b) electricity companies regarding the action they are taking to ensure their computer systems are able to handle the century date change. [14272]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have not received any direct representation from the water or electricity companies on this issue, but I understand that Taskforce 2000 has written to most of these companies informing them of the problem. As with all companies, urgent managerial attention to the problem is required.

Boeing Airline Merger

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the impact on (a) Airbus Industrie and (b) British Aerospace plc of the proposed merger of Boeing and McDonnell Douglas. [12591]

Mr. Greg Knight: It is too early to make a detailed assessment of the impact of the proposed merger, but my Department is considering the implications with Airbus Industrie and British Aerospace.

Offshore Installations (Decommissioning)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances Shell will be permitted to (a) withdraw and (b) modify its best practicable environmental option statement on deep sea disposal of the Brent Spar. [12599]

Mr. Page: The Government approved a programme for the deep sea disposal of the Brent Spar in the north-east Atlantic. Shell has asked six contracting groups to develop detailed plans for 11 alternative decommissioning schemes for the Brent Spar. Any alternative solution will be judged against the approved best practicable environmental option of deep sea disposal. Any new application must comply with the terms of the Petroleum Act 1987 and will need at least to satisfy those issues which demonstrated that deep sea disposal was the BPEO. Only in these circumstances would the Government modify the programme previously approved.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances a best practicable environmental option would be required for the decommissioning of the Brent Spar outside the United Kingdom; and what authorisation his Department would be required to give in order to permit the decommissioning outside the United Kingdom. [12611]

Mr. Page: While the Brent Spar remains an installation for which the United Kingdom accepts responsibility internationally, its owners and operators are required by section 1 of the Petroleum Act 1987 to obtain the approval of an abandonment programme for its disposal. Under the agreement with Norway under which the Brent Spar is parked in Norwegian waters, the United Kingdom retains responsibility for the installation.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's preferred option for the disposal of the Brent Spar; and what licences or best practicable environmental option would be required to comply with this option. [12596]

Mr. Page: The Government previously approved a deep sea option for the disposal of the Brent Spar. The owners have not followed that option through. Shell is now considering a range of options. For any alternative to be approved under the terms of the Petroleum Act 1987 it must at least match the approved best practicable environmental option.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the status of the draft guidelines published for consultation in 1995 for disposal and decommissioning of offshore redundant oil and gas installations. [12597]

Mr. Page: The guidance notes, which were issued as a consultation document, embodied what Ministers considered were appropriate steps to ensure the proper consideration of any application for the approval of proposals for the removal and disposal of disused offshore installations. We shall reconsider them in the light of the comments made and the outcomes of current discussions in international forums on this subject. In the meantime, we shall follow their spirit in dealing with any applications which have to be decided.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade by what means his Department takes into account public opinion in establishing the best practicable environmental option in pollution control; and to what extent these procedures have been adopted in the disposal of the Brent Spar. [12600]

Mr. Page: Within the statutory requirements, it is for each authority responsible for pollution control to establish its own means of assessing public opinion on the matters which it must decide. In the case of applications for the approval of abandonment programmes for the disposal of disused offshore installations, the owners of an installation are required to carry out consultations with a range of organisations representing fisheries, amenity and environmental interests. This was done in the case of the Brent Spar. There is a need for clear, public understanding of the issues involved in decommissioning offshore installations and the Government accept that the decision-making process should be as transparent as possible. Revised consultation procedures are currently being considered.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice his Department has issued to Shell UK, in respect of decommissioning the Brent Spar outside the United Kingdom. [12934]

Mr. Page: My Department has given no such advice.

EU Funds (Applications)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful applications have been made by United Kingdom organisations in the past four years to obtain financial support from the EU for (i) telematics applications, (ii) controlled thermonuclear fusion projects and (iii) energy infrastructures; and what funds have already been allocated to the United Kingdom for these purposes. [12344]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Financial support from the EU for collaborative research projects in each of the three areas is available from the framework programme. However, full information on research projects funded in individual members states is held only by the European Commission, and is not distributed to member states. Accordingly, information on the numbers of successful and unsuccessful applications from the UK, as well as the precise funds allocated, is not available.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much electricity is currently generated per annum in England from combined heat and power plants; and what is the percentage of the total electricity generated in England provided by CHP stations; [13447]

(2) how many sites in Wales presently operate combined heat and power stations; and what is the total output of electricity generated by these plants. [13322]

Mr. Page: My Department collects data relating to electricity generated on a United Kingdom basis. The electricity generated in the United Kingdom from combined heat and power plants and the percentage of electricity provided by CHP are:

	1993	1994	1995
Electricity generated by CHP	14,171 GWh	12,152 GWh	17,761 GWh
Electricity generated by CHP as a percentage of total electricity generated	4.4	3.7	5.3

Source:
Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 1996.

Mr. Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the opportunities to increase employment in the power generation sector through the building of further combined heat and power plants. [13398]

Mr. Page: We are committed to the wider use of CHP. The Government recently published a national strategy and has a target to increase CHP capacity to 5,000 MW by the year 2000. This target was set primarily to pursue energy efficiency and climate change objectives, and while increased employment may well also result, no such assessment has been made.

Coal Imports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the total quantities of coal imported last year by country indicating the primary ports used for import. [13320]

Mr. Page: Latest available data for the quantities of coal imported into the United Kingdom cover the period January to September 1996 and are as follows:

	Thousand tonnes
European Union[1]	324
Non European Union	12,439
Total	12,763

[1] Includes extra EU coal routed through the Netherlands.

Imports of coal into the United Kingdom for 1995 by country are as follows:

	Thousand tonnes
European Union[1]	283
Australia	3,641
Canada	1,364
Columbia	2,687
Czech Republic	2
Estonia	59
India	9
Indonesia	65
Norway	2
People's Republic of China	77
Poland	1,274
Republic of South Africa	1,313
Russia	160
United States of America	4,858
Vietnam	101
Total	15,896

[1] Includes extra EU coal routed through the Netherlands.

From the information available the following ports have been used in 1996 for the import of coal:

Southampton
Newport (Gwent)
Cardiff
Swansea
Goole
Immingham
Ipswich
Belfast
Londonderry
Warrenpoint
Port Talbot
Middlesbrough
London (including Tilbury)
Thamesport
Avonmouth
Liverpool
Felixstowe
Great Yarmouth

Quantities of coal imported through each port are not available because details have been suppressed by HM Customs and Excise to maintain commercial confidentiality.

Coal Production

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total quantity of coal produced by (a) deep mines and (b) opencast mines, in the United Kingdom last year; and what proportion was produced in Wales. [13321]

Mr. Page: My Department's provisional estimates of coal production in 1996 are 33 million tonnes for deep mines and 16 million tonnes for opencast mines. Actual production in 1995 for deep mines and opencast mines was 35.2 million tonnes and 16.4 million tonnes respectively. The Coal Authority has published production data for Wales for the financial year 1995–96 at 3.4 per cent. of total UK deep-mined production and 13 per cent. of total UK opencast production.

Trade and Investment (European Union)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of Britain's world trade was with European Union member states in each of the last 10 years; and what has been the rate of growth of this trade relative to Britain's trade with the rest of the world. [13682]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The available information is given in the table:

UK exports and imports of goods

£ billion, current prices

	EU15	Rest of the world	EU as per cent. of world
1986	86.7	68.1	56.0
1987	96.2	73.6	56.7
1988	104.6	77.6	57.4
1989	119.7	89.2	57.3
1990	128.9	93.3	58.0
1991	128.1	89.0	59.0
1992	134.4	93.4	59.0
1993	143.2	113.0	55.9
1994	159.1	121.0	56.8
1995	181.6	134.7	57.4

Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics, November 1996, ONS.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the current value of British investment in European Union member states and of the current value of each member state's investment in the United Kingdom. [13685]

Mr. Knight [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Information on UK inward and outward investment with the European Union for 1995 was published by the Office for National Statistics in "First Release ONS (96) 268 Overseas Direct Investment 1995" dated 17 December 1996. The publication is available in the Library of the House.

Inward Investment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the value of inward investment in each of the last five years that has located in Britain from (a) the Caribbean, (b) South Africa, (c) Canada, (d) South Korea and (e) Japan. [13196]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 28 January 1997]: There are no figures available for the Caribbean. However, according to OECD flow figures the value of inward investment into the UK from the other four listed countries is:

£ million

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
(a) South Africa	38	30	84	59	50
(b) Canada	–265	264	–46	34	–113
(c) South Korea	–1,200	–22	105	34	39
(d) Japan	2,091	48	–22	279	–60

Source:
International direct Investment Statistics Yearbook, 1996, OECD.

Notes:
1. These flow figures include UK disposals by foreign companies. Flow figures are volatile and fluctuate year to year in part due to the cyclical nature of reinvestment profits and of mergers and acquisition activity.
2. The negative flow figures represent disinvestment in the UK by inward investors. An inward investor may for example sell a UK-based company to a UK investor. This is not outward investment but negative inward investment.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the total costs of the BSE crisis in Britain from 1 April 1996 to date, categorised according to (a) payments to abattoirs, (b) payments to renderers, (c) compensation paid to farmers and (d) other costs. [12772]

Mrs. Browning: Between 1 April and 31 December 1996 the total expenditure on BSE eradication and compensation schemes broken down by recipient was as follows:

	£ million
(a) Payments to abattoirs	161.8
(b) Payments to renderers	104.7
(c) Compensation paid to farmers	553.3
(d) Other costs	35.3

Rabies

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to conclude his review of rabies law. [13255]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 29 January 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 15 January 1997, Official Report, column 288.

Farm Animals (Breeding)

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken in response to the report of the Committee on Ethical Implications of the Emerging Technologies in the Breeding of Farm Animals. [13446]

Mrs. Browning: The Government have made significant progress in taking forward the various recommendations in this report.

In particular, the Farm Animal Welfare Council has already agreed to adopt the general principles set out in the report and has also established arrangements for liaison with the Animal Procedures Committee.

MAFF holds annual meetings on the need to conserve farm animal breeds, maintains a register of breeds and supports research on animal biodiversity. The Government are continuing to support internationally harmonised controls on genetically modified organisms and efforts to achieve an acceptable EU patents directive.

Cattle Carcases

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what weight of (a) meat and bonemeal and (b) carcases from cattle slaughtered in the over-30-months scheme have been transported from mainland Britain to Northern Ireland; and at what cost. [13625]

Mr. Baldry: No meat and bonemeal or carcases from cattle slaughtered in the over-30-months scheme have been transported from mainland Britain to Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what have been the transportation costs in each of the last 12 months of moving BSE waste and carcases between storage, rendering and disposal sites. [13626]

Mr. Baldry: BSE suspects are killed on farm and transported to incinerators for destruction. Transport costs are not recorded separately but are included in an account which covers the costs of transport, incineration and disposal, drugs and miscellaneous other expenses for disposal of BSE suspects. The total expenditure under this account for each month in 1996 was:

Month	Amount £
January	327,016
February	205,336
March	407,416
April	140,599
May	234,538
June	213,368
July	215,727
August	141,949
September	155,235
October	248,798
November	162,440
December	153,149
Total	2,605,571

Transportation costs could be separated only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many and what tonnage of cattle carcases destroyed in the over-30-months scheme are currently being stored in the four dry warehouses and six cold storage depots in Northern Ireland in (a) tonnes and (b) number of cattle carcases. [13624]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is as follows:

	Tonnes	Number of cattle
Dry stores[1]	34,390	—
Cold stores[2]	15,535	45,610

[1] As at 17 January 1997.
[2] Current.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek the exclusion of genetically modified organisms and their derivatives from the definition of organic production in the European Union regulations. [13706]

Mrs. Browning: The UK Government believe that genetic technology has the potential for widespread benefit, subject to adequate controls on its use. However, we support the UK organic industry in its wish to see, for the time being, genetically modified organisms specifically prohibited in EC legislation relating to organic farming and food processing.

The position of derivatives from GMOs, particularly those that are indistinguishable from more conventional products, is more complex. These complexities stem from the practicalities of policing and enforcing any prohibition. We will be considering our position in light of any proposals from the EC Commission.

Marine Contracts

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many contracts have been won by his Department for (a) consultancy work and (b) survey work on behalf of developers in the marine environment in each of the last five years; [14096]

(2) if he will list the contracts carried out by his Department for (a) consultancy and (b) survey works for developers in the marine environment in each of the last five years; [14095]

Mr. Baldry: The centre for environment, fisheries and aquaculture science, formerly the directorate of fisheries research, which is part of this Department, has been awarded six contracts for monitoring the effects of aggregate extraction on specific aspects of the marine environment. Details of these contracts are:

Project	Date	Duration	Number of reports
Survey of aggregate extraction, licensed area 107[1]	September 1994	8 months	1
1995 survey of area 107	August 1995	9 months	2
Dredger plume survey, area 107	October 1995	3 months	1
Annual monitoring, area 107	October 1995	4 years	1 each year
Shrimp monitoring programme, area 107	October 1995	4 years	1 each year
Sole monitoring survey, Hastings shingle bank	March 1996	5 years	1 each year

[1] Area 107 is of the Wash.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many reports on environmental surveys in the marine environment have been carried out by his Department as the contractor reporting to his Department as the regulator in each of the last five years. [14097]

Mr. Baldry: Aggregate extraction is regulated by the Department of the Environment under the non-statutory government view procedure. MAFF advises on the potential impact of aggregate dredging on the marine environment and on commercial fishing operations. The table sets out the number of applications which have been accepted under this procedure in each of the past five years:

1993: 0

1994: 5

1995: 2

1996: 3

In each of these cases, the centre for environment, fisheries and aquaculture science has contributed a report on its assessment of the application to assist the Department in making its contribution to the Government view. These arrangements will be recognised in a formal relationship with the new agency which will operate from 1 April this year.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are in place to ensure there is not a conflict of interest between that part of his Department seeking consultancy work on the marine environment from developers and that part of his Department acting as regulator. [14098]

Mr. Baldry: Consultancy assignments are accepted by the centre for environment, fisheries and aquaculture science only on the basis that the work involved requires an objective assessment. Scientists who provide regulatory advice do not contribute to them.

Suckler Cow Premiums

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of suckler cow premium payments in England for the current year had been paid by 1 January 1997. [13940]

Mr. Baldry: By 1 January 1997, approximately 61 per cent. of advance payments under the 1996 suckler cow premium scheme had been made. All advance payments are expected to be made by the citizens charter deadline of 5 March 1997. The vast majority of balance payments will be made between mid-April and 30 June 1997.

WALES

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of (a) chickens and (b) turkeys on farms in Wales are currently vaccinated against Newcastle disease; and if he will make a statement. [13601]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There is no statutory requirement for routine vaccination against Newcastle disease, and the information requested is not held centrally.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research his Department has commissioned into the causes of illegal drug use in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [13870]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh drug and alcohol unit has produced a review of drug and alcohol research in Wales and is in the process of identifying what further research needs to be undertaken to inform implementation of the Welsh drug and alcohol strategy.

Small Firms

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many business failures among firms employing fewer than 20 employees there were in Wales in (a) 1990, (b) 1991, (c) 1992, (d) 1993, (e) 1994 and (f) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [13882]

Mr. Hague: Official statistics on business failures are not available separately for Wales.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many planning appeals, decided by inspectors appointed by his Department, were allowed in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [13871]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Apart from 1992, the information available is collected by financial years as follows:

Planning appeals decided by inspectors[1]

	1992	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Allowed	375	323	277	245
Dismissed	745	594	560	456

[1] Appeals under Section 78 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

Community Care (Abuse)

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many community care abuse cases (a) have been reported over the last two years and (b) are being investigated by his Department and its social services directorate. [13497]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Department is not aware of any such cases.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for the planned spending figures for (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99 for each of the programmes for which he is responsible, the (a) cash and (b) real terms change on the equivalent amounts for 1996-97 including those shown in his expenditure plans for 1996. [14100]

Mr. Hague: The information is given in the table:

Changes from 1996–97 original plans as set out in Cm 3215

Programme	1997–98		1998–99
	Cash prices	Real terms[1]	Cash prices	Real terms[1]
Agriculture	–14	–19	–23	–33
Industry	65	61	84	76
Training	–7	–9	–11	–16
Roads	–63	–67	–97	–103

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the percentage increase in inflation which he allowed for settling the level of standard spending assessment and capped expenditure in framing the local government settlement for 1997–98; and what was the cash value of the provisions made; [14101]

(2) what cash provision was made for (i) inflation and (ii) new burdens in setting the level of capped expenditure and standard spending assessment for 1997–98; and if he will list each new burden and the cash value of each allowed for in the settlement. [14102]

Mr. Hague: My settlement proposals take account of inflationary pressures and new burdens on local authorities in the context of what the country can afford and local authorities' capacity to make efficiency savings. It is for local authorities to decide how they allocate the resources available to them. I do not earmark settlement funds for specific purposes. I have, however, made allowance for additional community care money and the transfer of mental handicap/mental illness strategy and capital disregard resources to the settlement in my provisional capping principles.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the measures taken by his Department to ensure that accurate information on the nursery voucher scheme is disseminated to schools and parents [13935]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Welsh Office issued a question and answer guide to all head teachers in January 1996. Subsequently, the Department issued two detailed guides to the scheme to all potential providers of nursery education, including maintained schools, together with a registration pack for all participants and information leaflets for parents. Parents have been sent notice of the eligibility of their children for vouchers and other details by the nursery voucher centre followed by application forms for vouchers. All parents who have written to the Department about the scheme have been sent an individual response giving accurate information. The nursery voucher centre operates a bilingual helpline for parents and all potential providers.

Local education authorities have been sent copies of all information issued to parents and schools and have been consulted in the detailed development of the scheme. Some authorities and teachers attended the seven information seminars arranged by the Welsh Office for the private and voluntary sectors, which were attended by almost 800 people.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many head teachers from Denbighshire took up the offer by his Department to be briefed on the nursery voucher scheme; [14058]

(2) how many head teachers from Conwy have been briefed by his Department on the nursery voucher scheme; [13943]

(3) if he will make a statement on the progress made by (a) Conwy local education authority and (b) Denbighshire local education authority in implementing the nursery voucher scheme. [13947]

Mr. Evans: The Welsh Office ran a series of information seminars for the private and voluntary sectors at the end of 1996 and offered to arrange joint Welsh Office—local education authority seminars for the maintained sector. LEAs preferred to make their own arrangements, although a number of LEA and school representatives attended the Welsh Office seminars. Welsh Office officials met members of the Denbighshire Federation of Headteachers in July 1996. Both authorities have made block applications for their schools to participate in the voucher scheme.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of suckler cow premium payments in Wales for the current year had been paid by 1 January 1997. [13938]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Around 53 per cent. of 1996 eligible suckler cow premium claims had been paid an advance as at 1 January 1997.

By now this figure has increased to 66 per cent.

The Department aim, set out in the charter for farmers in Wales is to complete advance suckler cow premium payments by 5 March 1997.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the allocation of assisted places scheme places to each school for 1996–97 and 1997–98. [14054]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The allocation of new places under the assisted places scheme to each school in Wales in academic years 1996–97 and 1997–98 is as follows:

School	New places	Total places, September 1966 (including "pool" places)[1]
Christ College, Brecon	26	101
Pfynone House, Swansea	7	7
Howell's, Cardiff	34	186
Howell's, Denbigh	25	83
Kings Monkton, Cardiff	10	11
Llandovery College	18	69
Monmouth Boys	27	146
Monmouth Girls	18	82
Rougemont School, Newport	14	15
Ruthin School	8	11
Rydal Penrhos, Colwyn Bay	43	142
St. Clare's School, Porthcawl	10	14
St. Gerard's School, Bangor	8	9
St. John's College, Cardiff	10	11
Total	258	887

[1] In addition, 14 new places are reserved in a "pool", against which oversubscribed schools can bid annually for additional places. Bids will be invited shortly.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of teachers in (a) Conwy and (b) Denbighshire are expected to have retired before the age of 60 years in 1996–97. [14056]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of teachers in the former Clwyd local education authority retired before the age of 60 years in each of the last five years. [14057]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is shown in the table:

School teachers in the former Clwyd LEA taking early retirement as a percentage of school teachers in service[1,2]

	Percentage of teachers in Clwyd taking early retirement
1991–92	3.0
1992–93	3.4
1993–94	3.6
1994–95	4.2
1995–96	3.1

[1] Includes grant-maintained and independent school staff who are in the Teachers' Superannuation Scheme (TSS). Excludes those returning to non pensionable occasional service for years 1991–92 and 1992–93. Data not available for 1993–94 onwards.

[2] Includes all teachers in service with the LEA and grant-maintained schools.

Education Funding

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement on the additional finance intended for education in 1997–98; [14060]

(2) if he will make a statement on the consequences of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's announcement that additional funding would be made available for education in 1997–98; and how much additional money he plans to provide to each local education authority to allocate to education. [14059]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The provision for education announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Budget statement on 26 November relates to England. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales announced his spending plans for 1997–98 on 12 December 1996. He announced direct provision of £566 million for education in Wales, including the highest-ever level of capital provision for schools at £68 million. This is additional to resources provided to local authorities for the running costs of their schools and other education services as part of their standard spending assessments. Overall, these SSAs are increased by 2.3 per cent. for 1997–98, in line with the increase in English total standard spending for local authorities. They are not hypothecated to particular services. It is for individual local authorities to decide what they wish to spend on education.

Rhuddlan Bypass

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he estimates the Rhuddlan bypass will be (a) completed and (b) open. [13942]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Denbighshire county council estimates completion and opening by late April or early May.

Dental Services

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the schemes to improve NHS dentistry in (a) Conwy and (b) Denbighshire. [13944]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The £3 million initiative announced in September 1995 enabled Welsh health authorities to offer grants to attract new dentists into those parts of Wales where they are most needed, and to expand the community dental service.

The effect of the initiative in Conwy and Denbighshire is that, in Conwy, grant aid has been offered for three new dental practices, one of which is already open, and to the Clwydian Community Care NHS trust to recruit an additional dentist in the community dental service. In Denbighshire, grant aid has been offered to one new dental practice that is already open, and to one existing practice that has taken on additional dentists. The Clwydian Community Care NHS trust has also been offered grant aid to recruit a new dentist for a new mobile surgery which is being funded by the Welsh Office initiative.

Beef Industry

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on measures taken to help the beef sector since 1992. [13945]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The package of reforms to the common agriculture policy agreed in 1992 provided for the introduction in 1993 of the beef special premium scheme and suckler cow premium scheme. These schemes have injected £164.4 million into the beef sector in Wales since 1 January 1993.

Following the statement by my right hon. Friend on 20 March 1996, the Government have committed £3.5 billion to support the industry in the UK, over four years, on the following measures in response to the BSE crisis:

Scheme	Payments in Wales
Beef marketing payments scheme 1	£1.27 million (paid early October 1996)
Beef marketing payments scheme 2	Estimated £1.6 million to be paid
Slaughtering industry (emergency aid) scheme	£622,863 paid to Welsh abattoirs
Beef stocks transfer scheme	£312,494 paid to Welsh participants (to 24 January 1997)
Beef special premium supplementary payments	£4.47 million paid to date
Suckler cow premium supplementary payments	£4.1 million paid to date
Over thirty months scheme	—[1]
Calf processing scheme	—[1]
Selective cull	—[1]
Clean beef top up	—[1]
Beef and beef products disposal service	—[1]
Animal feed disposal service	—[1]
Intervention support	—[1]
Aid to the rendering industry	—[1]

Working Time Directive

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of implementing the working time directive on (a) the tourism industry and (b) the agriculture sector. [14055]

Mr. Hague: The impact would depend on the implementing legislation. Decisions on legislation have not yet been taken and the Government are consulting on the options. A compliance cost assessment was published as part of the consultation document, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Ministerial Committees

Mr. Key: To ask the Lord President of the Council on what date in December 1996 and January 1997 he attended the Ministerial Committee on Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy. [14126]

Mr. Newton: In accordance with the principle of collective responsibility for Government decisions, including the need to maintain the frankness and candour of internal discussion and advice, details of proceedings of Cabinet committees are not published.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 4 February 1997

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Staff

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many right hon. and hon. Members employ (a) no staff, (b) one member of staff, (c) two members of staff and (d) more than two members of staff. [13088]

Mr. Newton: The information requested is as follows:

(a) eight Members

(b) 92 Members

(c) 249 Members

(d) 299 Members

These figures relate to the 648 right hon. and hon. Members currently sitting at 31 January 1997.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many staff are employed by right hon. and hon. Members. [13087]

Mr. Newton: At 31 January 1997 there were 1,753 staff employed by right hon. and hon. Members.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are his current proposals for the amalgamation of magistrates courts in England and Wales; if he will list the consultation processes on those proposals with starting dates and deadlines for submissions; what representations he has received so far (i) in favour and (ii) against the proposals; if he will list the costs of the proposed amalgamations; what account has been taken of (a) the number of cases to be heard in and (b) the catchment areas of and maximum travel distances to, the newly amalgamated courts; and if he will make a statement. [14108]

Mr. Streeter: I have no proposals for the amalgamation of magistrates courts in England and Wales. Magistrates courts are provided by the local paying authority for the use of the magistrates courts committee. Closure decisions are for the MCC to determine, after consultation with the paying authority. The paying authority can appeal to the Lord Chancellor against the MCC's decision within one month of its receiving written notice of the determination.

The following magistrates courthouse closures are currently the subject of appeal: Biddulph, Blaenau Ffestiniog, Cheadle, Kidsgrove, Llangollen, Otley and Pontadawe. There have been a number of written and oral representations both in favour and against these appeals. Costs, work load, catchment areas and maximum travel distances are all taken into account in reaching decisions on appeals.

PRIME MINISTER

Chequers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what have been the running costs of Chequers for each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [13612]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Chequers is established under the Chequers Estate Acts 1917 and 1958 and is administered by independent trustees who receive an annual grant from public funds towards its maintenance in accordance with the Acts. In the last five years the grant has been:

1992–93: £260,000

1993–94: £266,000

1994–95: £226,000

1995–96: £233,000

1996–97: £226,000.

The Government also contribute to the cost of the household staff at Chequers. Over the same period expenditure—net of VAT refunds—has been:

1992–93: £428,287

1993–94: £251,460

1994–95: £301,960

1995–96: £221,280

1996–97: £240,000 (estimate).

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister how many days he has spent in residence at Chequers in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13613]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 31 January 1997]: In the last five years, my family and I have made regular use of Chequers for a variety of purposes, in accordance with the wishes of the donor, Lord Lee, and the Chequers Estate Acts.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 4 February. [12877]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 4 February. [12878]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the impact on the Lockerbie case of the recent acquittal by the United States authorities of Mr. Juval Aviv on charges of deception. [13089]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply he received from the Minister of State, Scottish Office, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, West (Lord James Douglas-Hamilton), on 27 January, Official Report, columns 70–71.

The acquittal of Mr. Juval Aviv by a jury after trial in the New York southern district court on charges of deception has no bearing on the validity of the case against the two Libyans accused in respect of the Lockerbie bombing.

Ministerial Severance Payments

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister whether Ministers leaving office immediately following the general election will have their severance payments based on the salary scale in force on polling day or that applicable on the day after polling day. [14150]

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

Severance payments will be made in accordance with the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991 and will, therefore, mean that severance pay to former Ministers is based on the same rate as the salaries paid to new and continuing Ministers.

DEFENCE

Joint Services Command and Staff College

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress there has been on inviting industrial consortiums to provide a permanent joint services command and staff college. [14588]

Mr. Soames: I am pleased to announce that the Joint Services Command and Staff College will be at Shrivenham from September 1999. The college will be a centre of military excellence, building on the worldwide renown of its prestigious predecessors to maintain our global reputation for command and staff training.

A Serco/Laing consortium, Defence Management, has been selected as the preferred bidder. We shall be assisted in the academic support for the new college by Kings college London which is world renowned for its contribution to military studies.

The new college will be in purpose built accommodation on a greenfield site within the perimeter of the Royal Military college of science. Subject to successful detailed negotiations Defence Management will be awarded a contract for the provision of the accommodation, facilities management and academic support required for the new college, in June 1997. Until the permanent site is available, we shall run courses at interim sites, mainly at Bracknell.

The staff college at Camberley has played an important and historic role for the Army. We intend to identify a fitting and appropriate military use for this historic building. I intend to report on our plans for its future occupancy before the summer recess.

Trades unions were consulted fully when the decision to explore the options for private financing was made. In accordance with normal procedures, they are being informed of the choice of the preferred bidder and will be consulted again, after a contract has been placed, about the possible transfer arrangements for civilian staff working at the interim sites.

Cigarettes (Service Personnel)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of cigarettes purchased at discounted or duty-free prices by service personnel serving outside the United Kingdom in each of the last three years; and what is the number of people eligible for those supplies. [12409]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 28 January 1997]: I have made no such estimate. The figures requested are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Arms Sales (Turkey)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the arms sales to Turkey assisted by the Defence Export Services Organisation in each of the last three years. [13936]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 3 February 1997]: DESO facilitates contact between British industry and Turkish Government officials to help them promote their products and services. Comprehensive records are not kept of those export orders which result directly or indirectly from DESO involvement and such information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Admiralty House

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what were the running costs of Admiralty house for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [13618]

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Responsibility for Admiralty house transferred from the Department of the Environment to the Cabinet Office on 1 April 1996. The approximate running costs for each of the last five years are as follows:

1992–93: £779,000
1993–94: £755,000
1994–95: £601,000
1995–96: £723,000
1996–97 (to date): £184,000.

Ministerial Committees

Mr. Key: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on what date he chaired the Ministerial Committee on Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy which considered the outcome of the competition for the food supply contract for the armed forces. [14122]

The Deputy Prime Minister: In accordance with the principle of collective responsibility for Government decisions, including the need to maintain the frankness and candour of internal discussion and advice, details of the proceedings of Cabinet and Cabinet Committees are not published.

Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) on what dates in December 1996 and January 1997 he attended the Ministerial Committee on Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy; [14124]

(2) what dates in December 1996 and January 1997 the Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury attended the Ministerial Committee on Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy. [14123]

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 3 February 1997]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him yesterday by my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council.

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister without Portfolio on what dates in December 1996 and January 1997 he attended the Ministerial Committee on Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy. [14125]

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 3 February 1997]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him yesterday by my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing

7. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the impact of the Budget on housing. [12506]

Mr. Curry: We receive representations and pursue discussion on all issues relating to housing.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his latest estimate of the total number of houses in multiple occupation in England and the total number of occupants of such accommodation using the categories contained in his Department's consultative paper on the licensing of multi-occupied houses; [13786]

(2) what is his latest estimate of the total number of (a) multi-occupied houses in England which are occupied by no more than three persons other than the responsible person and any other member of his household and (b) occupants of such accommodation; [13784]

(3) what is his latest estimate of the total number of multi-occupied houses in England which are owned by (a) housing associations, (b) universities and (c) other educational establishments; and what is the total number of occupants of such accommodation; [13783]

(4) what is his latest estimate of the total number of multi-occupied houses in England which consist entirely of self-contained flats where (a) at least one-third are let on leases of 21 years or more and are occupied by the lessees and their households and (b) the building work carried out when the flats were created had to comply with the relevant fire safety requirements in the Building Regulations 1985 or Building Act 1984 regulations; and how many occupants of such accommodation there are currently; [13780]

(5) what is his latest estimate of the total number of (a) multi-occupied houses in England occupied by no more than four persons who form more than two households and (b) occupants of such accommodation. [13785]

Mr. Curry: The following information on numbers and occupants of houses in multiple occupation is available from my Department's survey of English local authorities in 1995. All figures relate to 1995.

Category of house	Number of houses	Number of occupants
Traditional HMOs	110,642	631,467
Shared houses/flats	100,043	343,187
Households with lodgers	41,272	106,645
Purpose built HMOs	17,399	246,354
Hostels, guest and boarding houses	16,665	237,717
Converted self contained flats	352,285	1,533,597
Totals	638,306	3,098.967

According to this survey, a total of 47,171 HMOs were owned by housing associations.

The other information requested is not available.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table on a similar basis to the one included in the 1995 White Paper, "Housing: Our Future Homes", showing the total expenditure planned for 1997–98 and equivalent figures for 1978–79, breaking down expenditure to show (a) capital investment by local authorities, (b) capital investment by housing associations and other social landlords, (c) general and means-tested subsidies to home owners, (d) general and means tested subsidies to council tenants and (e) means-tested subsidies to private and housing association tenants. [13794]

Mr. Curry: The information is as follows:

£ billion in 1996–97 prices

England	1979–80	1995–96	1997–98
Capital investment by local authorities	7.8	2.1	1.7
Capital investment by housing associations and other social landlords (public finance element, excluding capital investment by local authorities)	1.1	1.3	0.8
General and means-tested subsidies to home owners	3.8	3.9	n/a
General and means-tested subsidies to council tenants	8.4	5.4	5.3
Means-tested subsidies to private and housing association tenants	0.5	5	5.6
Total	21.6	17.8	n/a

n/a = not available.

The table summarises help given towards housing costs through public spending and mortgage interest tax relief on the basis requested. Information for 1978–79 is not kept in this format. Figures for 1997–98 are preliminary forecasts and such forecasts are not available for mortgage interest tax relief.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the local reference rent for (a) a self-contained one bedroomed flat and (b) a single room in shared accommodation for each local authority in England. [13782]

Mr. Curry: My Department produces the "Rent Officer Statistics" publication on a quarterly basis which includes averages of all the rent determinations made by rent officers for private lettings, by property type and size, in each registration area in England and Wales. The publication covering the first quarter of 1996 was published on 17 January 1997. Copies are available in the Library. The only statistics produced at the local authority level are those for the London boroughs.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the total number of homes for renting from local authorities, housing associations and other registered social landlords which will be started in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [13790]

Mr. Curry: My Department does not make forward estimates of the total number of homes for renting which will be started by local authorities, housing associations and other registered social landlords. The Housing Corporation's central estimate of the number of approvals which will be granted to registered social landlords under the rental component of its approved development programme over the three years 1997–98 to 1999–2000 is 48,100. The Corporation will be publishing details of its approved development programme shortly. Further homes for rent will also be started under other programmes including local authority housing association grant, the single regeneration budget and the rough sleepers initiative.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total number of council homes sold (a) under the right to buy and (b) otherwise in each local authority area in England, in the periods (i) 1979 to 1983, (ii) 1984 to 1987, (iii) 1988 to 1992 and (iv) 1993 to 1996. [13792]

Mr. Curry: Tables showing the available information on total right-to-buy sales in each English local authority for each financial year from 1979–89 are in the Library. An update of the tables including data for sales in the period April to September 1996 will be placed in the Library in the next few weeks.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes have been acquired under the rents-to-mortgages scheme in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996; and what is his estimate of the number likely to be acquired in 1997. [13787]

Mr. Curry: Local authorities in England have reported seven sales under the rent-to-mortgage scheme in 1994, nine in 1995 and seven in the first nine months of 1996. My Department has made no estimate of future sales.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the total number of new lettings which will be generated for social housing purposes in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [13789]

Mr. Curry: On current plans, we estimate that the total number of new lettings for social housing purposes will be (a) 58,500, in 1997–98, (b) 47,200 in 1998–99 an (c) 42,000 in 1999–2000.

Rented Accommodation

10. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new rented housing starts he estimates will be created by (a) housing associations and (b) local authorities in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97. [12510]

Mr. Clappison: In England, the Housing Corporation granted approvals to housing associations for 38,700 new rented homes in 1995–96 and 38,900 in 1996–97. These figures include new build and rehabilitation using funding from the approved development programme and local authority housing association grant. Further homes are provided through single regeneration budget funding and housing associations' own resources. Local authorities started around 500 new homes in England in 1995–96 and a similar figure is expected for 1996–97.

Packaging Waste

14. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding the regulations on producer responsibility for packaging waste. [12514]

Mr. Gummer: The regulations were laid on 29 January and are based on the industry agreement reached on 15 December 1995. The final version of the regulations took into account responses representing more than 53,000 businesses.

Regional Government (South-East)

18. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning regional government in the south-east. [12518]

Mr. Curry: I receive representations on regional government from time to time. The Government see no case for setting up new bodies to provide regional government which would simply add an unwanted and unnecessary additional tier of bureaucracy and cost to existing arrangements.

Local Government Finance (Manchester)

19. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the revenue support grant settlement for Manchester. [12519]

Sir Paul Beresford: The local government finance report for 1997–98 was laid before the House on Monday 27 January and was debated yesterday.

Contaminated Land

20. Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding the guidance that his Department gives on contaminated land. [12520]

Mr. Clappison: We have received some 300 responses to the consultation document published on 18 September on draft statutory guidance to be issued under part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Environmental Information (Open Government Code)

21. Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution his Department has made to the publication of environmental information under the terms of the open government code. [12522]

Mr. Gummer: On more than 40 occasions environmental information was made available when policy proposals and decisions were announced.

Air Pollution

23. Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding air pollution. [12523]

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hammersmtih (Mr. Soley) earlier today.

Local Government Finance

24. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on proposed changes to the calculation of the area cost adjustment. [12524]

Sir Paul Beresford: During the consultation period on the 1997–98 local government finance settlement I received 87 representations proposed changes to the calculation of the area cost adjustment.

25. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many councils have spent above their capping limit. [12525]

Sir Paul Beresford: Legally no authority can set a budget above its cap. However, an authority can set a budget above the level of its provisional cap and be designated by the Secretary of State at a level at or below its budget. A total of 46 authorities have done so since 1991–92, of which 17 have been designated at a level above their provisional cap. A local authority's budget for capping purposes excludes some types of spending, such as spending financed by specific grant.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority in England the total amount of (a) usable and (b) set-aside capital receipts estimated to be held at 31 March 1996. [13791]

Mr. Curry: A list of the amounts of accumulated usable capital receipts for each local authority in England at 31 March 1996 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Figures for the amounts of set-aside capital receipts are not available. These form part of the provision for credit liabilities, which is reported to the Department, but which also includes amounts set aside from revenue.

Local Government Finance (North Yorkshire)

26. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount spent on local government in North Yorkshire in the year (a) before and (b) after reorganisation. [12526]

Mr. Curry: The total budgeted net revenue expenditure by authorities in North Yorkshire was (a) £546.3 million in 1995–96 pre-reorganisation, and (b) £568.9 million in 1996–97 post-reorganisation.

Comparable pre-and post-reorganisation estimates of capital expenditure are not yet available. However, central Government support—credit approvals and grants—for capital expenditure by authorities in North Yorkshire is estimated as (a) £36.2 million in 1995–96, and (b) £35.2 million in 1996–97.

Ministerial Visit (Redbridge)

27. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next plans to visit the London borough of Redbridge to discuss local authority spending plans. [12527]

Sir Paul Beresford:: I met the London borough of Redbridge on 7 January to discuss its local authority spending plans. I have no plans at present to visit Redbridge. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced details of the 1997–98 local government finance settlement, affecting the spending plans of all local authorities in England, in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, (Mr. Congdon) North-East on 27 January 1997 Official Report, column 11.

Local Authority Appointments (Indemnity)

28. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consult the local authority associations on the arrangements for persons appointed by local authorities to sit on outside bodies being indemnified for their costs in legal actions relating to such bodies. [12528]

Mr. Curry: The Government have no plans to consult the local authority associations on this matter but will, of course, consider any representations that they may wish to make.

Non-departmental Bodies (Appointments)

29. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for how many posts in non-departmental bodies he is responsible for making appointments. [12529]

Mr. Gummer: I am responsible for 962 appointments to 61 non-departmental public bodies.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account he will take of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee report on Nirex's proposals for publication and peer review in his consideration of the inspector's report on Nirex's application to build a rock characterisation facility. [13516]

Mr. Gummer: I am considering the matter.

Swansea Canal

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the amount (a) spent by British Waterways on maintaining the Swansea canal and (b) received by British Waterways from the sale of water to INCO in Clydach, Swansea, in each of the last five years. [13315]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: It costs British Waterways £180,000 each year to maintain the canal, of which about half is met by income from the sale of water to INCO.

Waterways (Safety)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sum the Government propose to allocate for maintaining the safety of British waterways in 1997–98. [13445]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: British Waterways' grant in aid allocation for 1997–98 is £50.89 million. This includes an extra £5 million in recognition of the backlog of maintenance. It is for the board of British Waterways to determine its priorities for maintenance and ensure the safety of the network.

UN General Assembly

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he has had with (a) environmental, (b) industrial and (c) other non-Governmental organisations, on the United Kingdom's input to the proposed agenda for the United Nations General Assembly special session on the environment to review progress since the Rio earth summit in 1992; and what future consultations he plans. [13851]

Mr. Gummer: My Department issued on 30 December a consultation paper entitled "Five Years On From Rio: Special Session of the UN General Assembly: UK Position Paper". This was sent to a wide range of bodies, including those from industry, environmental and other non-governmental organisations. A copy of the paper was placed in the Library. I will consider the need for further steps in the light of comments received.

Government Office for the South-West

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the value of grants and financial support (a) disbursed and (b) administered by the Government office for the south-west for each year since its inception. [13881]

Mr. Curry: Information on GOSW's programme expenditure for 1994–95 and 1995–96 is contained in the office's annual reports. I have arranged for copies to be sent to the hon. Lady.

The figures for funding administered through the Government office, as recorded in the annual reports, were: 1994–95—£293.835 million; 1995–96—£324.463 million. The budget for 1996–97 is £388.363 million. This excludes European funding which is not administered on a fiscal basis. The precise manner in which funding is disbursed differs between individual programmes.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what have been the (a) capital and (b) administration costs of the Government office for the south west in (i) Bristol and (ii) Plymouth for each year since its establishment. [13880]

Mr. Curry: GOSW's running cost expenditure for 1994–95 and 1995–96 is contained in the office's annual reports. I have arranged for copies to be sent to the hon. Lady. More detailed information is available in GO-MINIS 1 and 2, copies of which are available in the Library of this House.

For 1994–95 records are not split between Bristol and Plymouth because funding was via the 4 Departments and not through the single accounting system. Capital costs were nil and the final outturn for administrative expenditure was £6,778,000. In 1995–96 the published costs are: £317,000 capital spend in Bristol, £44,700 capital spend in Plymouth; £5,802,400 Bristol and £1,866,300 Plymouth administrative expenditure. To date, the budget allocations for 1996–97 are: for capital spend £68,200 Bristol and £48,300 Plymouth; for administration, £5,252,100 Bristol and £1,886,000 Plymouth.

Energy Conservation (Pensioners)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the schemes funded by his Department relating to energy conservation for retirement pensioners; and what his proposals are in respect of these schemes. [13659]

Mr. Clappison: Our home energy efficiency scheme provides grants for basic home insulation and energy advice for householders aged 60 or over, as well as householders receiving income-related benefits or certain disability allowances. More than 2 million grants under this well-regarded scheme have increased comfort and improved energy efficiency for vulnerable people; £75 million has been allocated for 1997–98, an increase of 3 per cent. on 1996–97, and later this year a revised, improved scheme will be launched. A wider range of energy efficiency measures will be available, giving greater benefits because more appropriate improvements can be offered to individual homes.

In addition, we are paying the Energy Saving Trust grant towards a pilot scheme to demonstrate how local authorities and private finance providers in partnership can help pensioners to make energy efficient improvements to their homes.

Planning Consents

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications for planning consent he has called in in each of the years 1994 to 1996, in (a) London and (b) each other region of England; how many of these involved housing; what percentage of these involved (i) mixed tenure and (ii) special needs housing; what was the average length of time taken to reach a decision on the application; how many are still awaiting a decision; and what percentage of those decided have been (1) approved and (2) refused. [13778]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The number of planning applications called in in each Government office region in England in the years 1994 to 1996 is as follows:

	1994	1995	1996
North East	9	4	7
North West	7	10	9
Yorkshire and the Humber	12	15	12
Merseyside	0	4	6
West Midlands	24	7	9
East Midlands	14	17	16
Eastern	25	30	17
South West	34	'60	29
South East	5	15	15
London	12	15	14

[1] Some 30 of these cases relate to a single site in Devonport. Further applications were called in in 1994–96 in Cornwall. Following the Lees report on the operation of the planning system in North Cornwall, the Government has been monitoring development control in Cornwall as a whole.

In total, the number of call-ins per calendar year for 1994, 1995 and 1996, excluding the Devonport and Cornwall cases, was some 120, 133 and 120 respectively.

Of those shown in the table, 85 applications involved housing development of which approximately 9 per cent. involved mixed tenure housing and approximately 13 per cent. special needs housing. Of those applications that have been decided, 38 per cent. were approved and 62 per cent. were refused permission. The Department does not keep information centrally on the average length of time to reach a decision. However, from Government offices' records of those cases called in in 1994 to 1996, the average time to reach a decision following receipt of the inspector's report was 15 weeks; 37 applications are awaiting determination following receipt of the inspector's report.

Local Authority Pension Schemes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what guidelines he issues to local authorities concerning the management of their pension funds; [13773]

(2) if he will collate information on the pension fund managers used by each local authority in England. [13772]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Local Government Pension Scheme Regulations 1995 set out comprehensive statutory requirements under which local authorities are required to manage their pension funds. The regulations allow authorities to select and appoint to select and appoint external fund managers authorised under the Financial Services Act 1986. Collated information on fund managers is available commercially.

UN Environment Programme

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the findings contained in the United Nations environment programme's first global environmental outlook report published on 27 January, in respect of its relevance to the United Kingdom environment and United Kingdom involvement in environmental technology and policy abroad; and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [13850]

Mr. Gummer: The Government welcome the first UNEP global environment outlook report, a copy of which I am arranging to have placed in the Library. Assessment and monitoring of the global environment is a core function of UNEP. We very much hope that the current session of the governing council will endorse a refocusing of its overall mandate enabling UNEP to concentrate on its core functions. I shall be attending the governing council myself to set out the United Kingdom's position on this important issue.

Overall, the report is pessimistic about the state of the global environment. The UK can, however, be proud of its achievements both at home and in the international arena. We will ensure that the UK continues to implement Agenda 21. We were one of the first countries to publish both a sustainable development strategy and indicators, and annual reports on progress. We will also continue to play a leading part in international discussions on environmental issues, and in encouraging a climate of policy and programmes which stimulates a positive and active contribution by business, for example, in the provision of environmental technology to developing nations.

The Prime Minister's recent announcement that he will attend the special session of the United Nations General Assembly in June, demonstrates the Government's commitment to sustainable development and preservation of the environment.

EC SAFE Programme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what Her Majesty's Government's policy is on the European Community's SAFE programme; and what position he intends to adopt on it at the Council of Ministers meeting on 25 February. [13917]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government supports the general aims of the SAFE programme, but there are a number of detailed budgetary and procedural issues relating to the Commission's amended proposal which have yet to be resolved. The SAFE programme is not on the agenda for adoption at a Council of Ministers meeting on 25 February. It is not clear whether it will appear on the agenda for the Labour and Social Affairs Council meetings on 17 April or 12 June.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions his Department has had with private sector firms during the last year about the possible opencasting of coal in north Warwickshire. [14226]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Green Belt (Harrow)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to visit the green belt areas on the northern borders of the London borough of Harrow in the constituency of Harrow, East. [12847]

Mr. Gummer: I have no current plans to visit the green belt areas in my hon. Friend's constituency, although I have committed myself to protect them along with the rest of the green belt.

Noise Act 1996

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what (a) guidance and (b) resources he is giving to local authorities in respect of the implementation of the Noise Act 1996; and if he will make a statement. [12975]

Mr. Clappison: My Department will be issuing a circular to local authorities to give guidance on the implementation of the Noise Act 1996.

We have estimated that the overall additional cost to local authorities in England to enforce the night noise offence would be in the region of £1 million in 1997–98, rising to £3 million in 1999–2000. This assumes a gradual rate of adoption and takes account of the extent of out of hours noise services currently being provided. This was taken into account in the 1997–98 local government finance settlement and in the baselines for future settlements.

Council Leaseholders (Service Charges)

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when and how he will use his powers under the Housing Act 1996 to help council leaseholders in difficulty with high service charges. [14460]

Mr. Clappison: Research published in 1995 showed that, while the great majority of people who bought their council flat saw it as good value for money, a small proportion were in particular difficulties with service charges which were often much higher than they expected when they bought. Sometimes costly works were needed to maintain or repair large system-built blocks and leaseholders received little or no benefit from the work. In some cases, the landlord had received special assistance—for example, from the estate action programme—to carry out the works, but his leases still obliged him to charge leaseholders.

Following public consultation, we have today introduced two measures which will come into force later this month. They will lead to reductions in some of the highest bills for maintenance, repair and improvement works.

The first measure is the Social Landlords Discretionary Reductions of Service Charges (England) Directions 1997. This allows local authorities and other social landlords to reduce or waive service charges for past, current and future works of repair, maintenance or improvement carried out with assistance from estate action, city challenge, the single regeneration budget challenge fund or the estates renewal challenge fund, where the assistance was applied for before 25 February. It will also allow them to reduce or waive charges for works—even if they did not receive such special assistance—so that total service charges do not exceed £10,000 for the same property over any five-year period. Landlords will be able to reduce bills, including those which have already been sent out, and they will be able to offer refunds. We have set out criteria that they will have to consider in deciding whether and by how much to reduce charges.

The second measure is the Social Landlords Mandatory Reduction of Service Charges (England) Directions 1997. This requires social landlords to charge no more than £10,000 for the same property over any five-year period for repair, maintenance or improvement works carried out with assistance from the single regeneration challenge fund or the estates renewal challenge fund, where assistance is bid for on or after 25 February. They may only charge more if the benefit to the leaseholder from the works exceeds that amount. In some cases, they must charge less. The cost of complying with the mandatory directions can be included in the bid for assistance.

The measures use our new powers in sections 219 and 220 of the Housing Act 1996. They will come into force on 25 February 1997. They are being sent to English local authorities and other social landlords, together with detailed guidance on how to comply. This will enable them to bring relief to some of their leaseholders who face difficulties with high bills.

Access to Information

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government have responded to the House of Lords Select Committee report on freedom of access to information on the environment. [14498]

Mr. Gummer: I have today published the Government response and I have thanked the committee for its timely report. The Select Committee's report has helped the Government in reviewing the workings of our own environmental information regulations and in reporting to the Commission on the implementation of the EC directive.

I am happy to accept most of the committee's recommendations although the majority of these involve revisions to the directive rather than to our own regulations. Although I accept that certain revisions to the regulations and guidance are desirable, I am less clear as to when these might best be made. There are external factors to consider.

The Commission is reviewing the directive and changes are possible. We will need to respond to these. However, there is a further complication. Negotiations are proceeding on a UN-EC convention on access to environmental information etc. The final agreed to text will probably necessitate further changes to both the directive and the regulations.

That does not mean, though, that we should do nothing now. As the report indicates, the regulations and the open government code of practice are providing the public with improved access to environmental information. I would like this improvement to continue.

I accept that access will be significantly extended if there is a more satisfactory machinery for appeals and enforcement. I propose, therefore, to seek ways to establish an independent appeals procedure as a matter of urgency and will give serious consideration to the Select Committee's preference for an information commissioner. I will also ensure that the guidance is revised to cover this change and to improve clarity elsewhere.

I have placed copies of our response in the Libraries of both Houses.

Storm Damage (North Devon)

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide assistance to North Devon district council under the Bellwin scheme for the costs incurred in dealing with exceptional storms in October 1996. [14499]

Mr. Curry: I am satisfied that financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme is justified given the exceptional nature of the storms on 28 October 1996. A scheme will, therefore, be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs which are above a threshold, and which have been incurred by North Devon district council in dealing with the immediate aftermath of those storms.

County Councils (Statutory Functions)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the statutory functions for which non-metropolitan county councils have ceased to have financial responsibility since the beginning of the financial year 1993–94, indicating in each case the date on which financial responsibility ceased. [13174]

Mr. Curry [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Responsibility for funding further education colleges was transferred to further education funding councils on 1 April 1993; responsibility for the Careers Service was transferred to the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on 1 April 1994; the special educational needs tribunal took over responsibility for special educational needs appeals on 1 September 1994; responsibility for police services passed to the new police authorities established on 1 April 1995; and responsibility for waste regulation transferred to the Environment Agency on 1 April 1996.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on referring cases to the European Court of Human Rights following receipt of the opinion of the Commission; and what are the procedures for implementing that policy. [13569]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The handling of each case is decided on its merits, taking into consideration factors such as the opinion of the European Commission of Human Rights and the desirability of obtaining a Court ruling having regard to the potential wider significance of the case.

Referral of a case by the Government is by letter from the Government agent to the registrar of the Court in Strasbourg.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what records are kept by his Department of cases brought against the United Kingdom before (a) the European Commission and (b) the European Court of Human Rights; and if he will publish such records. [13567]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The case files relating to each case are of necessity confidential to the Government as a party to the litigation. Proceedings before the Commission are, under its own rules, confidential save to the extent that the Commission publishes its decisions. Court proceedings are in principle public and application for information concerning them may be made to the Court registry.

We do not keep a complete record of judgments affecting the UK. A comprehensive list is openly available from the registrar of the European Court of Human Rights. The publication is entitled "Statistics".

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what compliance measures have been taken and by whom in respect of the 1989 European Court of Human Rights case concerning Graham Gaskin; what obligation there is on his Department as regards the timing of compliance measures; when he expects measures to be introduced in respect of the Graham Gaskin case; and what conclusions he has drawn from the Graham Gaskin case as regards policy on compliance. [13574]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We are aware that there has been a delay in implementation of the judgment in the Graham Gaskin case. This is an exception to what is in general an excellent record of prompt compliance with judgments of the European Court of Human Rights. Under the convention, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe oversees the implementation of judgments. Payment of any compensation and costs awarded must be made within three months of the judgment. There is no set limit for any other measures of implementation required, but the committee expects them to be introduced within a reasonable time. We expect measures in respect of the implementation of this case to be in place within the next year.

As this is exceptional, the Government see no reason to alter their current practice in relation to the implementation of judgments.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many cases against the United Kingdom before (a) the European Commission and (b) the European Court of Human Rights have involved friendly settlement negotiations in the past 10 years; which cases were settled as a result of friendly settlement negotiations; what were the terms of such settlements; and what is the Government's policy on friendly settlement. [13577]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We keep no consolidated records of the numbers of cases brought against the United Kingdom before the European Commission and Court of Human Rights where friendly settlement was attempted or achieved, nor of the terms of those settlements.

We address each case before the ECHR organs on its merits. We support the friendly settlement mechanisms and employ them wherever the circumstances of the case suggest that such a settlement would be negotiable and in the interests of both parties.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the cases brought before the European Court of Human Rights since 1 January 1975 which have resulted in a finding of a violation of the convention on human rights against the United Kingdom, indicating when such findings were made. [13571]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The list is published in the Council of Europe reference charts, "Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights", published in 1995, which is available from the House of Commons Library.

The list is accurate to October 1994. Since then, violations have been found in the following cases:

Welch (February 1995), McMichael (February 1995), Tolstoy (July 1995), McCann, Farrell and Savage (September 1995), John Murray (February 1996), Hussain (February 1996), Singh (February 1996), Goodwin (March 1996, Benham (June 1996), Chahal (November 1996), Saunders (December 1996).

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account is taken of (a) costs of litigation and (b) the consequences of any adverse finding by the European Court of Human Rights in determining the Government's approach to such litigation, including its policy towards friendly settlements. [13579]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We deal with each case before the European Commission and Court of Human rights on its merits. We take a variety of factors into consideration in deciding how to respond to applications, including whether to attempt friendly settlement negotiations. Potential costs and legislative consequences of adverse decisions are two such factors. Their relative weight in deciding the Government's approach will depend on the circumstances of the case under consideration.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list for each European Court of Human Rights finding requiring United Kingdom legislation or other compliance measures the time taken to introduce such measures, indicating in each case the Government Department principally responsible; what were (a) the average and (b) longest times taken; in how many cases legislation or other compliance measures have not yet been introduced; and what obligations there are on the Government in respect of the time taken to introduce compliance measures; [13572]

(2) what legislation or other compliance measures have been introduced as a result of findings of violation of the convention on human rights against the Government, specifying in respect of each case the date of the finding and the date and nature of the legislation or other compliance measures introduced. [13580]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have no consolidated record of the time taken to introduce legislation or other compliance measures in each violation found against the United Kingdom at the European Court of Human Rights.

The Council of Europe reference chart book, "Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights," which is available from the House of Commons Library, contains some details of the measures taken by states parties, including the United Kingdom, to implement judgments of the Court, up to the end of 1994.

Under the convention, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe supervises the implementation of judgments. There are no set time limits for general compliance measures, but the Committee expects them to be introduced within a reasonable time.

The provision of the additional information required to answer this question would require considerable research. We have assessed the volume of work involved and concluded that it would involve a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many cases against the United Kingdom have been referred to the European Court of Human Rights since 1 January 1975; and how many of these were referred by (a) the European Commission and (b) the Government. [13568]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: A total of 87 cases against the United Kingdom have been referred to the European Court of Human Rights since 1 January 1975.

We do not keep records of the additional information, but whether the Government or Commission or both have referred a case to the court is stated in each judgment, as published by the Council of Europe. These are available in the Library of the House of Commons.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures there are for obtaining advice from other Departments in respect of cases before the European Court of Human Rights. [13578]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The Government agency, who is an FCO official, consults other Government Departments as necessary on cases before the European Court of Human Rights.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy as regards the timing of the implementation of legislation or other compliance measures following European Court of Human Rights findings; what guidelines exist for officials in implementing such policy; what steps are taken to ensure that the necessary work is undertaken; and what performance-related sanctions or bonuses exist for officials in this respect. [13573]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: According to article 54 of the European convention on human rights, the Committee of Ministers is responsible for supervising the execution of the judgments of the Court. It is Government policy to implement the judgments of the Court as soon as practicable.

Responsibility for the effective implementation of ECHR judgments falls to Ministers and not to officials. There are no performance-related bonuses or sanctions for officials in respect of implementation of ECHR judgments.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in how many cases in the past 10 years the Government have considered referring a case to the European Court of Human Rights but decided not to do so; and if he will list each such case. [13570]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We keep no consolidated record of such matters. The formulation of an answer to this question would require considerable research. We have assessed the volume of work involved and concluded that it would involve disproportionate cost.

Burma

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to discuss with British companies the problems associated with investment in Burma. [14003]

Mr. Hanley: Through our officials in London and our embassy in Rangoon we regularly brief UK companies considering investment in Burma on the political and economic factors which may affect their decision.

Satellites

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those satellites controlled by Her Majesty's Government indicating their owners. [13154]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The following satellites are controlled and owned by the UK Ministry of Defence:

SKYNET 4A

SKYNET 4B

SKYNET 4C.

The following are controlled by the UK Ministry of Defence but owned by NATO:

NATO IVA

NATO IVB.

The Ministry of Defence also owns two small space technology research satellites—STRV–1a and STRV–1b. These were launched in June 1994 but following successful mission completion they were transferred to the university of Colorado in 1996. They remain the property of MOD.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Reduction Measures

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures have been introduced since 1992 to reduce crime; and what assessment he has made of their effectiveness. [13513]

Mr. Maclean: Since 1992, we have continued to develop and implement measures designed to make life more difficult for criminals and easier for law abiding citizens. This has involved major new legislation; substantial changes in the criminal justice system, including the creation of new offences and the revision of penalties so as to ensure that the courts have the powers they need to deal with criminal behaviour; new money for the police and for closed circuit television; the development of new ideas on crime prevention; and the targeting of persistent offenders.

We are determined to fight crime effectively and, with full backing for the police, the support of the community, proper emphasis on crime prevention and severe punishment for serious persistent and dangerous offenders, we have demonstrated that progress can be made. Through partnership initiatives to combat crime and the steadfast work of the police, we have seen recorded crime fall by 10 per cent.—a reduction of over half a million offences—for the last three years for which figures are available.

Crime and Detection Statistics

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each metropolitan city in 1994–95 and 1995–96 (a) the crime figures and (b) the detection rate by category of crime. [13300]

Mr. Maclean: The table gives the available information for the City of London as a whole, which comprises the Metropolitan police and the City of London police force areas. Information for other cities is not available since the statistics collected centrally on recorded crime are broken down only as far as police force area.

Telephone Taps

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the investigation into transcripts of telephone taps missing from the National Criminal Intelligence Service; and how many transcripts are unaccounted for. [13405]

Mr. Maclean: The Director General of the National Criminal Intelligence Service invited John Stevens, formerly the chief constable of Northumbria police, to conduct an inquiry following a case in which telephone intercept material was supplied unlawfully to defence counsel. He also looked at administrative processes for handling intercept material and future safeguards. The inquiry found no evidence of corrupt practice at NCIS and all the intercept material has been accounted for. The director general has welcomed the inquiry's review of procedures for handling intercept material and all its recommendations are being taken forward.

North-east Regional Crime Squad

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the role of the north-east regional crime squad in the cases of R v. Beriman and R v. Charrington and others; and what action he has taken; and if he will make a statement. [13585]

Mr. Maclean: I have received representations from hon. Members in the case of R v. Charrington but not in the case of R v. Berriman. I have taken no action in either case: the issues raised are within the responsibility of the chief constables of the forces concerned.

Prison Governors

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is given by the Prison Service to people recruited to fill governor grade positions. [13898]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 4 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the training given to those recruited to governor grades.

On promotion to Governor 5 from Principal Officer it is mandatory for all newly promoted governor 5s to attend a two week New Governor 5 course, which deals with general prison management issues and a one week Incident Command course. They attend further courses which help them deal specifically with the demands of their post.

The Prison Service also recruits individuals onto the Accelerated Promotion Scheme (APS). Those selected for the APS, who are not already serving prison officers, undergo mandatory Prison Officer initial training to enable them to serve as prison officers for one year. They then undertake management training in the form of a seven week Principal Officer course which deals with prison procedures and introduces management training. APS students attend a one week course which gives a non-operational overview of the Prison Service and a one week course on the operational responsibilities of a governor 5. They attend the Incident Command course and a series of developmental workshops as well as role specific training.

In addition the Prison Service is piloting a cross hierarchical move scheme in which experienced individuals have been appointed to governor grades. These individuals have received specific training to meet their individual needs to perform in the governor grades.

Prison Suicides

Mr. George Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the rate of self-inflicted deaths which have occurred in (a) each prison, (b) each prison type and (c) the prison estate for each year since 1990. [13821]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 4 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your question about the rate of self-inflicted deaths in prisons.

The attached tables show the numbers of self-inflicted deaths that have occurred in each prison; in each type of prison, and totals for the prison estate for each year since 1990. It is not possible to display the information as a rate without incurring disproportionate costs.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many suicides occurred in Her Majesty's prisons in the last three complete years and in the half year to October 1996; and if he will express these figures as a rate per head of the population. [11615]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 21 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 4 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of suicides at prison establishments in the last three complete years, and in the half year to October 1996.

The figures on self-inflicted deaths are given below. Self inflicted deaths do not necessarily conclude with a verdict of suicide.

Financial year	Number of self-inflicted deaths	Average prison population	Rate of self-inflicted deaths per 100,000 prisoners
1993–94	47	45,827	103
1994–95	65	49,308	132
1995–96	60	51,614	116

During the first six months (April to September) of the financial year 1996–97 there were 36 self-inflicted deaths. Based on current population projections for 1996–97 this represents a rate of 127 self-inflicted deaths per 100,000 prisoners.

Colchester Young Offenders Institution

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what factors have led to the delay in opening HM YOI Colchester; [13900]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 23 January to the hon. Member for Colchester, South and Maldon (Mr. Whittingdale), Official Report, columns 729–30, what training the proposed governor of HM YOI Colchester received from the Prison Service to prepare him to take up his position. [13899]

Miss Widdecombe: This is a unique initiative which has required much careful preparation. It was necessary to complete the appointment of military staff to the young offender institution and determine the final details of the regime before agreeing to open the establishment in February.

The commandant of the military corrective training centre, who has been appointed governor of Colchester young offender institution, has undertaken Prison Service training in relation to prisoner adjudications, the command of serious incidents, finance and staff appraisal, and has made several familiarisation visits to Prison Service establishments. He will shortly receive training in the staff code of discipline.

Consultants

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts worth more than £250,000 his Department gave to external consultants in each of the last five years; to whom these contracts were let; and what work the consultants were contracted to undertake. [13761]

Mr. Howard: The following 17 contracts worth more than £250,000 were given by my Department to external consultants in the last five years.

Cornwall and West Plymouth Euro-constituency

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many representations were received by the Boundary Commission regarding the review of European parliamentary constituencies in England; and how many of these related to the proposed Cornwall and West Plymouth Euro-constituency; [13237]

(2) how many representations were received by the Boundary Commission from local councils regarding the current review of European constituencies in England; and how many (a) related to the proposed Cornwall and West Plymouth Euro-constituency and (b) favoured a European parliamentary constituency for Cornwall; [13238]

(3) where and when the Boundary Commission proposes holding a public inquiry into the proposals for a Cornwall and West Plymouth Euro-constituency. [13239]

Mr. Sackville: The Boundary Commission published its provisional recommendations for changes to the boundaries of the 71 European parliamentary constituencies in England on 7 November 1996. A period for submission of representations in respect of those proposals immediately followed, ending on 7 December 1996.

The commission, which is an independent and politically impartial body, has not yet announced how many representations it has received in respect of its recommendations, nor whether it intends to hold a local inquiry in respect of any of its provisional recommendations.

Coroner Procedures (Muslim Communities)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in the past three years from (a) the Bradford Council for Mosques and (b) other Muslim organisations in respect of the expedited release of dead bodies over weekends and public holidays by coroners serving large Muslim communities. [14104]

Mr. Sackville: We have no record of representations on this matter form the Bradford Council for Mosques. Representations have, however, been received from the Aylesbury Mosque Committee, the Burial Council of Leicestershire Muslims and from Kashmir Centres Europe.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has initiated with the representative local government organisations to make funding available to coroners, serving large Muslim communities, for the issue, over weekends and public holidays, of the necessary documentation to permit the transport of bodies overseas. [14105]

Mr. Sackville: None. Funding of the coroners' service is entirely a matter for the relevant council.

Sean O'Callaghan

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Republic of Ireland about the extradition of Sean O'Callaghan for the alleged murder of Mr. John Corcoran. [14017]

Mr. Kirkhope: None.

Disabled Access (Police Stations)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Dpearmtent what is his policy regarding disabled access to police stations; and if he will make a statement. [14107]

Mr. Maclean: the Home Office police buildings design guide, issued in April 1994, recommends that all new police buildings in England and Wales, to which civilian employees or the public are expected to have access, should afford access for disabled people. Existing buildings which do not fulfil these requirements are being upgraded by police authorities as resources permit.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the recent report by Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary on No. 4 area (south-east) of the Metropolitan police; [14408]

(2) if he will make a statement on the recent report by Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary on the personnel function of the Metropolitan police. [14409]

Mr. Maclean: Yes. I have today placed in the Library a note of the recommendations from the report, together with the commissioner's responses and the police authority responses, which take into account the advice my right hon. and learned Friend and I have received from the Metropolitan police committee.

Ethnic Minorities (Hong Kong)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the status after 30 June of those ethnic minorities in Hong Kong who hold only British nationality. [14587]

Mr. Howard: I have carefully reviewed the position of the solely British ethnic minorities in Hong Kong, in the light of expressions of concern, in both Houses of Parliament here and in Hong Kong, that their nationality status will be uncertain after 30 June 1997. It is clear that the assurances which they have been given over a number of years have not allayed this concern. I therefore intend to make provision enabling them to apply for registration as British citizens, giving them right of abode in the United Kingdom, after 30 June 1997. I expect that the great majority of them will continue to reside in Hong Kong, where they have right of abode.

Whitemoor Prison

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of Sir John Woodcock's inquiry into the 9 September 1994 escape from the special secure unit at Her Majesty's prison, Whitemoor, Cambridgeshire. [12619]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 24 January 1997]: The cost of Sir John Woodcock's inquiry which was met by the Home Office was £349,760. This included the fees of Sir John Woodcock, the salary costs of the police officers and Home Office staff in the inquiry team and support costs, such as accommodation and travel and subsistence expenses.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time asylum seekers have been kept in prison; and what is the longest time an asylum seeker has been held in prison. [13062]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Information on the average length of time an asylum seeker has been kept in prison can be obtained only by examination of individual case records. The information requested is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

As at 24 January 1997, the longest currently detained person who had sought asylum, irrespective of their detention location, has been held—solely under Immigration Act powers—since 12 October 1993. The individual concerned was detained at the end of his prison sentence following a court recommendation for deportation following his conviction for supplying class A drugs. He subsequently claimed asylum and the application was refused in February 1994. After exhausting rights of appeal before the domestic courts, he made an application to the European Court of Human Rights and a date for the full hearing is awaited.

Secure Units

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently held in special secure units in England and Wales; and how long they have been held in such units. [13413]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Phil Wheatley to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 4 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners held in special secure units and how long they have been held in such units.

There are currently 29 prisoners being held in special secure units. The details requested are set out in the following tables:

Number of prisoners	Length of current detention in SSUs
Belmarsh (remand)
1 prisoner	10 months (March 1996)
7 prisoners	6 months (July 1996)
4 prisoners	4 months (September 1996)
1 prisoner	14 months (November 1995)
Belmarsh (convicted)
1 prisoner	10 years 7 months (June 1986)
1 prisoner	9 years 7 months (June 1987)
1 prisoner	9 years 3 months (October 1987)
1 prisoner	6 years 1 month (December 1990)
1 prisoner	4 years 9 months (April 1992)
1 prisoner	4 years 7 months (June 1992)
Full Sutton
1 prisoner	1 year 4 months (September 1995)
1 prisoner	1 year (January 1996)
1 prisoner	6 months (July 1996)
Whitemoor
1 prisoner	3 years 4 months (August 1993)
1 prisoner	8 years 5 months (July 1988)
1 prisoner	1 year 4 months (September 1995)
2 prisoners	1 year 1 month (December 1995)
1 prisoner	10 months (March 1996)
1 prisoner	5 months (August 1996)

Geoffrey Thomas

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Prison Service inquiry into the death of Geoffrey Thomas was completed; and when he received a copy of the report of the inquiry. [13934]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The inquiry was completed on 17 January. I received a copy of the report on 29 January. The Director General of the Prison Service made an announcement on 31 January.

Prison Inspectorate Reports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Her Majesty's inspectorate of prisons reports are awaiting publication. [14013]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 3 February 1997]: As at 31 January, 25 reports submitted by Her Majesty's inspector of prisons are awaiting publication.

Murderers (Publications)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to prevent imprisoned murderers from publishing material which could cause distress to the families of their victims. [13946]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The Prison Service has a range of measures in place, the details of which are set out in standing order 5, circular instructions 10/1991 and 21/1992 and instruction to governors 73/1995. Copies of these are in the Library. The Government have considered the recent High Court judgment in the case of Simms and O'Brien about visits by journalists and authors to prisoners, and has decided to appeal.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Rwanda

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what sums were promised by his Department in 1994 for the provision of reconstruction and development in Rwanda; and how much has been disbursed for that purpose to date. [14109]

Dr. Liam Fox: We have provided a total of £175 million, including our share of EU assistance to the Rwanda crisis since 1994. In 1994, no pledges for reconstruction and development were made, but emergency assistance worth more than £57 million, including our share of EU assistance, was disbursed. Since January 1995, we have agreed to provide bilateral assistance totalling £19.5 million in rehabilitation assistance for the period 1995–96 to 1998–99; £12.2 million has been disbursed to date.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

The Ridings School

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many additional teaching staff have been drafted into the Ridings school, Halifax, as part of the school's recovery plan; and what their functions will be. [13526]

Mr. Forth: According to the action plan and statement of action submitted to the Secretary of State by the Ridings school and Calderdale LEA, five additional teaching staff have been drafted into the Ridings school. One is the associate head teacher whose role is to assist the head. Another has been appointed to provide staff cover for staff absences. The remaining three will cover a range of subject specialisms.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) her Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13466]

Mr. Robin Squire: In the first three months of 1997, this Department plans to spend an estimated £3.13 million on advertising and £6.45 million on publicity to provide public information. Producing comparable information for the past five years, isolating particular parts of those years as requested, would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the principal expenditure items and the total expenditure by her Department and its predecessors on advertising and publicity in each year since 1987–88. [13672]

Mr. Squire [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Pursuant to my reply of 30 January, total spending on advertising and publicity for the Department is given below in financial years. Before the merger in July 1995, the Department operated separately funded programmes of publicity. This continued until the end of the financial year 1995–96.

	£ million
Department for Education
1987–88	1.7
1988–89	1.6
1989–90	1.4
1990–91	4.5
1991–92	9.0
1992–93	8.0
1993–94	10.1
1994–95	9.4
1995–96	5.4
Department of Employment
1987–88	[1]6.9
1988–89	[1]5.7
1989–90	[1]3.0
1990–91	[1]2.6
1991–92	18.3
1992–93	7.2
1993–94	11.1
1994–95	11.1
1995–96	11.0

[1] Figures for these years do not include expenditure by the Training Agency, Training Commission and Manpower Services Commission.

Current estimated spending for the Department for Education and Employment for 1996–97 is £18.9 million.

Principal expenditure items since the creation of the Department for Education and Employment in July 1995 have been publicity campaigns covering the school and college performance tables, the nursery education voucher scheme, modern apprenticeships, the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, career development loans and "Just the Job". A detailed breakdown of principal expenditure items by both of the former Departments prior to the merger, could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many places are available in England under the assisted places scheme in the current academic year; and how many have been taken up so far. [14085]

Mrs. Gillan: Some 37,800 assisted places are available in England in the current academic year, 1996–97. Final figures will be available when all participating schools' returns have been received and processed.

Mr. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to announce further allocations in England under the assisted places scheme for new entry for September 1997. [13923]

Mrs. Gillan: I shall shortly announce further details about the assisted places scheme.

Surplus Places

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the oral statement by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment of 28 January, Official Report, columns 191–92, concerning the reduction of the number of surplus places in maintained schools (a) what was the reduction in numbers over the last 10 years and (b) what is the arithmetical basis used to calculate future reductions. [14089]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on a comparable basis on the number of surplus places was collected for the first time in 1994. Between January 1994 and January 1996, there was a reduction of just under 201,000 in the number of surplus places in maintained schools. A reduction of about half in the level of surplus places over the past 10 years is derived from the comparison with estimated figures recorded in Audit Commission reports in the mid-1980s and early 1990s. We do not seek to calculate future reductions precisely. The annual surplus place return asks authorities to provide projections of future pupil numbers—four years hence in the case of primary, and seven years in the case of secondary—and to comment on expected changes, both additions and reductions, to the capacity of schools. On the basis of that broad indication of the likely future position, we consult authorities which will apparently continue to have high levels of surplus about the extent to which any of that surplus is in practice removable.

Jobseekers (Benefit Sanctions)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what benefit sanctions can be imposed on an unemployment claimant if he (a) does not apply for a part-time job of less than 24 hours per week if a jobseeker's direction is issued instructing him to make this type of application and (b) does not accept the offer of a part-time job of less than 24 hours per week from the Employment Service; which jobseeker's allowance regulations provide the basis for these sanctions; and if she will make a statement. [14243]

Mr. Forth: Section 19 of the Jobseekers Act 1995 provides that jobseekers are subject to a benefit sanction if they refuse or fail, without good cause, to carry out a reasonable jobseeker's direction. A direction must be given in writing by an employment officer with a view to assisting the jobseeker to find employment or improving his prospects of being employed. Regulation 69 of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996 provides that the sanction in these circumstances is loss of benefit for two weeks, or four weeks if a separate fixed-length sanction has already been imposed within the previous 12 months.

Section 19 of the Act also provides that jobseekers are subject to a benefit sanction of up to 26 weeks if they refuse, without good cause, to apply for or accept an employment opportunity notified to them by an employment officer. Regulation 72(5)(c) provides they have good cause for refusing jobs of less than 24 hours a week. A short fixed-length sanction can therefore be imposed for an unreasonable failure to act on a direction to apply for a particular job of less than 24 hours, but a further sanction of up to 26 weeks cannot be imposed for a refusal to accept the same job.

The guidance issued to Employment Service jobcentres stresses that staff should be particularly careful before giving a jobseeker's direction in respect of a job of less than 24 hours a week. Jobseekers should be directed to apply for such jobs only if this would improve their prospects of finding further work, or the job is sufficiently well paid to enable them to leave JSA altogether.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of children in England currently attending pupil referral units; and what is the average cost of such a place. [14149]

Mr. Forth: The latest information collected by the Department through the schools census shows that, as of January 1996, there were 11,055 pupils registered at pupil referral units. Of those, 4,183 were also registered at a mainstream school. We do not hold information centrally on the average cost of a place in a PRU.

Beijing Platform for Action

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress the Government have made in fulfilling their commitment to implement action 190(d) of the Beijing platform for action; and what future action the Government plan to take. [14222]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government report "One Year On", a copy of which has been placed in the Library, outlines Government action taken in the last year to implement the platform for action and plans for further implementation. No action on recommendation 190(d) has been taken to date. The Council of Europe fourth European ministerial conference on equality between women and men, to be held in November 1997, will consider the impact of different electoral systems on the representation of women in elected bodies in different countries; we await the outcome of that meeting.

National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library the evidence submitted by her Department to the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education since the papers submitted in July 1996. [14497]

Mr. Forth: A copy of the recent evidence submitted by the Department on the size and structure of higher education has today been placed in the Library.

Low Pay Scheme

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the low pay scheme was introduced in Southend-on-Sea; how many grants have been awarded; what is the total Government expenditure involved; and if he will provide details of the range of payments made under the scheme. [13509]

Mr. Roger Evans: Earnings top-up was introduced on October 8 1996 in eight pilot areas, including Southend. The three-year pilot has started successfully with more than 7,000 people receiving earnings top-up'—more than 350 of them in the Southend area. The pilot is expected to cost a total of £65 million over three years.

Two benefit rates—scheme A and scheme B—are being piloted to test how different amounts of earnings top-up influence the decision to take up and remain in work. Southend is a scneme A pilot area.

Information on the maximum possible awards in each scheme is set out in the table. The minimum award possible is 50 pence in all cases.

Maximum earnings top-up awards

	Single person under 25 £	Single person 25 and over £	Couple £
Scheme A
Working 16–29 hours per week	22.75	28.00	46.45
Working 30+ hours a week	33.05	38.30	56.75
Scheme B
Working 16–29 hours a week	22.75	28.00	56.05
Working 30+ hours a week	33.05	38.30	66.35

1. As at 31 January 1997.

2. Payments at the maxima quoted were in payment at 31 January 1997.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Offices

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many post offices there were in (a) Carmarthenshire, (b) Dyfed and (c) Wales in each year since 1979. [13090]

Mr. Page: I understand from the Post Office that, due to boundary changes in Wales and changes to administrative boundaries at Post Office Counters Ltd., data on the number of post offices in Carmarthenshire and Dyfed in each year since 1979 could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

The table given shows the number of post offices in Wales for each year from 1987 to 1993. Equivalent data for 1994 to 1996 are not available due to Post Office Counters' administrative boundary changes following a major reorganisation of its business structure. Post Office Counters' best estimate of the current total number of post offices in Wales is 1,700.

Year	Number of post offices in Wales
1987	2,134
1988	2,138
1989	2,104
1990	2,087
1991	2,057
1992	2,004
1993	1,986

Dr Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the number of sub-agency Crown status and franchised post offices in (a) each English region, (b) Wales and (c) Northern Ireland in each year since 1979; how many of each category of post office in each case were opened or closed since 1979; and how many have changed their status since 1979. [11001]

Mr. Page [holding answer 16 January 1997]: I understand from the Post Office that, due to reorganisation and changes in administrative regional boundaries at Post Office Counters Ltd., records are no longer available to provide the information for the full period requested. The information which Post Office Counters Ltd. have available is set out in tables, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House. Tables 1 to 10 show a breakdown of the national network of post offices as at the end of March for each year since 1987 between directly operated main post offices—Crown offices—other main post offices, which include franchise offices, and sub-post offices. The geographical apportionment of these figures is Post Office Counters' best estimate. Table 11 shows the net change in the number of offices in each of the three categories during the 1995–96 financial year. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's budgeted expenditure on (a) advertising, (b) publicity and (c) public information campaigns for January to March 1997; and what was the outturn expenditure on (a) to (c) for the same period for each of the last five years. [13306]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Privatised Companies

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will calculate the current market capitalisation value of each of the privatised companies supervised by a regulator, at 1996-97 prices. [14009]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Market capitalisation values for each of the privatised companies supervised by a regulator, and quoted on the stock exchange, are regularly published in the financial press, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Imperial Weights (EU Directives)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which European (a) directive and (b) proposed directive contains provisions relating to the offer for sale of goods whose weight is specified in pounds and ounces; and which directive or proposed directive applies the criminal law to such offer for sale. [14091]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Goods sold by weight, measure, length or square area are required under Directive 80/181, as amended, to use metric units as the primary indications of quantity, with the option to use imperial units as supplementary indications. Goods sold loose by the pound and the ounce may continue to use imperial units as the primary indication until 31 December 1999.

A number of other directives that harmonise national provisions concerning weighing instruments and the labelling of packaged goods give effect to the provisions of directive 80/181.

As regards proposals under discussion, the new price indications directive would—if adopted—require the price per unit (the "unit price") to be indicated by reference to either the kilo, litre, metre or square metre.

Neither the existing directives nor the proposed price indications directive include specific enforcement provisions. It is a matter for member states to introduce measures necessary to implement the directives, with appropriate disincentives for non-compliance.

Satellites

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the satellites (a) wholly and (b) partly owned by Her Majesty's Government since 1967, indicating their operator. [13251]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave on behalf of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs today. In addition, the satellites wholly owned and operated by Her Majesty's Government since 1967 are as follows:

Name	Operator
SKYNET 1A	MOD
SKYNET 1B	MOD
SKYNET 2A	MOD
SKYNET 2B	MOD
ARIEL 3	SERC
ARIEL 4	SERC
ARIEL 5	SERC
ARIEL 6	SERC
X-3 (PROSPERO)	RAe Farnborough
X-4 (MIRANDA)	RAe Farnborough
AMPTE-UKS	SERC
IRAS[1]	SERC[1]

MOD—Ministry of Defence.
SERC—Science and Engineering Research Council. SERC is no longer in existence, its space research responsibilities having passed to the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council and the Natural Environment Research Council.
RAe Farnborough—Royal Aerospace Establishment, Farnborough is now part of the Defence Evaluation Research Agency.
[1] Operated but not owned by SERC.
ARIEL 1 and ARIEL 2 were launched in 1962 and 1964 respectively, their missions coming to an end in 1976 and 1967 respectively.
There are no satellites partly owned by Her Majesty's Government.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. McAllion: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent discussions he has held with environmental groups relating to nuclear safety. [12508]

Mr. Page: None. A number of environmental groups, including Friends of the Earth and Greenpeace, set out their views on nuclear safety issues in evidence contributed to the 1994 nuclear review. The Government have consistently made clear their position that safety is the highest priority and that the UK's nuclear licensing and regulatory regime provides a rigorous and robust system for ensuring high standards of safety at UK nuclear facilities.

Exotic Animal Imports

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what requirements have to be satisfied by those intending to import into the United Kingdom exotic animals not listed in the convention on international trade in endangered species; [12579]

(2) if his Department requires prior notification of the numbers and destination of non-CITES-listed venomous snakes imported into the United Kingdom. [12624]

Mr. Nelson [holding answers 29 January 1997]: My Department does not require prior notification of, or impose requirements relating to, the import of venomous snakes or any other exotic animals. This is because, alongside the import restrictions applied to species covered by CITES, a range of other controls on the possession and treatment of animals within the United Kingdom apply regardless of whether the animals are bred here or imported. The main regulatory measures include the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976, for which the Department of the Environment is responsible, together with a network of health, welfare and anti-rabies rules enforced by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Home Office and HM Customs and Excise.

European Union (Investment)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the value of investment by countries outside the European Union in EU member states in each of the last 10 years; and in each case what percentage of that investment came to the United Kingdom. [13686]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The available information is given in the table.

Inflow of foreign direct investment by countries outside the European Union into EU member states 1984–1994

	EU(12)[1] £ million	Percentage invested in UK
1984	3,634	32
1985	3,365	11
1986	4,781	47
1987	9,155	43
1988	12,054	48
1989	18,817	56
1990	23,395	45
1991	14,680	27
1992	14,365	45
1993	15,562	40
1994	13,485	15

Eurostat estimate 1992–1994.

Since investment flows are volatile, it is more meaningful to look at investment flows over a number of years. Over the period as a whole, the UK attracted around 40 per cent. of investment into the EU. According to UK figures, investment from outside the EU more than tripled between 1994 and 1995.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what extra resources have been allocated to business links to ensure that they are able to maintain support currently provided by the Rural Development Commission to their small business clients in rural development areas. [13887]

Mr. Page [holding answer 31 January 1997]: None. Business links already provide support to all small and medium-sized enterprises in their areas—rural or urban. In addition, an element of the local competitiveness challenge has been earmarked for bids from rural development areas. Projects with a rural dimension have featured strongly at the outline bid stage of the challenge.

TREASURY

Employment Statistics

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many economically active people aged under 25 years whose highest qualification was a degree and who had been in full-time education in the previous year, broken down where possible by ethnic group, were unemployed in (a) 1992 and (b) at the latest available date; [6645]

(2) how many economically active people aged under 25 years who did not have a higher education qualification and who had been a full-time student or pupil the previous year, broken down where possible by ethnic group, were unemployed in (i) 1992 and (ii) at the latest available date; [6646]

(3) how many people aged 16 to 24 years with no higher education qualification who were in full-time education in the previous year sought a full-time job but accepted a part-time job in (i) 1992 and (ii) 1996, broken down where possible by ethnic group; [6648]

(4) how many people aged 16 to 24 years with no higher education qualification who were in full-time education in the previous year, sought a permanent job but accepted a temporary job in (i) 1992 and (ii) 1996, broken down where possible by ethnic group. [6649]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Judith Church, dated 4 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your four outstanding questions (6645, 6646, 6648 and 6649) on under 25 year olds.

These questions were originally tabled along with four others due for reply on 27 November last year. However, because the necessary variable concerning qualifications was not then available for spring 1996 your office said they would wait until the questions could be answered using spring 1996 rather than use spring 1995 figures. In the event it took longer than expected for the necessary variable to become available. I apologise for this delay.

The estimates for Great Britain available from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) are shown in the tables below. The LFS uses the International Labour Office (ILO) definition of unemployment. As in the case of any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to sampling variability. Figures below 10,000 are considered too small to provide reliable estimates and this is why the data on those ILO unemployed can only be broken down into white and non-white and why the figures on those accepting temporary or part-time jobs cannot be broken down at all by ethnic group.

Your questions about those unemployed according to qualification refer to those with degrees and those without a higher education qualification. To ensure that the two categories added up to the total, we have interpreted "without a higher qualification" to be all those without degrees for all the questions answered here. The definition of a higher qualification which we normally use for our analyses covers everything above 'A' level. If you would like further analyses based on this definition your researcher should contact Tim Thair (LFS Analysis at ONS) on 0171 533 6142. I understand he and your researcher discussed the questions answered previously.

National Savings

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he decided to require accounts for each product run by the National Savings agency; and what were the reasons for that decision. [13092]

Mrs. Angela Knight: National Savings has produced accounts for all the savings products for a number of years and has published a statement of business results in its annual report. However, currently the only statutory requirement is to produce accounts for the ordinary account and the investment account, and these are the only accounts which are audited and certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General. It has now been agreed by National Savings, the National Audit Office and the Treasury that the accounts for all products will be audited and certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General from 1996–97 onwards, and the National Audit Office is currently conducting a trial audit of the 1995–96 accounts.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year since 1990–91 (a) the original supply estimate, (b) any supplementary estimate and (c) the final outturn for the accounts of the Department of National Savings; and what were the reasons for the mid-year adjustments. [13091]

Mrs. Knight: The original Supply estimates, supplementary estimates and appropriation accounts for each year since 1990–91 for the Department of National Savings are detailed in the table. Reasons for the supplementary estimates are detailed in the notes to the table:

Year	Supply estimate net total	Supplementary estimate	Appropriation account net total
1990–91	174,169	[1] 1	173,224
1991–92	181,732	[2] 2,082	181,714
1992–93	195,066	[3] 2,611	196,960
1993–94	199,300	[4] 734	198,769
1994–95	199,057	0	196,701
1995–96	192,261	[5] 1,350	193,520
1996–97	179,793	[6] 1,942	—

[1] Token supplementary estimate to take provision for additional payments to certain holders on index-linked savings certificates, additional prizes to certain premium bond holders and compensation for the delay in making these payments arising from a new legal interpretation of the regulations under which the securities were administered (£1,000).

[2] Take-up of end year flexibility (EYF) to finance cost of introducing children's bonus bonds (£582,000) and increase in publicity budget for launch of CBB (£1,500,000).

[3] Transfer from Department of the Environment for buildings maintenance (£181,000). Take up of EYF to meet payments to Post Office for new products (£814,000), and to fund projects originally planned for 1991–92 and to help finance the costs of the new central mainframe (£1,616,000).

[4] Take-up of EYF to part fund introduction of pensioners guaranteed income bond (£579,000), and transfer from Property Holdings for building-specific maintenance (£155,000).

[5] Take-up of EYF to fund voluntary redundancy (£700,000) and delayed information system projects (£650,000).

[6] Take-up of EYF to help fund voluntary redundancy programme (£1,942,000).

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the stringency of the performance targets set for the National Savings agency relative to its performance in the year prior to executive agency status, with particular reference to the target for customer satisfaction; and if he will set out the method by which the targets were calculated. [13093]

Mrs. Knight: National savings targets were set to reflect the priorities for the agency for its first nine months of operation. The targets were announced to Parliament in my reply to a written parliamentary question from my hon. Friend the Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 1 July 1996 Official Report, column 284. In setting the targets, consideration was given to the performance of the agency in recent years, particularly to the need for various new measurement systems to be developed as a priority for the agency.

Prior to agency status, National Savings carried out a trial customer satisfaction survey in autumn 1995. The 85 per cent. target for 1996–97 was set against the context of that developmental work and to reflect rising customer expectations in the financial services sector.

Added Value

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest available figures for the added value per worker for (a) United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Germany, (d) the European Union and (e) Japan. [13444]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Hain, dated 4 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the added value per worker.

The figures requested are not available for the whole of the United Kingdom economy. This is because all the component variables necessary to produce gross value added per head data, is not collected by all of the relevant inquiries. Therefore, only partial data is available for the United Kingdom. The following 1994 data represents those sectors where the data can be calculated, and is the latest year available.

	Gross added value per head, £
Mining and quarrying	30,819
Manufacturing	28,969
Electricity, gas and water supply	79,511
Services	22,154
Catering	n/a
Retail	n/a
Wholesaling and dealing	n/a
Motor trades	n/a
Property	n/a

Gross value added per head data for France, Germany, Japan and European Union are not available due to disproportionate cost.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the net capital stock of manufacturing industry at 1990 replacement cost for each year since 1979. [14240]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alan Milburn, date 4 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the net capital stock of manufacturing industry at 1990 replacement cost for each year since 1979.

The figures are shown in the attached table.

Gross capital stock at current prices for the United Kingdom

Year	Billions of pounds
1979	182.1
1980	183.9
1981	183.1
1982	181.7
1983	180.1
1984	180.2
1985	181.9
1986	182.6
1987	184.0
1988	185.9
1989	189.2
1990	191.3
1991	191.3
1992	190.3
1993	188.9
1994	188.4
1995	188.6

Single Currency

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent steps he has taken in respect of the presentation of Government policy relating to the proposed introduction of the European single currency. [11137]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 27 January 1997]: I keep the House regularly informed of the Government's policy relating to the single currency. Most recently, I set out Government policy in my opening speech to the Europe debate of 11 December 1996, and my two statements to the House of 25 November and 3 December.

Unemployment (Financial Effects)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the savings to the Exchequer in each of the next five financial years which would result from unemployment being 100,000 lower during that period than assumed in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98"; and what proportion of the savings would reflect (a) higher tax revenue and (b) lower Government spending. [12769]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The effect of lower unemployment on public sector borrowing is extremely uncertain. For example, the effect on tax receipts in particular will depend on the extent to which lower unemployment reflects changes in the labour force and/or changes in the level of gross domestic product and, to the extent that it reflects higher GDP, the effect on tax receipts will vary according to the sectoral effects on incomes and expenditure. It is not possible, therefore, to give even approximate estimates of the type requested.

Within public expenditure, the largest direct impact of lower unemployment will be seen in social security spending. The Department of Social Security estimates that a 100,000 reduction in unemployment might reduce benefit expenditure by around £350 to £400 million per annum.

Spend to Save Programme Bids

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the bids for funding for the spend to save programme received by HM Treasury prior to the 1996 Budget which were not accepted for immediate implementation, from the (a) Inland Revenue, (b) Customs, (c) Department of Social Security, (d) Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (e) Home Office, (f) Department of Transport, (g) Legal Aid Board and (h) Northern Ireland Office, with in each case the projected spending and saving numbers involved in each of these rejected bids; and if he will make a statement. [13259]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 January 1997]: It is not the Government's practice to provide information in relation to internal discussion and advice, including rejected policy options.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what considerations led him to propose using the contingency reserve to finance a replacement for the royal yacht. [13696]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The Government believe the benefits of a new royal yacht will accrue to the nation as a whole. There is no defence requirement for a replacement yacht, although it will be crewed by the Royal Navy. No other Department's budget is suitable to fund the yacht. As the cost of the yacht is additional to existing expenditure plans, the Government concluded it was appropriate to finance it from the reserve.

TRANSPORT

Rail Routeing Guide

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct the Rail Regulator to ensure that an accurate and up to date routeing guide is published and made available (a) for public inspection at each staffed railway station and (b) to each public library authority. [14092]

Mr. Watts: The routeing guide was introduced on 29 September 1996 for an introductory period until 31 May 1997. It has been made available to station staff, and passengers have a right to obtain details of the routes permitted for their journey.

A revised guide will be issued by the Association of Train Operating Companies at the end of the introductory period and will take account any comments received. At that stage, consideration will be given to how information can be made available to passengers in a readily accessible form.

A copy of the current routeing guide has been placed on the public register of the Rail Regulator and can be inspected at the Office of the Rail Regulator's library.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his Department's current policy regarding the employment of agency or self-employed labour on the construction of the Jubilee line extension; and what is his estimate of the impact of this policy on the in-service date. [13918]

Mr. Bowis: The employment of labour for the construction of the Jubilee line extension is the responsibility of London Underground Limited's contractors, who are required to employ the necessary work force to complete the job by the target date.

Buses

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 29 October 1996, Official Report, column 102, on European Commission proposals for a directive on the standards of buses, what proposals his Department has made that the directive should make provision for the construction of new open-platform buses. [13920]

Mr. Bowis: I have been concerned that the current generation of Routemaster buses should be protected and that European directives do not rule out the possibility of similar buses being built and operated in the future.

No specific proposals for the provision of the construction of new open-platform buses have been suggested by my Department. When the Commission's proposals are published, we shall study them to see what the implications will be for the future construction of open-platform buses.

Fifth Freedom Cargo Charters

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what grounds his Department upheld an objection by Air Atlantic to a flight by a British cargo airline, for the transport of film equipment from Luton to Rhodes on 22 January; what assessment he has made of the economic impact of this decision; and if he will make a statement. [13764]

Mr. Bowis: The objection by Air Atlantic, a British carrier, to a fifth freedom flight by a foreign carrier, Air Sofia, was upheld on the basis that Air Atlantic had available suitable aircraft to undertake the flight in question. This is in accordance with the Department of Transport's procedures, which have been widely circulated to the airline industry, for considering applications for fifth freedom cargo charters. No specific assessment of the effect of this decision has been made.

British carriers cannot object to cargo flights by other British carriers. In this case, I understand that another British carrier was simply acting as the sales agent of the foreign carrier concerned.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what grounds his Department upheld an objection by Air Atlantic to an Air Sofia flight from East Midlands airport to Madrid carrying automotive parts on 23 to 24 January; what factors led to the subsequent cancellation of the flight; what assessment he has made of the economic impact of this decision; and if he will make a statement. [13765]

Mr. Bowis: The objection by Air Atlantic, a British carrier, was upheld on the basis that it had suitable aircraft available to undertake the flight in question. Because Air Sofia's application was made less than five working days before the flight in question, my Department's normal requirement that a UK carrier match the price offered by the foreign carrier did not apply. This is in accordance with my Department's procedures, which have been widely circulated to the airline industry, for considering applications for fifth freedom cargo charters. No specific assessment of the effect of this decision has been made.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to prevent abuses of the fifth freedom policy. [13766]

Mr. Bowis: My Department has established clear procedures for handling applications for both passenger and cargo charter flights operated on a "fifth freedom" basis, and these have been widely disseminated within the UK and to foreign carriers and their representatives. My officials will investigate any cases where it is alleged that these procedures are being abused.

Commercial Pilots

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what medical requirements have to be met before a person is licensed to fly a commercial aeroplane; how often that person is required to be examined; and what details of their medical history are referred to in the licence. [13776]

Mr. Bowis: The medical requirements that have to be met before a person can be licensed to fly a commercial aeroplane are set by the International Civil Aviation Authority and contained in annex 1 to the Chicago convention on international civil aviation. Medical examinations are carried out by authorised medical examiners, who receive guidance on the interpretation of those requirements from the medical division of the Civil Aviation Authority.

The initial medical for commercial pilots will include a full physical examination together with a chest x-ray, electrocardiograph, and hearing and vision tests. After this, medical examinations are carried out annually until the pilot reaches the age of 40 and every six months thereafter. Medical information is not referred to on licences.

Freight Handling, Ostend Airport

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what actions he has taken to prevent under EU competition law the subsidy granted by the Belgian Government for new freight handling facilities at Ostend airport. [13763]

Mr. Bowis: Enforcement of the state aid rules in the treaty of Rome is a matter for the European Commission. We are not aware that the European Commission has been notified of any plans by the Belgian authorities to grant subsidy for freight loading facilities at Ostend airport. If my hon. Friend would let us have further information we shall investigate.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the role of the Birmingham northern relief road in the Government's plans for transport in the west midlands. [14217]

Mr. Watts: No statement would be appropriate in advance of the decision following the public inquiry.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evaluation he has made of the problem of traffic congestion at the junction of the A446 and the M42 and the contribution which the Birmingham northern relief road will make towards resolving it. [14220]

Mr. Watts: The Highways Agency is considering present and likely future conditions at the A446-M42 junction, having regard to developments in that locality.

The contribution which BNRR might make was discussed in detail at the BNRR public inquiry. The inspector's report is awaited, and further comment would be inappropriate in advance of the decision following the inquiry.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he expects to publish the report of the public inquiry into the Birmingham northern relief road; [14218]

(2) if the report of the inspector who conducted the public inquiry into the Birmingham northern relief road has been (a) completed, (b) sent to his Department and (c) considered by the Minister; and on what dates. [14219]

Mr. Watts: The inspector's report has not yet been submitted to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport. The report will be published when the decision on the scheme is announced in the light of consideration of the inspector's conclusions and recommendations following the public inquiry.

Coastguard (Staff)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the effect of fears of job insecurity on the level of performance of employees of Her Majesty's Coastguard; [13431]

(2) if he will make a statement on current levels of job insecurity in Her Majesty's Coastguard service. [13432]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 3 February 1997]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 4 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about job insecurity in the Coastguard Agency.

The Chief Coastguard has given assurances to staff and the Trade Unions that the Agency has no plans for compulsory redundancies. The performance of employees is continually assessed and there are no indications at present that concerns about job insecurity are having a significant effect on the performance of staff.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people are currently employed by the Coastguard agency; how many were employed in 1992; and what projections he has made of the number who will be employed in 2001. [13435]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The number of people employed by the Coastguard agency at the end of 1996 was 666. The number of people employed in 1992 was 522. The agency is developing a strategy for using the benefits of new communication technology to meet its requirements into the 21st century. The strategy is under development, and there are currently no projections for the number of staff the agency will employ in 2001.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the reported levels of stress incurred by those employed by Her Majesty's Coastguard; and what measures he has put in place to reduce them; [13430]

(2) on what date the most recent assessment was made of levels of stress incurred by employees of the Coastguard agency; [13433]

(3) what surveys he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into levels of stress incurred by employees of the Coastguard agency; and if he will place copies of them in the Library. [13434]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 3 February 1997]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 4 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about levels of stress in the Coastguard Agency.

The Agency takes the issue of stress in the workplace very seriously and has initiated a series of stress management workshops aimed at recognising and dealing with stress. We also provide post incident traumatic stress counselling to all staff as required. We have not yet conducted a survey into the level of stress incurred by staff. We have, however, recent commissioned a thorough study of sick absence amongst staff, which is currently being evaluated. Initial conclusions from the study suggest that the levels of sickness and absenteeism in the Agency, including stress-related illness, are below those for the civil service as a whole and compare favourably with other emergency organisations.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms in the United Kingdom (a) have been and (b) have not been affected by BSE; and how many farms in each category have used the product Phosmet on their farms. [12288]

Mrs. Browning: The number of farms in the United Kingdom which have had a BSE confirmed case was 35,047 as at 17 January 1997.

It is not possible to provide the information in part (b) in the form requested as the number of farms is not static.

Information on use of Phosmet is not centrally available. However, epidemiological studies carried out at the beginning of the BSE epidemic have shown clearly that there is no correlation between the use of agricultural chemicals and the incidence of BSE.

Certified Herds Scheme

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Government will present their detailed documentation to the European Commission proposing a United Kingdom certified herds scheme; and what is the estimated timetable for the discussion of these proposals. [12828]

Mr. Baldry: We will shortly submit our proposals for a certified herds scheme, which will be the basis of the first step towards the phased lifting of the export ban; we will press the Commission to give them urgent consideration so that we can begin exports of meat and meat products from these herds as soon as possible.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that the value of hill livestock compensatory allowance is maintained in real terms; and if he will make a statement. [13922]

Mr. Boswell: Decisions on the rates of hill livestock compensatory allowances are taken each year in the light of the autumn review of economic conditions in the hills and uplands. The review, which involves the farming unions, takes account of a wide range of economic data, including changes in the value of HLCA payments in real terms.

Stilboesterol

Ms Corston: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the use of stilboesterol in the dairy industry; and if he will indicate when it was (a) introduced in the United Kingdom and (b) discontinued; and if he will make a statement. [14277]

Mrs. Browning: Stilboesterol was used from the 1960s until its prohibition in bovine and other animals on 31 May 1982 by the Medicines (Stilbenes and Thyrostatic Substances) Regulations 1982. From the Ministry's on-going statutory residues surveillance programme, there is no evidence that stilboesterol or any other growth promoting hormones are being used in Great Britain. The results of this surveillance are published in the Veterinary Medicine Directorate's annual report on surveillance for veterinary residues and updated quarterly in its Medicines Act Veterinary Information Service—MAVIS—newsletter.

Food Safety

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which (a) committees and (b) other bodies his Department consults regularly on food safety policies; and how many of these represent scientific interests. [13313]

Mrs. Browning: The main committees which provide advice on food safety issues are: the Food Advisory Committee; the Advisory Committee on Microbiological Safety of Food; the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes; the Advisory Committee on Pesticides; the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy; the Committees on Toxicity, Carcinogenicity, and Mutagenicity; the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee; and the Veterinary Products Committee. The Food Advisory Committee has a widely based membership including some scientific experts, although it mostly relies on other specialist committees for advice on scientific matters. In the case of the other committees most of the members have scientific expertise.

Views from many other bodies with scientific interests are sought during the extensive consultation which takes place when policies are being formulated.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many improvement notices were served on establishments subject to food safety enforcement law in (a) 1992 and (b) 1995. [14247]

Mrs. Browning: In non-metropolitan English districts 22,414 food premise were issued with improvement notices in 1992 and 2,314 in 1995. For all English authorities, 34,474 food businesses were issued with improvement notices in 1992 and 4,541 in 1995.

Wildlife (Arable Areas)

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take further action to encourage wildlife in arable areas. [14410]

Mr. Boswell: We intend to introduce a pilot incentive scheme to promote techniques of arable farming which might benefit wildlife across England.

The objectives of the scheme will be to test the practicability of specific management measures and the extent to which they bring benefits for biodiversity, including farmland birds.

We have listened carefully to advice from the National Agri-environment Forum, which we created last year. We are grateful for detailed proposals made by the Game Conservancy Trust, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, and English Nature, which have been welcomed by a working group of the forum. Next month the Ministry will consult forum members on arrangements for the pilot scheme, which will take these proposals fully into account.

The pilot scheme will be managed as a separate element of the countryside stewardship scheme, with farmers being offered five-year agreements to manage arable fields according to specific requirements. It will apply in one or more pilot areas of England. We intend to open the scheme to applications in spring 1998.

Beef Stocks

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will use part of the additional £52 million at his disposal for support of the beef and veal sector to compensate holders of beef stocks made worthless by the ban on over-30-months beef. [13683]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The Government have already provided a substantial package of assistance to help UK holders of beef stocks affected by the BSE crisis. Under the beef stocks transfer scheme, introduced in May 1996, the Government offered to purchase stocks of beef held by slaughterhouses and cutting plants, for which there was no market demand, at 65 per cent. of the pre-crisis market price. In the interests of public health and market confidence, arrangements were also made to dispose of unsaleable stocks of beef and beef products outside the slaughtering sector at public expense. The total estimated expenditure under these two schemes is about £70 million. We have no plans to allocate new funds to these activities.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider compensating exporters for the stocks of beef which they have been unable to sell as a result of the export ban. [13684]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The Government sympathise with the exporters whose businesses have suffered since the BSE crisis. Some beef exporters, as cutting plants, have benefited from the beef stocks transfer scheme applying to the slaughtering sector. But our support has been targeted at the essential links in the beef supply chain, not to compensate for BSE-related losses. The High Court upheld our decision to exclude other exporters from eligibility for support under the scheme. We do not intend to bring such exporters within its scope.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency (Logo)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been spent by the Child Support Agency in changing its logo, separately identifying the costs of (a) new stationery, (b) signage and (c) designing the new logo; what agencies were involved in this work; when the decision was taken to change the logo; and what involvement Ministers had in this decision. [10966]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Brian Donohoe, dated 3 February 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency logo.

The basic answer to your question is that costs will be reduced as a result of this change.

The new Child Support Agency corporate identity was introduced following approval by the Agency Board in July 1996. The decision fell within the Agency's authority given that we met Departmental standards of procurement and compliance with DSS corporate identity restrictions but Ministers were made aware of the change in the course of normal discussions on operational issues.

The new logo has been in use since 4 November 1996 but changes to our stationery will only be made as existing stocks fall to be reprinted. There have therefore been no additional stationery costs. Indeed, as the new logo (unlike the old one) only uses two standard colours, can easily be altered in size and copies and faxes very well, there will be substantial savings from its use, costed at a minimum of £60,000 per annum.

The work to develop the new corporate identity was undertaken by the Agency in conjunction with the Central Office of Information. The cost was £2,427, and was met from within this year's existing publicity budget.

As far as external signage goes, the costs have been met from this year's existing printing budget. The contract has been let under Departmental call-off contract arrangements and we have opted for the most economical solution of merely modifying the existing signage with an overlay rather than a full replacement. In due course, over 500 signs will be modified in this way, at a maximum cost of £40,000.

Independent Tribunal Service

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the report of the review of the organisation and management of the independent tribunal service, referred to in paragraph 3.16 of the consultation paper on decision making and appeals, Cm 3328, and the report of the independent tribunal service issued on 20 September 1996. [11090]

Mr. Roger Evans [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1997, columns 769–70]: The results of the review of the organisation and management of the independent tribunal service were summarised in the consultation paper Cm 3328. We do not intend to publish the report as a whole.

I have been advised that "The Report of the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS) 1996" has been widely distributed and that copies are available on request from ITS offices.

Invalidity and Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of invalidity benefit claimants who were disallowed following a medical examination appealed against the disallowance in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94 and (c) 1994–95. [13047]

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the format requested as details of the specific reason for an invalidity benefit appeal are not routinely recorded, except for the 1994–95 year.

Such information as is available is in the table.

Period	Number of invalidity benefit terminations following medical examinations[1]	Number of invalidity benefit appeals registered[2]
April 1992 to March 1993	[3]18,000	12,000
April 1993 to March 1994	[3]36,000	21,000
April 1994 to March 1995	28,000	21,000

[1] Figures for invalidity benefit terminations are taken from a 1 per cent. sample of all claims to benefit in Great Britain. Figures exclude terminations because of final medical certificates, deaths, awards of retirement pension or other benefits.

[2] Includes appeals other than those against disallowance of benefit following medical examination.

[3] Figures include some cases where the reason for termination was not recorded.

1. Figures rounded to nearest 1,000.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of incapacity benefit claimants who have failed the all work test have appealed against the subsequent disallowance. [13046]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Period	Number of incapacity benefit claimants who failed the all work test	Number of appeals against disallowance	Proportion of claimants who appeal
April 1995 to November 1996	230,100	100,100	44 per cent.

1. Sources Benefits Agency and independent tribunal service.

2. Figures include incapacity benefit claimants, national insurance credit only claimants and some severe disablement allowance claimants.

3. Figures are rounded to nearest 100 and are subject to revision.

Benefits Fraud Hotline

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to monitor calls to the fraud hotline. [13052]

Mr. Heald: Calls to the national benefit fraud hotline are monitored on a daily basis to identify emerging trends.

Departmental Costs

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of his Department's costs for each (i) outsourcing and (ii) private finance project within his Department. [13307]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Golf Links Estate (Fire Compensation)

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what help is available from the social fund to people on income support who have suffered loss and damage as a result of the recent fire on the Golf Links estate, Southall; and if he will make a statement. [14380]

Mr. Roger Evans: Disaster relief following any such crisis is essentially a matter for the relevant local authority. However, through the social fund, crisis loans can be made available to help those in such unfortunate circumstances and community care grants are also available to help those who find themselves under exceptional pressure. Applications to the social fund are dealt with, as speedily as possible, by specially trained social fund officers who look carefully at the individual circumstances surrounding each application and use discretion and flexibility when forming their decisions.

On January 18, Ealing district reported that a total of 79 community care grant awards had been made to people most affected by the fire, at a total cost of £56,819. I have therefore agreed to a request for an additional allocation of £50,000 to reimburse Ealing's community care grant budget.

Classroom Assistants

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if classroom assistants employed in schools during the term times only are eligible for unemployment benefit when schools close. [13861]

Mr. Roger Evans: Jobseeker's allowance replaced unemployment benefit as the main benefit for the unemployed as from 7 October 1996.

Jobseeker's allowance is not payable to people who work for, on average, 16 hours a week or more—24 hours or more in the case of partners of people receiving income-based jobseeker's allowance. For people whose working pattern is such that, either they do not work every week or they work a different number of hours each week, the average hours worked are normally calculated with reference to their usual pattern of work.

For school ancillary workers, such as classroom assistants, who have continuing contracts of employment, school holidays, when the person does no work, are not included in the average calculation. The effect of excluding school holidays from the averaging calculation normally means that school ancillary workers are working for more than 16 hours a week on average and therefore not entitled to jobseeker's allowance. They can, however, claim family credit, subject to their satisfying the normal conditions for entitlement.

School ancillary workers whose employment terminates at the end of each term and who therefore become unemployed are not affected by the averaging rules. Eligibility to jobseeker's allowance in these circumstances will depend on their satisfying the normal conditions of entitlement, for example available for and actively seeking work.

Benefits in Kind

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what margin of error is applied to in his Department's calculation of the revenue effects of extending employer national insurance contributions to all taxable benefits in kind. [13333]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The current estimate of £250 million is based on the Inland Revenue's 1994–95 expenses and benefits survey. Owing to the complex methodology employed in producing the survey data, a robust calculation of the margin of error could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Eye Tests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the numbers of people aged over 60 years who are deterred from having eye tests as a result of the charges imposed. [13707]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is no evidence that people aged over 60 years are deterred by charges from seeking sight tests. The Government believe that people who can afford to do so should pay for their own sight tests and that help with optical costs should be based on ability to pay rather than age. Many people of 60 and over fall within the groups who are eligible for free NHS sight tests or for help with private tests through the NHS low income scheme.

NHS Auditing

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much (a) health authorities and (b) trusts have spent on auditors' remuneration in each year since 1992 in Scotland. [14295]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is detailed in the table. It is not, however, possible to identify expenditure split between health boards and trusts prior to 1995–96, therefore the figure given for each year is the audit remuneration for both health boards and trusts. In 1995–96 the Accounts Commission took over responsibility for the audit of the NHS in Scotland.

Year	Audit remuneration £000
1992–93	1,070
1993–94	1,314
1994–95	1,828
1995–96	2,968

Executive Pay (Water and Sewerage Authorities)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much remuneration has been paid to the directors and executives of the three water and sewerage authorities since their formation on 1 April 1996. [14296]

Mr. Kynoch: Remuneration for the period 1 April 1996 to 31 December 1996 of the chief executives of the three water authorities and their teams of directors has been estimated by the authorities as follows:

North of Scotland	278,942
East of Scotland	333,450
West of Scotland	447,557

Management Allowances (GP Fundholders)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary for Scotland how much has been allocated to GP fundholders in management allowances in each year since the start of the scheme. [14297]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

1990–91: £25,000

1991–92: £252,000

1992–93: £1,554,000

1993–94: £3,114,000

1994–95: £4,333,000

1995–96: £4,756,000'

' Provisional'.

NHS Trust Remuneration

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated remuneration to be paid to NHS trust chairs and non-executive directors in Scotland for 1996–97. [14299]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is estimated that the maximum sum payable to the chairmen and non-executive directors of the 47 NHS trusts in Scotland during 1996–97 will be £1,083,975; of this, £848,975 is payable to chairmen and £235,000 to non-executive directors.

A more precise figure cannot be given since vacancies which have arisen during the current year will reduce the total payable. Additionally, a number of individuals decline any remuneration for these public appointments.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new patients seeking out-patient consultations in 1996 involved a wait longer than nine weeks; and what proportion of the total number of referrals these patients represent. [11952]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The number of new outpatient referrals in the year to 31 December 1996 where the patient waited more than 9 weeks was 325,689 out of a total number of 1,199,027. This represents 27.2 per cent. of the total number of referrals. These figures are provisional.

Council Duties

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the extra duties given to councils in 1996–97 and 1997–98. [12762]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Councils in Scotland have, since 1 April 1996, taken on the following statutory duties in policy areas for which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland is responsible:

Duty to bill and collect water and sewerage charges from domestic customers on behalf of the new water authorities;

Duty to appoint a chief social work officer;

Duty to assess carers' needs;

Duty to take air quality into account before making traffic orders;

Duty to prepare a plan to achieve significant improvements in energy efficiency in residential accommodation;

Duty to consult other planning authorities about planning applications for certain retail developments;

Duty to notify the Secretary of State about planning applications for certain retail developments;

Duty to consult community councils, water and sewerage authorities, and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency about certain planning applications;

Duty to review and update old mineral planning permissions within a statutory timetable;

Duties relating to the compulsory competitive tendering of council contracts, including provision for the progressive re-introduction from 1 April 1997 and 1 July 1997 of compulsory competitive tendering for construction and maintenance services under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and services under the Local Government Act 1988;

Enforcement of additional rules on the use, production, storage and handling of mammalian meat relating to the Government's policy to eliminate bovine spongiform encephalopathy from the food chain; and

North Ayrshire, Fife, North Lanarkshire, South Lanarkshire and West Lothian councils have also taken on responsibility for various functions formerly exercised by new town development corporations within their areas.

In addition, the responsibility for the organisation of polling districts has transferred to the councils from parliamentary returning officers.

The Children (Scotland) Act 1995 will impose new duties on councils in relation to children's welfare from 1 April 1997.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional financial resources he has allocated to councils to meet changes in their obligations in 1996–97 and 1997–98. [12763]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The amounts included in the 1996–97 and 1997–98 local government finance settlements in respect of new financial burdens on local authorities are as follows:

1996–97: £178.354 million

1997–98: £61.177 million

In both cases, the figures are net of the minimum level of savings which the Government assume will be achieved from local government reorganisation.

Woodlands

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he proposes to take to promote the development of natural woodlands. [12584]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The protection and enhancement of our ancient and semi-natural woodlands is a key aim of our forestry policy. We are committed to the steady expansion of tree cover, using native species and natural regeneration where appropriate, with the support of the woodland grant scheme and the farm woodland premium scheme. We have also recently introduced woodland improvement grants and challenge funds for forestry projects to help further achieve these aims and significant funds have been provided by the Millennium Commission for a range of native woodland projects through the country. In addition, schemes in the Government's agri-environment programme such as the environmentally sensitive area scheme and the countryside stewardship and proposed countryside premium schemes, provide payments to farmers to manage native woodlands and for planting of native species.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Arts Forum

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if she will publish a list of members of the Arts Forum; [12319]

(2) with what frequency she intends her Arts Forum to meet; and what is its remit. [12320]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Following the publication in July of my Department's policy document "Setting the Scene: The Arts and Young People", I announced on 14 October 1996 the establishment of a new Arts Forum, to be a joint forum with the Royal Society for the encouragement of the Arts, Manufactures and Commerce. It is intended that the forum should meet roughly four times per year. Membership if the forum is not fixed, and varies according to the subject under discussion. The first meeting of the forum, on 7 November 1996, considered its terms of reference and adopted the following:

"The terms of reference for the forum will be:

to highlight issues which impact on the future of the arts, to stimulate and broaden the debate;

to suggest strategies which can best sustain the arts economy;

to advise on and help the process of government policy making;

in particular to consider, advise on and where appropriate assist with implementation of the recommendations arising from the Department of National Heritage's policy document "Setting the Scene"; to bring together and make connections between organisations and individuals involved in the arts, and other sectors with an interest in them."

National Lottery

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to reply to the letter dated 6 August 1996 from the hon. Member for Western Isles regarding Government policy on lottery funding. [12186]

Mr. Sproat: I apologise that, due to an administrative error, the hon. Member has not received a reply to his letter. A reply has been sent to the hon. Member today answering his points in full.

Sports Council

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the restructuring of the Sports Council. [14381]

Mr. Sproat: Further to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 18 December 1996 Official Report, column 590, I am pleased to inform the House that the United Kingdom Sports Council and the English Sports Council became fully operational as independent bodies from 1 January 1997.

On 31 December 1996, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage issued directions to the United Kingdom Sports Council and to the English Sports Council requiring them to accept responsibility for the assets, liabilities and undertaking of the Great Britain Sports Council. At a joint meeting on 6 January 1997 of the Great Britain Sports Council, the United Kingdom Sports Council and the English Sports Council, and at separate meetings of the UK and the English Sports Councils held on the same day, formal agreement was made to the aforesaid transfer.

The United Kingdom Sports Council

The United Kingdom Sports Council is responsible for fostering, supporting, and encouraging the development of sport and physical recreation and the achievement of excellence and the provision of sporting facilities at a UK level. The focus of the United Kingdom Sports Council will reflect the policies "Sport: Raising the Game". It will take a lead among the sports councils in all aspects of sport and physical recreation that require strategic planning, administration, co-ordination or representation for the benefit of the UK as a whole. Within the objects and powers provided by its royal charter, the UK Sports Council's functions are:

To identify sporting policies that should have a UK-wide application; to identify areas of unnecessary duplication, overlap and waste in the way sport is administered in the UK; to consider with the Sports Councils of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland how grant programmes for sports bodies with a UK or Great Britain remit could best be administered, and to administer those programmes; to oversee policy on sports science, sports medicine, drug control, and coaching and other areas where there may be a need for the home country sports councils to deliver a consistent UK-wide policy; to co-ordinate policy for bringing major international sporting events to the UK; and to represent the UK internationally and to increase the influence of the UK at international level.

The members of the United Kingdom Sports Council are:

Lord MacLaurin of Knebworth, DL, Chairman (Chairman of Tesco plc, Chairman of the Test and County Cricket board)

Sir Rodney Walker (Chairman of the English Sports Council, Chairman of the Rugby Football League)

Mr. Graeme Simmers, OBE, CA (Chairman of the Scottish Sports Council, former Chairman of the Scottish Highlands Hotels Group)

Mr. Ossie Wheatley, CBE (Chairman of the Sports Council for Wales, former Chairman of Glamorgan County Cricket Club)

Mr. Don Allen (Chairman of the Sports Council for Northern Ireland, former Irish League footballer).

Dr. Mary Nevill Lecturer in Sports Science, Loughborough University, former world-class hockey player and international coach)

Mr. Craig Reedie (Chairman of the British Olympic Association, International Olympic Committee member)

Prof. Sarah Springman (Professor of Geotechnical Engineering, former world-class triathlete)

There are, at present, two vacancies on the council, following the resignations of Mr. Rob Andrew and Mr. Clive Lloyd due to pressures of business. Candidates have been considered in line with the procedures recommended by the Commissioner for Public Appointments. Completion of the consultation with the Chairman of the UK Sports Council and the home country Secretaries of State is nearing completion and an announcement will be made shortly about who the new appointments will be.

The English Sports Council

The English Sports Council has similar responsibilities to those of the Sports Councils in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. It is responsible for fostering, supporting and encouraging the development of sport and physical recreation among the public at large, and the achievement of excellence in England, and for the provision of facilities. It will take a lead in all aspects of sport and physical recreation that require administration, co-ordination or representation from the public sector in England.

The focus of the English Sports Council will reflect the policies in "Sport: Raising the Game", concentrating on support to the governing bodies of sport, in-so-far as they are concerned with the administration and development of sport in England; help the grassroots of sport; services in support of sporting excellence in England; and the national lottery. Within the objects and powers provided by its royal charter, the English Sports Council will aim:

> To provide opportunities for all young people to become involved in sport and physical recreation and to realise their full potential, particularly through sport in schools; to ensure that a framework exists to help those with talent, commitment and interest to realise their performance potential within their chosen sports; to advise and support the effective planning, design and management of facilities and services where they are of direct relevance to sport for young people and the development of excellence; and—to raise the expertise of people who encourage sports participation and improve sporting performance.

The English Sports Council also becomes responsible from 1 January 1997 for the distribution in England of lottery proceeds for expenditure on or connected with sport.

The members of the English Sports Council are:

Sir Rodney Walker, Chairman (Chairman of the English Sports Council, Chairman of the Rugby Football League)

Mr. Trevor Brooking, MBE, Vice-Chairman (Football broadcaster, former professional footballer)

Mr. Gerald Dennis, Vice-Chairman (Part-time Chairman of Alexandra Workwear and Domino Printing Sciences)

Mr. Peter Blake (Headmaster of Windsor boys' school, school rugby and cricket coach)

Mr. Chris Boardman, MBE (World class professional cyclist)

Ms Julia Bracewell (Former international fencer, qualified referee and barrister)

Mr. Tim Marshall, MBE (Senior Lecturer in Public Health and Epidemiology, Birmingham University, involved with wheelchair roadracing)

Mr. Keith Oates (Deputy Chairman of Marks and Spencer plc)

Mr. Jeff Probyn (England international Rugby Union footballer)

Mr. Geoff Thompson, MBE (Chairman of the Youth Charter for Sport, former world-class karate player)

Mrs. Phyllis Avery (President of the South Region Netball Association, netball coach, umpire and former England selector and trialist)

Mr. Jim Munn, MBE (former Director of Recreation and Community Services, Birmingham city council)

Mr. David Oxley, OBE (former Chief Executive of the Rugby Football League and teacher)

Mr. Sam Stoker (Principal St. Cuthbert's Society and Schools/Access Liaison Officer for the University of Durham)

There is, at present, one vacancy on the council, following the resignation of Mr. Ian Botham due to pressure of business. Replacement names are being considered in line with the procedures recommended by the Commissioner for Public Appointments. An announcement will be made soon about who the new appointment is to be.

The Great Britain Sports Council

The Great Britain Sports Council will continue to exist as a body corporate under the terms of its 1972 royal charter for the immediate future. This will enable the council to handle any residual matters arising.

The former membership of the Great Britain Sports Council is continuing for the interim. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, in consultation with the chairman and members of the Sports Council, will wish to review in due course the practicality of this arrangement.

History Museum

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what response she has given to the proposal for an official museum of British history. [12463]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The proposal to establish a museum of British history, which is the subject of an application to the Millennium Commission, does not require the approval of the Department of National Heritage. This is an interesting proposal, and I am sure that the Millennium Commission will give the application careful consideration.

World Cup 2006

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the latest meeting between the Football Association and the Minister of State in connection with the Football Association's bid to host the World cup in 2006. [14622]

Mr. Sproat: I met the FA yesterday afternoon to discuss concerns about their World Cup bid.

The FA explained that they had made the formal decision to go ahead with a World cup bid after the success of Euro 96, and publicly announced the bid on 1 July last year. Since July, there have been several occasions on which the FA's bid had been publicly referred to in the presence of both UEFA officials and the German FA. These included a dinner held to mark the retirement of Sir Bert Millichip at the London Hilton on 19 September and a UEFA dinner held to congratulate England on the success of Euro 96 in Geneva on 12 November.

On 30 October FA officials visited the headquarters of FIFA, the world football governing body, in Zurich and were briefed about the World cup bidding process. I understand that this meeting followed a letter from the FA's chief executive, Graham Kelly, to both the president of FIFA, Dr. Havelange, and the general secretary, Sepp Blatter, on 10 September confirming that the FA had decided to bid. At this stage, countries interested in bidding for the World cup can only make their intentions known publicly. The formal submission of bids does not take place until 1999, and the decision is made in 2000. Apart from England and Germany, other possible contenders are Brazil, Argentina, South Africa, Morocco, Egypt, Peru and Ecuador.

The FA explained that a fax had arrived at the FA's headquarters on 31 January from the general secretary of UEFA, Gerhard Ainger, which said that that week's meeting of the UEFA committee had "recalled that it had already committed itself to supporting the candidature of the Football Association of Germany as organiser of the World Cup of 2006".

This recollection apparently referred to discussions that had been held several years previously. I understand that this was the first time that any such endorsement of the German bid had been communicated to the FA. Since receiving this information, the FA has asked UEFA for the minutes of the meeting or meetings at which this issue was discussed and an indication of how the decision taken was communicated to the member associations within UEFA.

To date, I understand that no records of the decisions have been forthcoming from UEFA and UEFA officials are now reported to have acknowledged that no such records exist. Its media director is quoted in today's newspapers as saying that "UEFA's official support for Germany is not recorded in any minutes".

In these circumstances, the FA has drawn the obvious conclusion that any discussions that took place could not have been of any great significanceor they would have been formally minuted and notified to the member associations.

The FA believes that UEFA has a responsibility to all member associations and should consider carefully the merits of any case presented by any one of them to stage the World cup. It also sees a clear need for an open and democratic assessment of all bids so that football secures the best venue possible to stage the World cup. I understand that the FA will be meeting UEFA shortly, and will be seeking clarification of UEFA's intentions.

From the information presented to us, we find it difficult to understand UEFA's position. FIFA makes the decision on where the tournament will be held, and has indicated that it will not be influenced by UEFA's decision.

I have written today to my opposite number in Germany to express my hope that our bids can be conducted in a spirit of friendly rivalry. I have also sought to ascertain whether or not he understood that a decision had already been made by UEFA to back the German bid.

The Government strongly support the FA. We believe that the FA's bid is an excellent one, and one that has every chance of success. We staged an outstanding Euro 96, the facilities at our grounds are second to none and lottery funds have been earmarked to ensure that the new stadium at Wembley will be the finest in the world and a fitting venue for the 2006 World cup final. We ask only that there is a level playing field, and that the respective bids be judged on their merits.

I am very much looking forward to the dinner I am hosting on 11 February and the reception on 12 February to promote this excellent bid, which will provide a further opportunity to demonstrate our support.

WALES

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the current situation in the BSE crisis. [13566]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The measures introduced by the Government to protect the public health from any risk from BSE continue and returns for BSE enforcement measures show continuing high compliance rates. The BSE epidemic is in sharp decline as a result of the controls in place, particularly the ruminant feed ban.

We have been working actively to meet the pre-conditions in the Florence agreement and will continue to work for a progressive lifting of the export ban. The Government have committed over £250 million in direct financial support to producers to help keep the production and marketing chains open and thereby ensure the survival of the UK beef industry.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many meetings he has had with National Farmers Union representatives to discuss BSE and related matters. [13627]

Mr. Evans: Welsh Office Ministers and officials have had numerous meetings with the NFU to discuss BSE.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13458]

Mr. Hague: Welsh Office budgeted expenditure on advertising and publicity, which includes public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997, and out-turn expenditure for the period January to March 1996 is set out in the table. For previous financial years comparable information is not readily available.

Period	Advertising £	Publicity and public information campaigns[1] £
Budgeted expenditure
January–March 1997	47,133	758,378
Actual expenditure
January–March 1996	216,460	863,099

[1] Expenditure figures for publicity and public information campaigns cannot be disaggregated.

Conferences (Ministerial Participation)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which conferences he has addressed since taking office. [13555]

Mr. Hague: Since taking office I have addressed the following conferences on official business:

	Conference	Location
12 July 1995	Consumer and Local Government Conference	Cardiff
29 September 1995	Launch of World Health Organisation Collaborating Centre of International Toxicovigilance	Cardiff

7 November 1996	Welsh Association of Health Authorities and Trusts	Ewloe
13 November 1996	IOD Conference	Cardiff

Pensioners (Care Homes)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average weekly cost of a place in (a) a statutory residential home, (b) a voluntary residential home and (c) a private residential home for an individual over pensionable age who is in receipt of income support. [13554]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not held centrally.

Severn Trent Water Authority

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the division of responsibilities between the Environment Agency regional offices in Wales and the midlands for the monitoring of the Severn Trent water authority. [13317]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire (Mr. Fabricant) by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 19 July 1995 at columns 1431–32. The recommendations of the Environment Agency advisory committee on regional boundaries were placed in the Library of the House. In accordance with those recommendations the Environment Agency has drawn up a memorandum of understanding on inter-regional operating arrangements between its Welsh and Midland regions and this has been agreed with the Welsh Office.

Road Traffic Mileage

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total mileage travelled in Wales by cars and taxis in (a) 1987 and (b) 1996. [13319]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The total mileage travelled on major roads in Wales by cars and taxis is estimated at 5.40 billion vehicle miles in 1987 and 6.98 billion vehicle miles in 1995, the latest year for which data are available. Comparable estimates for minor roads are not available.

Poll Tax Arrears

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the amount of poll tax now outstanding for each former district council area. [13556]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The estimated arrears of community charge at 31 March 1996 are given in the table.

Estimated arrears of community charge at 31 March 1996[1]

Rural Dentists

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dentists set up in practice in rural areas in Wales in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [13866]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not available centrally.

Welsh Language

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Government Departments have an approved Welsh language policy; and if he will make a statement. [13869]

Mr. Hague: The approval of Welsh language schemes is an operational matter for the Welsh Language Board. However, the board informs me that, to date, three Government Departments, including the Welsh Office, have an approved Welsh language scheme in place.

Tourism

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the income derived from tourism in Wales in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [13867]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1995, it was estimated that tourism generated £1.6 billion in direct visitor spending in Wales.

Teachers' Pensions

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received covering the new pension regulations for teachers. [13878]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Department has received to date a total of 143 representations from individuals and organisations in Wales about the proposals for changes to the teachers' superannuation scheme.

School Funding (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on (a) primary and (b) secondary school funding in Flintshire. [14049]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Primary and secondary school funding in Flintshire is a matter for Flintshire county council.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the longest time it has taken for him to make a decision on a planning appeal submitted to his Department in the past 10 years. [13997]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: One hundred and twelve weeks. The inspector's report on the inquiry into the appeal by the British Coal Corporation for opencast mining on land south-west of Llanharan was submitted to the Secretary of State on 17 September 1990 and the decision issued on 19 November 1992.

Marshalls Food Group Ltd.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial assistance has been provided to Marshalls Food Group Ltd. in each year since 1993, including assistance form European Coal and Steel Community Funds, in respect of its production plant at Sandycroft; on what terms; and if he will make a statement. [14245]

Mr. Hague: Marshalls Food Group was offered a regional selective assistance grant of £4 million in January 1993 to enable it to invest in the facilities at Sandycroft. As a result, 370 jobs were forecast to be safeguarded and 313 created. The project has been partially completed.

Special Schools (Residential Places)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the (a) maximum and (b) minimum cost of a full residential place at each of the special schools. [14246]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not held centrally.

Meningitis

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what reports he has received from Bro Taf health authority and university of Wales, Cardiff, concerning the outbreak of meningitis last year; and if he will make a statement. [14500]

Mr. Hague: I have received reports from the Bro Taf health authority and the university of Wales, which I am making available in the Library. My officials will discuss the details of the reports with the health authority and the university, including in connection with the health authority report the response of general practitioners to the outbreak.

The university's report records the action taken by the university authorities during the outbreak. It also contains brief details of complaints received by the university concerning communication with students. Like that of the health authority, the university's report identifies lessons to be learned. I endorse the proposals for action, including a joint workshop with the health authority, and would wish to receive a report of its conclusions in due course.

The report of the health authority outbreak control team has been prepared at my request in accordance with the requirement for a report to the chief medical officer on any serious outbreak of infectious disease. It records the actions taken to identify and alert those at risk from infection, and to prevent further spread of the infection among residents of University hall. I am satisfied that these actions were in accordance with the then current advice on good practice provided by the public health laboratory service meningococcus working group. It describes the epidemiological investigation undertaken to identify the type of meningococcal infection. The action taken to provide information to the students, university authorities and general practitioners is also described.

In its conclusions the health authority's report outlines the particular features of this outbreak and addresses the criticism that has been made of apparent delay in recognising and declaring an outbreak. It recommends that the public health laboratory service meningococcus working group considers the need for revision of the guidelines of the control of meningococcal outbreaks in the university residential setting. It also recommends that the implications of the epidemiological investigation be considered by the working group.

Finally, the report recommends that the health authority reviews the communication arrangements in the light of the experience of this outbreak. I accept these recommendations and, with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, am pleased that the public health laboratory service meningococcus working group has already reviewed its guidelines for outbreak control in single educational establishments. Revised guidelines were published in the communicable disease review of 10 January. In order to ensure that the full implications of this outbreak are properly considered and appropriate action is taken, I am requiring a further immediate review to take account of the findings of these two reports.

HEALTH

Mental Health

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the Green Paper on mental health. [14320]

Mr. Dorrell: The Green Paper, "Developing Partnerships in Mental Health", is published today. Copies are available from the Vote Office and the Library. It reviews the progress which health and local authorities have already made in developing joint working in the delivery of mental health and social care services and looks at ways to build on this. The Green Paper considers how the current organisational framework for commissioning and providing services could be used more effectively and also sets out four options for structural change. We are seeking views on these proposals from those with an interest in developing mental health services during a three-month consultation period.

Hospital Emergency Cases Report

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the chief medical officer's inquiry into the reasons for the rise in hospital emergency cases to report; and if he will make a statement. [13403]

Mr. Horam: The chief medical officer is not making any inquiries into the numbers of hospital emergency cases. He is, however, leading a group reviewing the provision of emergency services in the community. The group published a consultation document called "Developing Emergency Services in the Community" in November 1996, copies of which are available in the Library. A final report will be published later this year.

Chief Medical Officer

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what prior ministerial approval the chief medical officer requires before (a) giving media interviews and (b) responding to parliamentary inquires and questions which relate to his responsibilities. [13404]

Mr. Horam: The chief medical officer, in his capacity as the Government's chief adviser on public health, responds as he considers appropriate to requests for media interviews and parliamentary enquiries on any matters that fall within his responsibility, in consultation with Ministers.

Cottage Hospitals

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of cottage hospitals closed in 1996 and planned to be closed in 1997; and if he will make a statement on the future of cottage hospitals. [13639]

Mr. Horam: The term "cottage hospital" is used to describe a wide range of facilities, data on which are not held centrally. The NHS and Community Care Act 1990 led to the development of numerous community and primary care facilities, and recent White Papers have announced further ways in which a range of local services might be further developed.

Mixed-sex Wards

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the costs of conversion of hospitals from mixed-sex wards. [13640]

Mr. Horam: No such estimates have been made. Costing work to meet patients charter standards is a matter for local management.

Public Health Laboratory Service

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of state for Health what plans he has to privatise the public health laboratory service. [13641]

Mr. Horam: None. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) on 29 January at column 275.

Prodigy Programme

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Prodigy programme takes into account individual patient needs. [13814]

Mr. Malone: The assessment of individual patient needs is a matter for the clinical judgment of the general practitioner concerned. The Prodigy clinical recommendations take account of systematic factors, where relevant, such as age, sex and co-morbidity. General practitioners are under no obligation to accept any recommendation advised by the Prodigy system and are free to prescribe any treatment they see fit.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what systems other than Prodigy for computer-based decision support for general practitioners are under consideration by his Department. [13812]

Mr. Malone: We are happy to consider any system which satisfies the system specification. We are, under the umbrella of Prodigy, testing a wide range of systems with five major general practitioner computing suppliers who maintain seven different clinical systems.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on research on the outcomes for patients resulting from the Prodigy programme. [13811]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Rother Valley (Mr. Barron) on 12 November 1996, Official Report, columns 155–56.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are in place to enable the Prodigy programme to ensure full and immediate access to innovations in therapy and new medicines. [13813]

Mr. Malone: A working party has been drawn together to advise Ministers on a process to develop and update a clinical guidance base for general practitioners' decision support. As part of its remit, we would expect the working party to look at access to innovative treatments and additions of new drugs to the Prodigy system. The first meeting of the working party is planned for spring 1997 and its report will be expected in the autumn.

Consultants

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the numbers of consultant posts currently vacant by (a) specialty and (b) health authority. [13653]

Mr. Malone: The latest available information is shown in the table. However, data on vacant posts are difficult to interpret and do not necessarily imply a shortage. The census is a snap shot of 30 September each year. Some vacancies will be wholly or partly filled by locums. For others, national health service trusts may find alternative ways to provide the service rather than re-advertising. The numbers give no indication of how long the post has been empty; some of these will be in the process of being filled.

(a) Vacant consultant posts in specialty in England as at 30 September 1995 (whole-time equivalent rounded to the nearest 10):

Specialty	Vacant posts
Accident and emergency	30
Anaesthetics	110
Cardiology	10
Child and adolescent psychiatry	30

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) his Department and (b) the NHS management executive spent on external consultants in each year since 1989. [13649]

Mr. Horam: Running cost expenditure on external consultancy by the Department of Health, its agencies and the national health service executive—formerly the NHS management executive—is as shown:

1989–90: Not available[1]
1990–91: £18,398,000[2]
1991–92: £24,258,000[2]
1992–93: £18,399,000[3]
1993–94: £15,933,037[4]
1994–95: £18,479,405[5]
1995–96: £18,363,000[6]

Notes:

[1] Details of consultancy expenditure for 1989–90 are not available as the Department of Health formed part of the Department of Health and Social Security until July 1988 and the Department's accounting records did not identify consultancy expenditure separately.

[2] Expenditure by the NHS Executive in the years 1990–91 and 1991–92 cannot be disaggregated.

[3] Includes expenditure of £6,675,821 by the NHS Executive.

[4] Includes expenditure of £4,975,579 by the NHS Executive.

[5] Includes expenditure of £4,339,752 by the NHS Executive.

[6] Includes expenditure of £6,353,220 by the NHS Executive.

General Practitioners

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs were involved in commissioning by (a) health authority and (b) region in the last year for which figures are available. [13655]

Mr. Malone: Around the country, many groups of general practitioners, both fundholding and non-fundholding, are working closely with their health authorities to improve purchasing. Detailed information is not collected centrally. The White Paper, "Primary Care—Delivering the Future", sets out proposals to pilot closer collaborative arrangements in a number of sites.

Accident and Emergency Units

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of attenders at casualty and accident and emergency units in each of the last five years. [13663]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is in the table.

Attendances at accident and emergency departments

Thousands

	New attendances	Total attendances
1991–92	11,035	13,305
1992–93	10,993	13,070

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the number of attenders at casualty and accident and emergency units in each acute trust in each of the last five years. [13662]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is contained in the annual Department of Health publication, "Outpatients and ward attenders, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Aspartame

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the health effects of the use of aspartame in food, with particular reference to epilepsy; and if he will make a statement. [13818]

Mr. Horam: The Department has not commissioned any research in this area.

The Department regularly reviews new information on food chemical safety and, when appropriate seeks advice from its experts advisory committees. The Department is aware of the anecdotal reports linking aspartame with a variety of adverse effects such as epilepsy and behavioural difficulties in children. Such claims have not been substantiated in controlled studies in humans. In 1986, the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment—COT—reviewed all the available data on the possible link between aspartame and epilepsy. The COT's conclusions reaffirmed its previous advice given in 1982, that aspartame is acceptable for use in food. A further review of the safety of aspartame in food was completed by the COT in 1992, when it formulated its advice in terms of an acceptable daily intake of 0-40 mg/kg bw/day of aspartame.

In 1996, the Committee on Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment—COC—considered an American paper by Olney et al. which suggested that there may be a link between aspartame and brain tumours. The COC expressed strong misgivings about the quality of this report, and concluded that it did not raise any concerns with regard to the use of aspartame in the United Kingdom.

Butane Gas Lighters

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the manufacturers of butane gas lighters and refills regarding the sale of products to people under the age of 16. [13643]

Mr. Burns: Department of Health Ministers have not met recently with manufacturers. Officials in the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of Health attend meetings of the volatile substance abuse industry forum to discuss issues of common concern.

Dental Health (Children)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the dental health of school children in Lancashire since 1979. [13853]

Mr Malone: The British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry conducts annual surveys of dental caries prevalence in children within a four-yearly cycle comprising those aged five, 12, and 14, throughout Great Britain. The BADCD began these surveys in 1985–86 in England and Wales. The tables show the mean number decayed, missing and filled in the deciduous teeth only of five-year-old children and in the permanent teeth only of 12 and 14-year-old children in Lancashire.

Royal London Hospital Trust

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of the private finance initiative in relation to the Royal London hospital trust. [13875]

Mr. Horam: The Royal Hospitals NHS trust and its preferred bidder are currently holding detailed negotiations prior to submission of the full business case for the proposed private finance initiative scheme.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many TB notifications there were for each local authority in London for each of the last five years and 1996 to date. [13757]

Mr. Horam: The number of cases of tuberculosis—excluding chemoprophylaxis—notified to the Office for National Statistics is published annually by local authority in the publication "MB2 Communicable Disease Statistics". Copies are available in the Library and the latest published year is 1994. Figures for 1995 and provisional figures for 1996 are given in the table.

Parkinson's Disease

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount of Government research expenditure on Parkinson's disease in 1996–97; and how many people received treatment for Parkinson's disease in 1996–97. [14001]

Mr. Horam: Figures for Government research expenditure in 1996–97 are not yet available. However, in 1995–96, the latest year for which figures are available, the Medical Research Council, the main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research, awarded £53.6 million for research in the field of neurosciences and mental health, of which £6.2 million was specifically for research on Parkinson's disease and nerve regeneration.

Information about the number of people with a particular condition treated by the national health service is not collected centrally. However, figures are available for the number of finished consultant episodes. The number of FCEs of admitted patient care, with a primary diagnosis of Parkinson's disease, to NHS hospitals in England during 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available, is estimated at 10,700.

Dental Services

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists were (a) registered for and (b) undertaking NHS work in (i) 1979 and (ii) at the latest date for which figures are available. [14307]

Mr. Malone: The number of dentists registered with family practitioner committees on 30 September 1979 was 12,146. The number of dentists registered with health authorities on 30 September 1996 was 16,336.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13468]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not available in the format requested. The following information is available from the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments:

Advertising, publicity and public information campaign costs

	£000
January–March 1997 Budgeted	[1]2,469
January–March 1996	2,755
January–March 1995	3,216
January–March 1994	[2]2,309
January–March 1993	[2]1,875
January–March 1992	[2]1,553

All figures exclude the Department of Environment and Department of Education.
[1] Also excludes the Department of Health and Social Services.
[2] Also excludes the Northern Ireland Office.

Beef Special Premium

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when checks on the applications by beef producers for the beef special premium were first introduced; what proposals there are for monitoring these applications in the future; and if he will make a statement. [13661]

Mr. Ancram: The beef special premium scheme has operated in Northern Ireland since 1989 and during that time all applications have been subject to on-farm inspections, when animals are marked by ear-punching. During 1997 the Department plans to make greater user of its computerised cattle records system in cross-checking of BSPS applications. The Department then intends to review the need for 100 per cent. inspection/marking of animals in the light of the experience gained from this additional checking.

Department of Education Offices, Rathgael

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants were located at the Department of Education offices at Rathgael, Bangor in 1992; how many are currently based at these premises; and how many will be able to be accommodated at Rathgael when the proposed building extensions are completed. [13664]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Number of staff

Staff located at	Permanent	Casual	Total	Date
Rathgael House	604	30	634	1 January 1992
Bangor	473	21	494	1 January 1997

The building currently under construction—estimated completion date spring 1998—is not an extension but rather a replacement of existing sub-standard accommodation. The Rathgael house complex will then be able to accommodate around 500 staff. Teachers salaries and pensions branches— approximately 100 staff—relocated to Londonderry in 1993.

Casement Three

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to refer the case of the Casement Three to the criminal appeal board. [14018]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Belfast, West (Dr. Hendron) on Monday 3 February 1997.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Coroner Procedures (Muslim Communities)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice or guidance has been issued to coroners by the Home Office coroners study committee concerning suitable arrangements to enable coroners serving large Muslim communities to issue the necessary documentation to permit the transport of bodies overseas, with particular reference to weekends and public holidays. [14106]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 4 February 1997]: The attention of coroners has been drawn to the need, when considering requests to expedite applications, for the religious feelings of the bereaved to be taken into account and for their concerns to be dealt with sensitively.

Gilbert McNamee

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will allow Gilbert McNamee open visits with his family and friends. [13281]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 5 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about open visits for Gilbert 'Danny' McNamee with his family and friends.

Mr. McNamee has been categorised as an exceptional risk category A prisoner. Exceptional risk category A prisoners are held in special secure units and are subject to closed visits. This policy was introduced last year in the light of escapes by prisoners from Whitemoor and Parkhurst.

The humanitarian aspects of closed visits were recognised and taken into account. It was decided that, notwithstanding these humanitarian considerations, the interests of security had to be paramount. In exceptional circumstances, an open visit may be allowed, following an application to the Director of Dispersal prisons.

Probation Service (Mid Glamorgan)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the reduction in the budget in 1997–98 for the probation service in Mid Glamorgan; and what estimate he has received from the service of reductions in the number of probation officers directly serving clients. [13933]

Mr. Sackville: The specific grant cash limit for the Mid Glamorgan probation service in 1997–98 is £2.8 million, 2.1 per cent. lower than for 1996–97. Part of this reduction is due to a transfer of responsibilities and resources from Mid Glamorgan to Gwent as a consequence of local authority boundary changes.

It is for the Mid Glamorgan probation committee to decide how these resources will be best used and to determine what specific changes within the service, including staff numbers and deployment, should be undertaken within the total level of expenditure implied by this level of grant support. The committee has not yet provided information about its staffing plans for 1997–98.

Mr. Rowlands : To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the effect on the Mid Glamorgan probation service of the alteration of that service's boundaries; and what transitional budget provision has been made for the service. [13952]

Mr. Sackville: Responsibility for the Rhymney Valley, which was transferred from the Mid Glamorgan probation area to the Gwent probation area on 1 April 1996, accounted for an estimated 19.1 per cent. of the Mid Glamorgan probation service's expenditure. As a transitional arrangement, 16.6 per cent. of the Mid Glamorgan allocation—as it would have been before the boundary changes—was transferred through the cash limits formula to Gwent in 1996–97 and 17.9 per cent. will be transferred in 1997–98. The full 19.1 per cent. will be transferred from 1998–99.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the number of prison visits by Mid Glamorgan probation officers made to advise prisoners before their release in 1996–97; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed reduction in the budget for 1997–98 upon prison visiting by Mid Glamorgan probation officers; [13931]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of pre-sentence reports prepared by the Mid Glamorgan probation service in 1996–97 and what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed reduction in staff in that service on providing pre-sentence reports in 1997–98. [13932]

Mr. Sackville: The Home Office does not estimate at this level of detail. It is for the Mid Glamorgan probation committee to use the resources available to it to meet its responsibilities, including the need for compliance with national standards for the preparation of pre-sentence reports and the pre-release and post-release supervision of offenders.

Oncomouse

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Government funding was provided to develop the oncomouse. [13407]

Mr. Sackville: None.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of oncomice produced to date; how many have been experimented on; to whom royalties are paid for the use of oncomice; and if he will make a statement on the value of experiments on oncomice. [13406]

Mr. Sackville: Central records are insufficiently detailed to indicate the number of such procedures. Patents have been applied for, but not yet granted, in the European Union. I have no knowledge about royalties due or paid in the United Kingdom. I understand that research using oncomice has the aim of increasing scientific knowledge about the mechanisms of tumour production.

Dangerous Dogs Act

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many dogs, against whose owners no charges are pending or against whose owners charges have been dropped, are currently being held by the Metropolitan police under the terms of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991; [13768]

(2) what is the cost, to date, of kennelling dogs held by the Metropolitan police, under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 against whose owners no charges are pending or charges have been dropped; [13769]

(3) what is the total cost, to date, of the kennelling of dogs held by the Metropolitan police under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991. [13767]

Mr. Sackville: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that seven dogs are currently being held under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 against whose owners no charges are pending or against whose owners charges have been dropped. The cost to date of kennelling dogs where charges against the owners have been dropped or are pending is £77,484. The total cost of kennelling dogs since the introduction of the Act in November 1991 is £3,175,542.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what current research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the causes and consequences of illicit drug taking; and if he will make a statement. [13854]

Mr. Sackville: Research commissioned by the Home Office supports the role of the Department in delivering the strategy set out in the White Paper, "Tackling Drugs Together".

It includes projects to improve the information available on the nature and incidence of drug-related crime and public attitudes to it, as well as assessments of the general prevalence of drug misuse. Four projects are also in progress aimed at developing police strategies for tackling drug-related crime problems.

Independent evaluation projects have been commissioned in support of the Home Office drug prevention initiative's programme of work on effective drugs prevention action at community level.

Research has also been commissioned on the effects of the Prison Service mandatory drug testing programme on patterns of drug misuse in prisons.

Recently evaluated projects include drug prevalence findings from the 1994 British crime survey, lifestyles of crack and heroin addicts in Manchester, public attitudes to drug-related crime and the impact of methadone programmes on crime rates on Merseyside.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will provide (a) her Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13467]

Mr. Sproat: My Department has not incurred expenditure on promotional or public information advertising or public information campaigns in any of the past five years.

Figures for publicity expenditure, 3 January to March, in each of the years since the Department's creation in 1992 are as follows:

1997 (Budgeted): £195,700
1996 (Actual): £199,300
1995 (Actual): £28,000
1994 (Actual): £21,600
1993 (Actual): £5,900

London Marathon

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what support her Department is providing towards the staging of the 1997 London marathon. [13921]

Mr. Sproat: My Department recognises the London marathon as a major international sporting event. The Royal Parks Agency is currently discussing with the organisers of the event the use of the royal parks to ensure the success of the 1997 race.

Royal Parks

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what financial support her Department has given to the Royal Parks in each of the last five financial years. [13927]

Mr. Sproat: The information is as follows:

Year	£ million
1992–93	20.1
1993–94	22.9
1994–95	23.9
1995–96	24.7
1996–97	'23.2

' planned.

Caravan Parks

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations have taken place to reach a common standard of classification and a common symbol throughout the United Kingdom for caravan parks; and if she will make a statement. [14012]

Mr. Sproat: The British graded holiday parks scheme currently provides a common standard of classification and a common symbol across Great Britain.

The scheme is operated by the English tourist board, the Scottish tourist board, the Wales tourist board, the British Holiday and Home Parks Association and the National Caravan Council. Last summer they jointly carried out consumer research with the aim of developing a scheme that reflects consumer needs more closely. The research was finalised at the end of last year and a committee comprising representatives of each of the organisations is looking at ways of achieving this and will then consult the industry.

Windsor Castle

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much has been raised for the restoration of Windsor castle by the admission charges to Buckingham palace. [14047]

Mr. Sproat: I understand from the royal collection department, which as a department of the royal household is responsible for these matters, that the latest audited figures for the three years to 31 March 1996 show that a total of £8,127,000 has been raised from the summer opening of the Buckingham palace state apartments.

British Academy of Sport

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to announce the final shortlist of applications for the British academy of sport. [14045]

Mr. Sproat: A decision on the successful bidder will be announced in early spring.

Charities Act 1992

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she plans to implement part III of the Charities Act 1992. [13998]

Mr. Sproat: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to the hon. and learned member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 16 December, Official Report, columns 443–44.

Sporting Activity

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will estimate the number of (a) adults, (b) women and (c) children aged under 16 years who regularly participate in sporting activity. [13926]

Mr. Sproat: The 1993 general household survey of a representative sample of 19,000 people over 16 years of age in Britain revealed that 63.7 per cent. of all adult respondents, and 57 per cent. of all female respondents, had participated in at least one sporting activity in the preceding four weeks. The 1994 young people and sport in England survey of a representative sample of 4,400 six to 16-year-olds revealed that in the preceding 12 months all respondents had undertaken some form of sporting activity during lessons, and 98 per cent. of respondents had undertaken some form of extra-curricular sporting activity.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

War Pensions Appeals

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of war pensions appeals were resolved in favour of the appellants at the war pensions appeals tribunals (a) in 1979 and (b) in the last year for which figures are available; and what was the average value of such awards to successful appellants in each of the last three years. [14020]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 5 February 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the proportion and cost of successful awards in favour of the appellant at the War Pensions Appeal Tribunal.

There are no statistics available to show the percentage of decisions given in favour of the appellant in 1979. The percentage of decisions given in favour of the appellant in 1982 was 31.8 per cent. and in 1996 the percentage was 30 per cent.

The information requested about the average value of such awards to successful appellants in each of the last three years is not held centrally, and could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many staff are currently employed by the war pensions appeals tribunals in Leeds. [14022]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 5 February 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of staff currently employed by the War Pensions Appeal Tribunal in Leeds.

The Pensions Appeal Tribunal does not employ any staff in the Leeds area. All appeals are issued and processed at the London office of the Pensions Appeal Tribunal. If a hearing is required in Leeds, a clerk is sent to the Leeds office to assist in the running of the Tribunal. From time to time a clerk from the Immigration Authorities will also assist.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many staff are currently employed by the war pensions appeals tribunals; and how many there were in (a) 1979 and (b) 1990. [14023]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 5 February 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about staffing levels at the War Pensions Appeal Tribunal.

The Pensions Appeal Tribunal presently employs 21 staff. In 1979 it employed 10 staff and in 1990 that number had increased to 16.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many cases are currently before war pensions appeals tribunals involving appellants over the age of 68 years; and what steps are taken to expedite hearings in these cases. [14024]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 5 February 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of cases currently before the War Pensions Appeals Tribunal which involve appellants over the age of 68 years and how those cases are expedited.

The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Travel Costs

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the total travel costs for himself and his staff during the present Parliament; and if he will list the equivalent figures for the 1983 to 1987 Parliament. [13427]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The total costs of such travel in the United Kingdom and overseas during the current Parliament are as follows:

Year	£
1992–93	[1]1,730	Actual
1993–94	1,490	Actual
1994–95	1,230	Actual
1995–96	1,650	Actual
1996–97	1,270	Budget

[1] All figures in £'000s rounded to the nearest £10,000. Comparable data for 1983–87 Parliament are not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Social Chapter

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade at what cost to public funds the booklet, "The Social Chapter, The British and European Approaches", has been produced by his Department; for what reasons his Department produced it; and to whom it has been circulated. [14233]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The total cost incurred to date for design, external translation, printing, storage and distribution of the booklet is around £27,000. It is not possible to quantify the staff costs arising from internal preparation of the text.

The purpose of the booklet was to explain the Government's policy on social affairs in the EU. Copies of the booklet were sent to business organisations, the largest UK-based companies, Members of Parliament, British Members of the European Parliament and the media. It has also been distributed to interested parties in other EU member states. Further copies have been supplied on request.

Exports (Iraq)

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations were carried out by the DTI-funded committee for middle east trade before deciding to encourage British firms to bid for the Iraqi contracts sanctioned under United Nations Security Council resolution 986. [14244]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 4 February 1997]: The committee for middle east trade consulted my Department, which is in close touch with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on this issue. SCR 986 is a one-off humanitarian measure to help alleviate the suffering of the Iraqi people and it is proper that British firms should compete for business under it.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many small businesses in rural development areas are currently receiving assistance from business links. [13890]

Mr. Page [holding answer 31 January 1997]: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Business Links are not required to collect information on the number of small businesses in rural development areas receiving assistance. The information could be provided only by checking the records of each business link that includes a rural development area within its catchment area.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13461]

Mr. Hanley: Budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing for the period January to March 1997 is as follows:

Advertising	25,000
Publicity	22,638
Information campaigns	43,325

Actual expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Diplomatic wing for the period January to March in the past five years was as follows:

	1996 £	1995 £	1994 £	1993 £	1992 £
Advertising	6,032	3,196	15,780	33,064	1991–92
Publicity	159,414	305	36,487	130,176	breakdown
Information campaigns	91,000	67,442	255,979	112,058	not available

Overseas Development Administration aid wing can provide annual figures only for advertising. There is no annual budgeted figure as such, as the costs arise from each project. The expenditure in 1996–97 to date is £590,995.

Actual annual ODA expenditure for advertising in the past five years was as follows:

1996: £580,000
1995: £727,000
1994: £241,136
1993: £406,296
1992: £251,695

ODA cannot separate figures for publicity and public information campaigns. Budgeted expenditure for both for the period January to March 1997 is £350,000.

Actual ODA expenditure on publicity and public information campaigns for the period January to March in the past five years was as follows:

Publicity/information campaigns

1996: £318,794
1995: £518,737
1994: £683,115
1993: £456,491
1992: £94,664

Visas

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, columns 226–27, what is his estimate of the cost of informing the House of visa fees charged by other European countries since 1 April 1996, as compared with those charged for entry to the United Kingdom since that date. [14350]

Dr. Liam Fox: I understand that a number of European countries use a differentiated system of visa fees, whereas the UK levies flat rate fees worldwide for each category of visa. It would therefore be possible to provide the information sought only following detailed research in those countries to establish current levels of visa fee applied in various countries/regions, and any revisions which have taken place during the period in question. It is not possible to estimate in advance the costs of such research.

TREASURY

Profit Sharing and Share Option Schemes

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the cost to the Exchequer in 1995–96 and the estimates available of likely costs in 1996–97 of (a) profit sharing schemes, (b) save as you earn share option schemes and (c) company share option plans; and if, for each of the above, he will list (i) the number of schemes registered and (ii) the number of people covered by these schemes. [13386]

Mr. Jack: Available information is given in the tables.

Estimated cost of tax reliefs[1]

£ million

	1995–96	1996–97
Approved profit sharing schemes	90	110
Approved savings related share option schemes[2]	180	200

[1] Figures are particularly tentative and subject to a wide margin of error. Estimated costs are the effects on tax liabilities for each year, and not the receipts in each year.

[2] Excluding cost of tax-free bonus on interest received under SAYE contract.

	1995–96
	Number of schemes approved in year	Estimated number of live schemes at year-end[1]
Approved profit sharing schemes	43	868
Approved savings related share option schemes	116	1,174
Approved discretionary share option schemes/company share option plans	347	4,339

[1] Excludes schemes where no further appropriations/grants of options were thought likely to occur.

	1994–95
	Number of employees receiving share allocations or to whom options were granted during the year (thousands)
Approved profit sharing schemes	640
Approved savings-related share option schemes	550

Company share option plans are not expected to have any costs until 1998–99.

The exact number of employees in each of these schemes cannot be precisely estimated because the available figures show only numbers of employees to whom shares were allocated or options granted in a particular year, and some employees may be allocated shares or granted options in successive years.

Estimates for take-up for 1995–96 are not yet available.

Taxable Incomes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each county in England and for the relevant areas in Wales and Scotland the number and percentage of taxpayers with taxable incomes over (a) 50,000, (b) £60,000, (c) £70,000, (d) £100,000 and (e) £150,000. [13795]

Mr. Jack: Estimates of the number of taxpayers in each country and their average incomes are derived from the survey of personal incomes, and the latest available figures are in table 3.13 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1996." It is not possible to provide estimates for numbers in these income bands because of limitations in the size of the sample used in the survey.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total (a) value added tax collected and (b) income tax recovered in each tax office in Wales in each year since 1990. [13868]

Mr. Jack: The table details the amounts of income tax recovered by each of the collection offices in Wales. Information relating to 1990 and 1991 are no longer available in the format requested.

Office	Account 1992 £	Account 1993 £	Account 1994 £	Account 1995 £	Account 1996 £
Aberystwyth	9,005,460.89	11,445,083.72	14,610,060.80	14,111,903.11	13,649,345.56

Newport (Gwent)	41,643,865.57	44,133,490.22	47,092,833,43	62,901,887.02	63,414,502.67
Swansea	37,048,096.31	30,177,721.28	28,633,271.20	35,737,250.47	26,810,007.40
Wrexham	26,378,979.37	23,019,889.34	31,091,353.89	45,664,975.27	48,924,179.41

The figures quoted above are the amounts of tax collected by each of the offices included in the table in respect of cases referred to them by the Inland Revenue accounts office Shipley for local action because a sum remained unpaid after the issue of requests and reminders for payment.

Monetary Growth Rate (M4)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie his decision to set a target monitoring range of 3 to 9 per cent. for the monetary M4 growth rate. [14046]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Broad money is one of the indicators that is considered when taking monetary policy decisions.

The Government decided in the November 1996 Financial Statement and Budget Report to retain a medium-term monitoring range for M4 of 3 to 9 per cent. This was based on an assessment of likely movements in M4 velocity—the ratio of money gross domestic product to M4.

This medium-term monitoring range is not an operational target, but provides an indication of the growth of M4 that is likely to be consistent with permanently low inflation. Because of the potential effects on velocity from changes in the rate of financial innovation, the high level of merger and acquisition activity, and the introduction of a gilt repo market, the Government will continue to keep the monitoring ranges for the monetary aggregates under review.

"Social Trends 27"

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many copies of "Social Trends 27" were printed; on what day they will be distributed to the public with the correction slip referred to in the Office of National Statistics' p.ess release of 30 January headed "Social Trends Error"; what is the cost of printing and distributing the correction slip; and if copies of "Social Trends 27" will be withdrawn from circulation or destroyed as a result of the error. [14276]

Mrs. Angela Knight: A total of 7,500 copies of "Social Trends 27" were printed. Copies with the correction slip inside are being distributed today by The Stationery Office. The estimated maximum cost of printing and distributing the correction slip is £2,000. All sales copies of the original report were withdrawn from circulation by The Stationery Office pending the issue of the correction slip.

Pedal Cycles

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which local tax offices have agreed a rate for the taxation of mileage allowances for the business use of pedal cycles; and if he will list the rates. [14232]

Mr. Jack: Where an employer pays a mileage allowance for the business use of pedal cycles, tax offices will agree that there is no tax liability as long as the rate paid does no more than cover the tax-allowable expenditure.

Research and Development

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of gross domestic product for (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) France, (d) the European Union and (e) Japan was devoted to research and development in the latest year for which figures are available. [13453]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Peter Hain, dated 5 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on what percentage of gross domestic product was devoted to research and development (R&D).

The figures requested are shown in the table below:

Gross domestic expenditure on R and D (GERD) as a percentage of GDP, 1994

	Percentage
United Kingdom	2.19
Germany	2.33
France	2.38
European Union	1.90
Japan	2.84

WALES

Mixed-sex Wards

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to eliminate mixed-sex wards in hospitals. [13896]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office will be having discussions with health authorities and trusts to determine how standards can be further improved in providing patients with appropriate levels of privacy and dignity.

Head Injuries Rehabilitation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to consider each of the health authorities' head injuries rehabilitation plans and strategies; and if he will make a statement. [13863]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Each health authority in Wales has given priority to head injuries rehabilitation. Their performance will be monitored by my Department through the annual accountability review process.

Lone Parents

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many lone parents there are in Wales, broken down by gender; how many are unemployed; and if he will make a statement. [13759]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The summer 1996 labour force survey estimated that, in Wales, there were 101,000 lone parents with dependent children. This estimate, however, is based on a relatively small sample and should be regarded only as a broad order of magnitude. While most of the lone parents identified in the survey were women, reliable estimates by gender and of the numbers unemployed are not available.

Teachers (Deeside)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to visit (a) primary and (b) secondary schools on Deeside and in Buckly to discuss teacher supply; and if he will make a statement. [14050]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: During 1997 my right hon. Friend and I intend to visit a number of schools throughout Wales. I have no doubt that during these visits we shall discuss a range of issues concerning the education service, including teacher supply.

School Homework

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning his policy on homework for school pupils. [14051]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to "A Bright Future: Beating the Previous Best", which was published on 3 February. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Acid Rain

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent research his Department has commissioned on the effects of acidic rain on upland flora and animal life; and if he will make a statement. [13915]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Welsh Office has commissioned research to quantify current rates of acid deposition in Wales and to assess the impacts on the chemistry and biology of streams and lakes. Comparison with a study in 1984 by the former Welsh Water Authority will indicate how impacts have changed as emissions of acid gases have decreased. It is planned to publish the results of the research in summer 1997.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has set in respect of the time scale within which planning appeals submitted to him should be resolved. [14005]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The planning inspectorate has been set the following targets for dealing with planning appeals:

Eighty per cent. of all planning appeals decided by written representations to be determined within 17 weeks;

Eighty per cent. of all planning appeals decided by hearings to be determined within 22 weeks;

Eighty per cent. of all planning appeals decided by inquiries to be determined within 30 weeks.

In addition, the inspectorate has the following internal targets for determining enforcement appeals:

Eighty per cent. of enforcement appeals decided by written representations to be determined within 35 weeks;

Eighty per cent. of enforcement appeals decided by inquiries to be determined within 46 weeks.

In cases where appeals are decided by the Secretary of State, the aim is to decide 80 per cent. within eight weeks of receiving the inspector's report.

Railtrack Depot (Cardiff)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when Railtrack's planning appeal on the Maindy road depot in Cardiff was received by his Department; and when he expects a decision to be reached. [14006]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend received the Inspector's report into these appeals on 6 June 1996. He and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport will issue the decisions jointly as soon as they are able to do so.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the numbers of children in Wales currently attending pupil referral units; and what is the average cost of such a place. [14148]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Provisional details as at January 1996 indicate that there were 468 children attending pupil referral units in Wales. Details of the average cost of a place in a PRU are not available.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library figures (a) by district health authority and (b) in total for the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to hospital and the number of those patients not readmitted within a month for the third quarter of 1996–97. [13858]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the number of cancelled operations is not available centrally. Provisional information on the number of patients admitted and treated more than one month after a cancelled operation is collected by NHS trusts and is given in the following table. A patient treated in a NHS trust may not necessarily be a resident of the health authority in which the trust is situated.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Spiritual and Moral Training

Sir Timothy Sainsbury: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the extent to which the requirements relating to spiritual and moral training laid out in the Education Act 1944 and the Education Act 1988 are currently met in (i) initial teacher training and (ii) in-service teacher training; and if she will make a statement. [14229]

Mr. Forth: All maintained schools are required to provide a curriculum which promotes pupils' spiritual and moral development. Newly qualified teachers must have acquired the foundation to develop a readiness to promote such development. Schools in-service training budgets can be used to fund necessary training for serving teachers. Additionally, the Teacher Training Agency is currently consulting on standards, for subject leaders and head teachers, which require the ability to establish and gain commitment to a vision for successful learning, including pupils' moral and spiritual development. Standards for expert teachers will follow later this year.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 6 December, Official Report, columns 819–20, what is the total budgeted spending by training and enterprise councils on out-of-school childcare in 1996–97 and planned spending for 1997–98 and 1998–99, indicating for each year the percentage change on the previous year. [13949]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 4 February 1997]: The information requested is contained in the table.

	1996–97 Expected spend	1997–98 plans	1998–99 plans
Expenditure (£ million)	9.63	4.10	4.10
Percentage change	—	–57	nil

The out of school childcare initiative was originally a fixed-term programme due to finish in 1996–97. In the light of its success, the Secretary of State decided that the programme should continue.

School Merger (Cheltenham)

Mr. Nigel Jones: to ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to issue her decision regarding the merger of Westlands primary special school and Brookfield secondary special school in Cheltenham. [14345]

Mrs. Gillan: A decision will be reached on this proposal as soon as is compatible with the need to take into account all the relevant factors. My right hon. Friend aims to decide such proposals no later than seven months form the date the notice was served, in this case 7 October 1996. She fully appreciates that, given the proposed implementation date of 31 August 1997, an early decision will be in the best interests of all those involved.

Eltec Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress Eltec Training and Enterprise Council is making in meeting the criteria for the award of a licence. [14767]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce the award of a licence to Eltec to start from April 1997. This means that all TECs have now met the rigorous licensing standards.

DEFENCE

Water Cannon

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the results of research conducted at Porton Down research establishment into the medical effects of high-pressure water cannon jets. [14242]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mrs. Ann Clwyd, dated 5 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning research conducted by Porton Down into the medical effects of high pressure water cannon. The Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

Porton Down carried out research involving the use of water projection devices during the 1970s. The work involved some animal studies to assess the effects of high pressure water on the eyes. Technical reports on the details of this work remain classified. I can, however, say that our scientists concluded that there appeared to be a low risk of damage to eyes from use of such equipment. In addition some field trials of devices were conducted involving human volunteers. Again this work did not indicate that any medical effects were experienced as a result of the use of the water delivery system.

I hope this information is helpful.

Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 November 1996, Official Report, columns 290–91, if he will list the causes of aircraft crashes which were previously under investigation. [14251]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is given in the table:

Date	Aircraft type	Cause
1994
1 August	Tornado GR1	Aircrew error
1995
21 June	Jaguar GR1A	Aircrew error
2 September	Nimrod MR2	Aircrew error
30 October	2 x Tornado F3	Aircrew error
1996
11 January	Tornado GR1	Aircrew error
13 February	Sea Harrier FA2	Technical fault
13 May	Tucano T1	Technical fault

The remaining accidents are still under investigation. The total number of accidents in 1996 has increased from 13 to 14 reflecting the recategorisation of an aircraft incident at RAF Bruggen in February.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the referral by the European Commission on Human Rights and the European Court of Human Rights of the three test cases brought by the British Nuclear Test Veterans Association against the British Government for redress for human radiation exposure. [14228]

Mr. Soames: Two cases have been referred to the European Court of Human Rights. In the case of McGinley and EE v. UK, the Government are disappointed that the European Commission of Human Rights concluded that there had been a violation of article 6(1) of the European convention on human rights. The Commission concluded that the applicants did not enjoy a right of effective access to the pensions appeal tribunal because of a lack of access to relevant records. The Government dispute this and will contest this case. In the other case, of LCB v. UK, which has been referred to the Court, the Government are pleased that the Commission found no violation of the convention. The Government recall that reports of an epidemiological study by the National Radiological Protection Board published in 1988 and 1993 concluded that participation in the nuclear weapon testing programmes has not had a detectable effect on the participants' expectation of life, or on their risk of developing cancer or other fatal diseases.

HMS Cromwell

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider naming a Royal Navy warship HMS Cromwell. [14319]

Mr. Soames: The naming of all Royal Navy ships and submarines is a matter for the Admiralty ships naming and badges committee which regularly considers suggestions for the naming of all craft. I am very grateful for my hon. Friend's suggestion and will ensure that it is forwarded to the committee for consideration.

United Arab Emirates (Visit)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the organisations which he visited in his visit to the United Arab Emirates during the Christmas recess in 1996–97. [14255]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. Friend last visited the United Arab Emirates on 28 November 1996. During that visit he met a number of senior UAE figures to discuss matters of mutual interest and signed a defence co-operation accord between the UK and the UAE.

Royal Flight

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many days in each of the past five years aircraft of the royal flight have been used by members of the royal family. [13679]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. As an illustrative example, however, 228 days in the year 1 January 1996 to 31 December 1996 saw at least one royal task.

Colchester Garrison

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what materials were contained in the drums unearthed on Abbey field in the Colchester garrison in November 1995; and what inquiries have been undertaken as to how they came to be buried there. [13796]

Mr. Soames: The containers excavated from Abbey field, Colchester, held residues of paint, varnish, creosote and grease which, following analysis, were not found to be toxic. Inquiries showed that the containers were between 40 and 50 years old. No records exist to explain how or why the containers were disposed of in this matter.

Hawk Jets

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which countries have outstanding contracts for the delivery of Hawk jets; and what are the numbers of aircraft involved. [14249]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Two contracts are currently outstanding with the Indonesian Government for 24 and 16 Hawk aircraft. There is a further outstanding contract, with another country, but information on this cannot be released as it would cause harm in terms of one or more of the defence, security, international relations and commercial confidence exemptions in the code of practice on access to Government information. These were the exemptions in the code referred to in my statement on defence exports on 23 July 1996, Official Report, columns 212–13.

SCOTLAND

Private Care Homes

12. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to modify the rules and regulations governing the ownership and management of private (a) nursing and (b) residential homes for the elderly. [12892]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office is currently consulting publicly on the standards and practice in nursing homes and is considering the recommendations made by the working group on registration procedures in residential care homes.

Local Government Finance

13. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current level of local government spending per head in Scotland. [12893]

Mr. Kynoch: The current level of local government spending per head of population in Scotland is £1,279. This is 32 per cent. higher than the comparable figure for England.

European Regional Development Fund

14. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of the grants Scotland has received from the European regional development fund since the fund's inception. [12894]

Mr. Kynoch: From the Scottish Office budget we have allocated approximately £1.6 billion behalf of the European regional development fund.

Brain Injury

15. Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the mental illness specific grant with special reference to brain injury. [12895]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the current year, more than £1 million of mental illness specific grant has been allocated to head injury projects. The effectiveness of the grant and alternative funding arrangements are currently being considered.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources are available to support the care programme approach for adults with brain injury in each local authority area in Scotland. [12879]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is a matter for local authorities, health boards and housing agencies to determine how much of the considerable resources at their disposal is used to support the care programme approach for adults with brain injury.

European Council

16. Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the status of the Scottish Office ministers attending meetings of the European Council of Ministers. [12898]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Scottish Office Ministers attend Council meetings as full members of the UK delegation. They are able to speak with the authority of the UK as member state.

Law and Order

17. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the impact of law and order reforms in Scotland. [12899]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We expect the Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill to have a significant impact in terms of both public protection and deterrence. The Bill will also improve the effectiveness and efficiency of criminal justice in Scotland.

Constitutional Reform

18. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received concerning constitutional reform in relation to Scotland. [12900]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the last six months, the majority of representations that I received were in favour of the status quo.

Homelessness

19. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional resources he proposes to tackle the needs of homeless people in Scotland. [12901]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 9 December that £15 million will be made available over the next three years for a new initiative to help rough sleepers in Scotland.

Blind Workers

20. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he has taken following the meeting between the Minister with responsibility for industry and local government—the hon. Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch)—and the Scottish branch of the National League of the Blind in relation to section 2 workers. [12902]

Mr. Kynoch: Scottish Office officials have discussed with Glasgow city council the question of credit facilities for Blindcraft customers. The council agreed that the sensible way forward would be for Blindcraft to make arrangements with existing credit companies to provide services for its customers.

30. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what support his Department currently gives to (a) blind and disabled workshops and (b) Blindcraft outlets. [12912]

Mr. Kynoch: Funding for supported workshops is provided by the Employment Service, an executive agency of the Department for Education and Employment, and paid to Scottish local authorities as a specific grant within the overall amount of aggregate external finance. The total level of grant for 1996–97 was set at £4.4 million. The amount actually paid will depend on numbers of qualifying employees, but it is estimated that about £4.1 million will be paid in the current year. Of that amount, it is estimated that about £1.0 million will relate to Blindcraft establishments.

Dundee City Council (Finance)

21. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received relating to the financial settlement for Dundee city council in 1997–98. [12903]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about this matter.

Local Taxes

22. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he has taken to ensure that local authorities collect outstanding local taxes. [12904]

Mr. Kynoch: The responsibility for the administration of local taxes, including the recovery of arrears, rests solely with the local authority concerned. However, on 17 January my right hon. Friend announced that he was prepared to offer local authorities an additional £3 million to invest on improving council tax and community charges collection.

Road Construction

23. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which major road construction works will commence in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [12905]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1997, construction will begin, or has begun, on the upgrading of the final stretch of the A74 to motorway status, A828 Creagan Bridge, the M90 Halbeath interchange, the A9 at Logie Easter and the A96 bypasses at Blackburn and Kintore.

Automatic Life Sentences

24. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect of his proposals for automatic life sentences on levels of serious crime. [12906]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Figures for recent years suggest that 20 to 30 offenders a year would be liable to receive an automatic life sentence under our proposals in the Crime and Punishment (Scotland) Bill. The public deserves an increased measure of protection from those offenders who have demonstrated by their repeated serious offending that they present a particular risk, and our proposals will provide it.

A96 Keith Bypass

25. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will announce a commencement date for the construction of the A96 Keith bypass. [12907]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend made the necessary road orders for the proposed Keith bypass on 19 December 1996. The project's commencement date will depend on the availability of resources and its priority relative to other projects.

Scotland and Northern Ireland (Joint Projects)

26. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on projects which will affect the economies of both Scotland and Northern Ireland. [12908]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland discuss issues of mutual concern from time to time.

Coronary Heart Disease

27. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in reducing the incidence of coronary heart disease in Scotland in the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [12909]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested. The number of deaths from the disease has decreased from 18,483 in 1981 to 14,874 in 1995. If present trends continue, Scotland is likely to meet its target of a 40 per cent. reduction between 1986 and the year 2000 in the number of deaths from coronary heart disease in those under 65.

Health Service Funding

28. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the chairmen of the health boards to discuss the financing of health services. [12910]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I meet chairmen of health boards regularly to discuss matters of current interest, including finance issues.

Glasgow (Economy)

29. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect of the 1997–98 budget allocations to publicly funded bodies on the economy of the city of Glasgow. [12911]

Mr. Kynoch: The performance of the local economy within the city of Glasgow is related to the performance of the Scottish and United Kingdom economies. The policy of restraint in public expenditure pursued by the Government and its success in combating inflation has delivered the strongest recovery since 1992 of any major European economy. The budget allocations to publicly funded bodies for 1997–98 will reflect that successful policy.

Fishing Industry

31. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the prospects for the fishing industry in Scotland. [12913]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Government are committed to safeguarding the interests of the Scottish fishing industry. That is why we continue to press for a solution to the problem of "quota hopping" at the intergovernmental conference and that is why we argued successfully for more realistic quotas at the December Fisheries Council. The industry's own confidence is evident from the fact that more than 20 new boats, worth some £100 million, are currently on order from Scottish fishermen, with many of the orders placed in Scottish shipyards.

Local Government Finance

32. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact on local government services of next year's financial settlement to local authorities. [12914]

Mr. Kynoch: Provided councils maximise the benefits from reorganisation and efficiency savings, and budget in line with the priorities my right hon. Friend set in determining it, the settlement should lead to a continued improvement in front-line services.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local authority finances. [12882]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I met the convention on 17 January and I look forward to meeting it on 4 July.

Food Poisoning (Report)

33. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from health boards in Scotland regarding the Pennington report; and if he will make a statement. [12915]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have received no representations from health boards specifically in response to publication of the interim report of Professor Pennington's group. Health boards' views will be taken into account in taking forward both the interim recommendations and any further recommendations which are made in the final report.

Export Prospects

34. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Scottish Enterprise to discuss export prospects. [12916]

Mr. Kynoch: I last met the Scottish Enterprise Board on 15 November 1996, when a range of issues were discussed.

Activity Centres (Safety)

35. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress being made in implementing the Activity Centres (Young Persons' Safety) Act 1995 in Scotland. [12917]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: During the transitional period for inspecting and licensing existing providers, 106 Scottish operators have registered with Tourism Quality Services, the licensing authority. Tourism Quality Services has inspected 13 centres and the first licences will be issued during February. Tourism Quality Services is on course to complete its inspections and to grant or refuse licences by 1 October 1997, the date defined in the regulations by which registered operators must be licensed.

Health Service Finance

36. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairmen of health boards to discuss finance in the national health service. [12918]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I meet chairmen of health boards regularly to discuss matters of current interest including finance.

Electricity Privatisation

37. Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what analysis he has carried out of the effects on the Scottish economy of the privatisation of the Scottish electricity companies; and if he will make a statement. [12919]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend is confident that the increased competition in the electricity market resulting from the privatisation of ScottishPower and Scottish Hydro-Electric, and the freedom of these companies from state interference, has been beneficial to Scotland.

Operation Cancellations

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library figures (a) by district health board and (b) in total for the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to hospital and the number of those patients not readmitted within a month for the third quarter of 1996–97. [13859]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to him on 23 January 1997, Official Report, columns 749–50. Figures for cancellations of planned admissions for in-patient and day case treatment for the third quarter of 1996–97 are not yet available.

Peregrine Falcons

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had from pigeon fanciers requesting a cull of peregrine hawks; and if he will make a statement. [14030]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Government have received a number of calls from pigeon fanciers over the last two years for the licensed control of birds of prey.

A raptor forum and working group was established in 1995, under the joint chairmanship of the Department of the Environment and the Joint Nature Conversation Committee. The group is currently assessing the interaction between racing pigeons, raptors and game birds and will provide advice to Government on this complex issue as it becomes available.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the population of peregrine hawks in Scotland in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [14031]

Mr. Robertson: The numbers of peregrine falcons breeding in Scotland are not monitored annually on a countrywide basis. The last full survey, in 1991, recorded 625 pairs in Scotland. Local surveys of regularly occupied sites indicate expanding populations in some areas, balanced by some decline in other areas.

Cold Weather Protection

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to provide protection for people, with particular reference to senior citizens, from the effects of cold weather. [12896]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: A generous package of measures are in place to assist vulnerable people particularly older people to cope with the effects of cold weather. These include cold weather payments giving extra help towards additional heating costs; the home energy efficiency scheme providing loft insulation, draughtproofing and energy advice; and the "keep warm this winter" campaign providing a free telephone helpline.

General Practitioner Fundholders

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy in respect of fundholder status for general practitioners. [12897]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We continue to support GPs who chose to use fundholding to improve services for patients and we expect that around half the population will be covered by GP fundholders in the course of this year.

Departmental Publications

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) White Papers, (b) Green Papers, (c) consultation papers, (d) draft regulations and (e) circulars, for which his Department has been responsible issued in 1996 which his Department assesses could give rise, (i) directly and (ii) indirectly to significant environmental effects. [12713]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Scottish Office pursues policies and programmes which are intended to support the implementation of the Government's White Paper on the environment "This Common Inheritance", 1992, Cm 1200, and "Sustainable Development: The UK Strategy", Cm 2426, published in 1994. A report on progress will be published shortly as "This Common Inheritance: Annual Report 1997."

No central record is kept of material in the way requested. The Scottish Office produces a great many circulars, regulations and consultation papers; many, to a greater or lesser extent, either may have some impact on the environment or are specifically intended to lead to environmental improvements.

The following are among the material published in 1996:

Green Papers

Development Corporations

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the reception proposed by the Scottish Office to mark the completion of the wind-up of Scotland's development corporations; which Ministers will be attending the reception; when and where the reception will be held; who has been invited to attend; how many are expected to attend the reception; what entertainment will be provided; if commemorative items will be dispensed at the reception; and how much will be spent on the event. [12875]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 January 1997]: I invited representatives of Livingston, Cumbernauld and Irvine new town development corporations to a reception in the great hall, Edinburgh castle on Friday 31 January 1997. The purpose of the reception was to acknowledge the splendid work done by the corporations since they were set up. Each of the corporations was represented by board members, former board members and senior staff past and present. Sixty-five guests attended the reception and the total cost was £803.

The Scottish Office arranged only a reception: dinner was not provided, there was no entertainment and no commemorative items were dispensed. A similar reception was held in December 1995 to mark the wind-up of the East Kilbride and Glenrothes new town development corporations.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of (a) chickens and (b) turkeys on farms in Scotland are currently vaccinated against Newcastle disease; and if he will make a statement. [13602]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The information requested is not collected by the Department.

Student Grants

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on student grants in Scotland in each year from 1990–91 to 1996–97 at current 1996–97 prices. [13902]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The information requested is set out in the table.

The figures represent expenditure on maintenance grants, travel and tuition fees for award-holding Scottish domiciled students undertaking full-time courses of higher education; and on tuition fees for eligible European Union students undertaking similar courses in Scotland. They are not strictly comparable year on year because, since academic year 1990–91, a growing proportion of the maintenance provision for these students has been met by loans rather than grants.

£000s

Financial year	Actual expenditure	Expenditure at 1996–97 prices
1990–91[1]	176,813	215,769
1991–92	279,734	320,817
1992–93	337,647	371,799
1993–94	370,195	395,945
1994–95	324,646	341,190

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are in place to ensure the separation of cattle in the over-30-months scheme from those outside the scheme in abattoirs; how these arrangements differ from those in the rest of the United kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [13538]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 29 January 1997]: The arrangements in place aim to assist the restoration of consumer confidence in beef.

Regulation (EC No. 716/96 requires separation in time and space of cattle being processed under the scheme from those intended for human consumption.

In Scotland this is ensured by abattoirs contracting with the Government to slaughter over-30-month cattle only. There are interim arrangements for Orkney given the special circumstances there. The contractual arrangements reflect representations from the Scottish meat industry, retail, consumer and food safety representative bodies.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what weight of meat and bonemeal from animals slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme is currently being stored in cold storage depots in Grimsby; how long it has been stored there; and for how long it is planned to be kept there. [14025]

Mr. Baldry: There are currently no dry warehouses holding meat and bonemeal or cold stores holding carcase material from animals slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme in Grimsby.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Private Finance Projects

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will make a list of the estimated savings arising from each (a) outsourcing and (b) private finance project within his Department for each of the next three years; [12197]

(2) if he will list the timetable for each (a) current and (b) planned (i) outsourcing and (ii) private finance project within his Department indicating the date for the signing of contracts. [12196]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested.

The business involvement of the private sector in the Department of Social Security is part of a wider programme of change to transform our business by delivering improved services at a significantly reduced cost.

The information relating to estimated savings is as follows.

The outsourcing to the Royal Mail of Child Support Agency post opening is estimated to save £20,000 in 1996–97 and £35,000 in both 1997–98 and 1998–99.

The Benefits Agency-Post Office Counters Ltd. project is cost neutral but, over the life of the project, we expect programme savings in the order of £1,200 million.

Savings of 60 per cent. will be achieved over the life of the national insurance recording system 2 (NIRS2) contract—up to 2004—compared with what it was estimated the cost would have been had NIRS2 been procured conventionally. No breakdown between years is possible.

Savings estimates are not available for those projects that have not reached the award of contract stage. Individual estimates might prejudice commercial negotiations. From previous departmental experience, areas that have been subject to private finance initiative, outsourcing and market testing have achieved long-term savings.

Information relating to current and planned projects is in the table. The projects listed have been established to test use of the private sector where it can contribute investment and new ideas to help achieve efficiency in our business. Timetables are subject to the procurement meeting our business needs.

War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further medical evidence has been received since the decision to change the policy on noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss; what assessment he has made of whether the additional medical evidence is consistent with the reasons for changing his policy on war disablement pensions for deafness; and if he will make a statement. [14343]

Mr. Heald: Since the change in approach regarding noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss was announced, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, has met representatives of the Royal British Legion, and a paper written for the Royal National Institute for the Deaf by Dr. Coles has been received. In addition, my noble Friend, Lord Mackay of Ardbrecknish, has received an open letter from four hearing loss experts, Professor Mark Lutman, Professor Adrian Davis, Dr. Jonathan Hazell and Dr. Ross Coles. All the experts agree with the fundamental point in the advice presented to the Central Advisory Committee on war pensions on 5 December 1996, namely that noise-induced loss and age-related hearing loss are broadly additive. It is the scientific fact that led to the new approach.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report the open letter sent to the Minister of State, the noble Lord Mackay of Ardbrecknish, on 23 January by Professor Mark E. Lutman and others about the Minister's statement that medical opinion on noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss has changed; what action he is taking to revise the Government's change of policy on war disablement pensions for deafness; and if he will make a statement. [14339]

Mr. Heald: A copy has been placed in the Library.

The letter confirms that noise-induced hearing loss and hearing loss due to aging are broadly additive. It is that medical opinion which is now being applied in the assessment of claims for war disablement pension. No action to revise policy on war disablement pensions on hearing loss is therefore being taken.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of ex-service men and women who (a) will qualify for a war disablement pension for deafness under the revised regulations governing entitlement that became effective in March 1996, and (b) would have qualified had the Government not approved their change of policy. [14341]

Mr. Heald: No revised regulation or change of policy governing entitlement to war pensions became effective in March 1996. That was the date on which departmental medical advisors initially advised that there was no longer any reasonable doubt that the effects of noise and age-related hearing loss were broadly additive. In the light of subsequent statements by medical experts that this had been known for 30 years, the matter has been looked at again and we now accept that the position should have been corrected at an earlier date.

We estimate that, in 1997–98, 800 new claimants will qualify for a war disablement pension for noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consultation he had with the Royal National Institute for Deaf People on the Government's interpretation of the medical evidence on noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss; and when they were consulted. [14342]

Mr. Heald: Departmental officials met the Royal National Institute for the Deaf and its medical advisor on 9 January.

The current approach to cases involving service-related noise induced, sensorineural hearing loss and later age-related hearing loss is that the two are not more than additive. All the experts, including those advising the Royal National Institute for the Deaf, agree on this . The medical facts are not, therefore, in doubt.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the current numbers and proportions of recipients of (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit with earnings set against the earnings disregard of (i) £5, (ii) £10, (iii) £15 and (iv) £25, giving figures separately for (1) couples, (2) single people and (3) lone parents. [13049]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the tables.

Income support/housing benefit/council tax benefit couples with disregarded earnings: May 1995

Disregard £	Income Support		Housing benefit		Council tax benefit
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage

25	n/a	n/a	104,000	78.6	94,000	76.6

Notes:
1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. It has not been possible correctly to identify the appropriate disregard in every case.
3. For housing benefit and council tax benefit, earners have been identified as those with earnings from employment and self-employment including those with part-time earnings. For income support earnings refer to income from part-time employment or self-employment.
4. N/A denotes not applicable.
5. Proportions expressed are recipients with earnings as a proportion of the relevant group type (ie. all couples/single/lone parents).
6. Figures for council tax benefit do not include second adult rebate cases.
7. Housing benefit/council tax benefit cases also in receipt of income support have been excluded as earnings have not been disregarded in terms of the housing benefit/council tax benefit assessment as they have already been taken into account in the income support assessment.

Income Support (St. Helens)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support claimants in (i) WN4, (ii) WN5, (iii) L34 and (iv) L35 postcodes his Department allocated to St. Helens metropolitan district council for the purpose of calculating the authority's standard spending assessment for 1997–98. [12949]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Estimated number of income support claimants for St. Helens

Postcode	Percentage of St. Helens
WN4	2
WN5	2
L34	1
L35	5
Other Postcodes	90
Adjustment for unallocated cases	1
Estimated number of claimants	22,392

Notes:

1. Exact figures cannot be provided as a small adjustment is made to the overall caseload estimate to allow for claims which could not be allocated to local authority areas by post code.

2. The other main postcodes contributing to the St. Helens estimate were WA8—WA12.

Pensioner Incomes

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the value of the basic state pension for (c) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples for each year between November 1979 and April 1997; and what it would have been if it had been uprated in line with whichever was the higher of average earnings or prices. [14306]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

£ per week

April 1997	62.45	86.00	99.85	137.65

1. All calculations are rounded to the nearest 5p at each uprating date.
2. The alternative uprating has been calculated using either the average earnings index (whole economy unadjusted) as published by the Office for National Statistics or the retail prices index (all items), whichever was the higher.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, if he will list the number of doctors working at each Benefit Agency medical services centre in Scotland who are (a) full time BAMS staff, (b) current medical practitioners, (c) retired medical practitioners and (d) in other categories. [1348]

Mr. Burt [pursuant to his reply, 5 November 1996, c. 553]: I am advised that Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, will be writing again to clarify his reply.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. George Foulkes, dated 5 February 1997:

I am writing to clarify the information provided to you in my letter of 5 November 1996 in response to your Parliamentary Question. You asked the Secretary of State for Social Security if he would list the number of doctors working at each Benefit Agency Medical Services centre in Scotland who were (a) full time BAMS staff, (b) current medical practitioners, (c) retired medical practitioners and (d) in other categories.

I regret that the figures I quoted for the number of sessional fee paid doctors for Edinburgh and Aberdeen were incorrect. The figures should have been 33 and 13 respectively. The figures are provisional and subject to change.

The additional information concerning fee-paid sessional doctors is now available. Full details are contained in the attached table.

I apologise for any inconvenience this may have caused you.

Doctors working in Scotland at each centre

Centre	Full time BAMS (employed)	Sessional (fee paid)
		Current	Retired
Glasgow/Shettlestone/Cumbernauld	22	62	9
Ayr/Kilmarnock	0	6	2
Greenock	0	4	0
Motherwell/Hamilton	0	5	1
Edinburgh	20	20	13
Aberdeen	2	6	7
Inverness	2	1	4
Dundee	4	6	4

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Glasgow full time doctors cover a variety of areas.

All full time and fee paid doctors are current medical practitioners.

Retired doctors may have taken early retirement from general practice before the age of 60.

HEALTH

Dentistry (Children)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the level of dental caries of five-year-old children in each region in each year since 1989. [13635]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 16 February 1996 at column 25.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental fillings per child were made in each region in each month in 1996. [13636]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not centrally available. Before 1 September 1996 the majority of children's fillings were covered under capitation payments and the item of treatment was not individually recorded.

General Practitioners

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of full-time GPs by region in each year between 1992 and 1995. [13638]

Mr Malone: The information requested is contained in General Medical Services Statistics England and Wales, copies of which are available in the Library.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner fundholders went over budget in the last year banded according to the amount of overspend. [13642]

Mr. Malone: Information for 1995–96 is not yet available. Tables 1 and 2 give figures for 1994–95, classifying overspends, respectively, in cash terms and as a percentage of total budget. The average awarded to a fund during 1994–95 was £1.7 million.

Table 1: Fundholders over budget 1994–95 by size of overspend (cash)

St. Bartholomew's Hospital

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the Grierson committee examining the future of St. Bartholomew's hospital, indicating their background. [13874]

Mr. Malone: Sir Ronald Grierson's task force to examine practical options for future use of the St. Bartholomew's hospital site comprises the following members:

	Position
Sir Ronald Grierson	Former Chairman, GEC International
Professor Sir Colin Dollery	Former Dean Royal Postgraduate Medical School; Pro Vice-Chancellor for Medicine and Dentistry, University of London
Mr. S. T. Gray	Chairman, Smith and Williamson Securities, and Chairman of the Special Trustees for St. Bartholomew's Hospital
Mr. C. J. Perrin	Deputy Chairman, Hambros Bank UK
Sir. Tim Bell	Chairman, Lowe Bell Communications
Mrs. Tessa Keswick	Director, The Centre for Policy Studies
Sir Evelyn de Rothschild	Chairman, N. M. Rothschild and Sons Ltd.
Lord Sheppard of Didgemere	Chairman, Grand Metropolitan plc; Chairman, London First
Right hon. Peter Brooke MP	Member of Parliament, City of London and Westminster South
Mr. M. Cassidy	Chairman, Policy and Resources Committee, The Corporation of London
Sir Derek Boorman	Chairman, Royal Hospitals NHS Trust
Mr. G. Green	Chief Executive, Royal Hospitals NHS Trust (Secretary to the Task Force).

Butane Gas Lighters

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each year since 1990 the number and age range of individuals who have died as a result of the abuse of butane gas lighters and refills. [13644]

Mr. Burns: St. George's hospital medical school collects data on deaths in the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands associated with the deliberate inhalation of volatile substances. The information requested on butane gas lighters and refills by age range for the years 1990–94 is set out in the table.

Age	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
11–14	5	2	3	0	4
15–19	39	29	20	21	14
20–24	9	4	5	10	4
25 and over	0	2	11	5	6
Total	53	37	39	36	28

Numbers of substances reported here are based on primary, secondary and tertiary substances abused, so they cannot be interpreted as percentages of total deaths because more than one substance may be involved in a single death.

Doctors

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors who qualified in (a) 1974, (b) 1977, (c) 1980 and (d) 1983 left the profession within five years of qualification. [13652]

Mr. Malone: Figures from the medical careers research group, on doctors known to have left the profession within five years of qualification are shown in the table:

Year of qualification	Number who had left the profession five years after qualification

Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the number of price reductions of drugs under the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme in each of the last two years. [14043]

(2) what was the total amount repaid to his Department under the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme in each of the two most recent years for which figures are available. [14044]

Mr. Malone: Under the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme, if a company's profits are regarded as above target, a company has the option of either reducing its prices to bring the return back in line with its target or making a repayment of the excess to the department. Almost all companies choose to make repayments.

There have been no examples of price reductions arising from profits above permitted targets under the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme in the last two years. Information on price reductions will be included in the Department of Health's future reports to Parliament on the PPRS.

Information on repayments of profits above target, or of excess sales promotion, for the 1992 round of annual financial returns was published in the first report to Parliament on the PPRS in May 1996. The figure given there of £25.4 million has now become £25.9 million, following further negotiations with companies. Information on repayments for the 1993 round of annual financial returns will be published in the spring in the Department of Health's second report to Parliament on the PPRS. Negotiations with a number of pharmaceutical companies are continuing and the overall position for 1993 is not finalised.

Heart Disease

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total Government research expenditure on heart disease in 1996–97; and how many people were treated for heart disease in 1996–97. [14008]

Mr. Horam: The table shows the total Government expenditure on research into heart disease for the year 1995–96, the most recent year for which figures are available. Information about the number of people treated for heart disease is not available in the form requested.

Dentists

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last discussed with the General Dental Council the issue of extensive unnecessary dental treatment. [14235]

Mr. Malone: Ministers keep in regular contact with the General Dental Council and discuss a wide range of issues, including amendments to the Dentists Act which would allow the GDC to deal differently with dentists guilty of professional misconduct including providing excessive unnecessary treatment.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report column 708, how many dentists have been struck off since 1979 by broad heading. [14234]

Mr. Malone: The General Dental Council has erased the names of 75 dentists from the dentists register since 1979. Of these 26 were erased as a result of criminal convictions, 43 for breaches of professional conduct and the remaining six for a combination of criminal conviction and breaches of professional conduct.

Voluntary Groups

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list each voluntary group part or wholly funded by his Department in the last two years for which the information is available and the amount of money received by each group in that period. [14146]

Mr. Burns: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Prescriptions

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the payments made (a) to dispensing doctors for prescriptions dispensed and items personally administered and (b) to non-dispensing doctors for items personally administered by the Prescription Pricing Authority, broken down by (i) net ingredient cost, (ii) discounted cost, (iii) VAT, (iv) oxygen etc., (v) container allowance, (vi) dispensing fees and (vii) on cost, and in total in each year since 1990–91. [14141]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Doctors and Dentists Pay Review Body

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the evidence submitted to the Doctors and Dentists Pay Review Body regarding disbursements to doctors in England and Wales. [14142]

Mr. Malone: Copies are available in the Library.

GP Principals

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time GP principals there were in 1994, 1995 and 1996 by region and nationally. [14332]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is contained in "General Medical Services Statistics England and Wales", copies of which are available in the Library.

Operation Cancellations

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library figures by (a) district health authority, (b) regional health authority and (c) overall of the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to hospital and the number of those patients not readmitted within a month for the third quarter of 1996–97. [13857]

Mr. Horam: Information on cancelled operations for quarter three of 1996–97 will be available in March and will be placed in the Library at that time.

TRANSPORT

M6

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he had made of the cost of completing the M6 motorway between Carlisle and the Scottish border; what is the distance involved; and out of which Department's budget the cost will be met. [11861]

Mr. Watts: Improvements to the A74 between Carlisle and the border is currently an option in the recently awarded design, build, finance and operate contract and covers the upgrade of the 5.5 miles of the A74 in England to a three-lane motorway, at an estimated cost of £55.9 million. The merits of DBFO procurement for the section of A74 in England are being assessed by the Department of Transport and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. No decision has been reached.

Motorway Accidents

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for each stretch of the motorway network in each of the last two years, how many (a) fatalities and (b) injuries have been reported; how many accidents have been reported; and if he will collate centrally data on the causes of road accidents. [14134]

Mr. Bowis: The following numbers of personal injury road accidents and resulting casualties were recorded on motorways in Great Britain during 1994 and 1995. These are the most recent two years for which statistics are available. The police do not currently collate accident causation data for the Department, but a review this year will decide whether such information should be collected in the future.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evaluation he has made of the adequacy of services on the west coast main line; what plans there are for improvements; and over what time scale. [14221]

Mr. Watts: I expect that InterCity west coast rail services will be franchised in the near future. The franchising director and the chairman of Railtrack signed an infrastructure investment agreement which will give the successful bidder for the franchise the opportunity to run tilting trains and increase maximum speed to 125 mph on all principal InterCity west coast routes by 2002.

Proposals to build on the existing franchises are being made by prospective franchisees and as the competition for the franchise is in progress, I cannot comment on these. I expect the franchisee to achieve sustained improvements in services soon after taking over, as has happened elsewhere.

Consultation on service levels has been carried out by the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising and the finalised passenger service requirement for these services will also be published this week.

Cargo (Gibraltar)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regional or international treaties and conventions on environmental protection against pollution of the Mediterranean sea apply to cargoes (a) delivered to and from Gibraltar and (b) shipped through the straits of Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement on their application. [13852]

Mr. Bowis: Sea-going vessels are subject to international or regional treaties and conventions to which the vessel's flag state is party and also to generally accepted international rules and standards. Morocco, Spain, and the UK, in respect of Gibraltar, enforce the international convention for the prevention of pollution from ships 1973–78, which is the principal international convention on the protection of the marine environment from ships, including those carrying potentially polluting cargoes.

Royal Train

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what has been the cost of upkeep, maintenance and operation of the royal train in each of the last three years; [13689]

(2) what, in each of the past five years, has been the annual public subsidy for the royal train. [13692]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The total cost to the Exchequer of royal travel by train, including train maintenance, preparation, operational and British Transport police security, was the following:

1991–92: £2.6 million
1992–93: £2.5 million
1993–94: £2.8 million
1994–95: £2.5 million
1995–96: £1.9 million

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times in each of the past five years the royal train has been used on (a) official and (b) private journeys. [13688]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The royal train is used only on official business. It has been used on the following numbers of occasions in the last five years:

1991–92: 43
1992–93: 35
1993–94: 47
1994–95: 27
1995–96: 31

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those members of the royal family who have made (a) public use and (b) private use of the royal train in each of the past five years. [13670]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 31 January 1997:]: I understand that the following members of the royal family have made public use of the royal train, as listed, and that members of the royal family have not made private use of the train:

1991–92
HM The Queen
The Duke of Edinburgh
The Prince of Wales
The Princess Royal
The Duke of York
The Duke of Kent
1992–93
HM The Queen

The Duchess of Kent
1995–96
HM The Queen

The Prince of Wales
The Princess Royal
The Duchess of Kent.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost per passenger mile of the royal train and how this compares with commercial charges for equivalent journeys. [13690]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 31 January 1997]: No figures are readily available for the cost per passenger mile of the royal train because the numbers travelling on the train vary. If an estimate were made, the cost would not be comparable with commercial charges for equivalent journeys.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff are employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time to support, staff and operate the royal train. [13691]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 31 January 1997]: This is a matter for the companies which own and operate the royal train—Railtrack and English, Welsh and Scottish Railway Ltd.

Driving Examiners

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the new contracts of employment the Driving Standards Agency is introducing for driving examiners; and what involvement Ministers have had in the decision to introduce the new contracts of employment. [14155]

Mr. Bowis: The Driving Standards Agency is introducing new conditions of service in the contract of permanent employment for the 40 driving examiners whom the agency proposes to recruit to fill current vacancies. The revised conditions will provide the agency with more flexibility concerning the location of examiners and their working hours to help meet fluctuations in patterns of demand for driving tests. There are currently no plans to apply these new conditions to existing permanent staff. While I approve overall DSA staffing levels in the context of the agency's business plan, it is for the chief executive to set appropriate conditions of employment.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving examiners are employed by the Driving Standards Agency; how many have been asked to accept new contracts of employment; how many have been restricted to contracts offering them one day's work a month; and how many driving examiners have been dismissed for refusing to accept new contracts of employment. [14156]

Mr. Bowis: The Driving Standards Agency currently employs 1,153 driving examiners grade staff, 831 of whom are permanent civil servants and 322 of whom have three–year contracts. The DSA is recruiting 40 new permanent driving examiners with revised conditions of service. Examiners on fixed-period contracts have been given six months notice of a contract variation to allow the DSA to terminate on one month's notice in the future. All 322 staff on fixed-period contracts are guaranteed at least one day's work a month once they have completed their probationary period; 307 of these staff are guaranteed of a minimum of 120 days per year for the duration of their contracts. No examiners have been dismissed.

Freight Aircraft

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many operating freight aircraft Channel Express has registered in the United Kingdom; and how many of those aircraft have type approval; [14351]

(2) how many operating freight aircraft Hunting Aviation have registered in the United Kingdom; and how many of those aircraft have type approval; [14352]

(3) how many operating freight aircraft Heavylift have registered in the United Kingdom; and if he will list those aircraft that have type approval; [14353]

(4) how many operating freight aircraft Air Foyle have registered in the United Kingdom; and if he will list those aircraft that have type approval. [14354]

Mr. Bowis: The number of British-registered freight aircraft which each of these airlines operates under its air operator's certificate is shown in the table. All these aircraft have type approval.

	Number/aircraft
Channel Express	6 Handley Page Herald 5 Fokker F27 3 Lockheed Electra
Hunting Cargo Airlines	3 Lockheed Electra
Heavylift Cargo Airlines	2 Shorts Belfast
Air Foyle	8 BAe 146

Channel Express is also in the process of registering an A300 freighter in the UK.

In addition, Channel Express and Hunting Cargo currently have permission to use one leased foreign registered cargo aircraft each, and Heavylift has permission to use eight leased foreign registered aircraft.

Hammersmith Bridge

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will assist in the funding of repairs to Hammersmith bridge; and if he will make a statement. [13708]

Mr. Bowis: The Government are providing funding for bridge assessment and strengthening in London for allocation on a prioritisation basis by the London boroughs bridge engineering group. In due course, this group will determine what proportion of the allocated funds should be used for works at Hammersmith bridge based on data provided by the borough.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Disturbances

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown of the costs of public disturbances in summer 1996 in Northern Ireland. [10977]

Sir John Wheeler: It is not possible to provide a comprehensive breakdown of the costs of public disturbances over the summer of 1996 in Northern Ireland. Clearly the widespread unrest and the many instances of rioting and other violence have had a profound effect on all communities in Northern Ireland both politically and emotionally as well as financially.

However, it is possible to estimate the financial costs in some areas of public expenditure where the public order situation led to additional expenditure over what might normally have been expected. In particular, it is a matter of public record that the additional costs arising from policing parades and other demonstrations in July and August amounted to approximately £13 million. In addition, the Compensation Agency has calculated the cost of potential criminal damage claims to be approximately £20 million. Not all of these claims have been settled and the figure given is an estimate as to the possible final cost of compensating the public and industry vehicles, assessed from claims received by the agency.

These figures do not take into account other areas of unquantifiable costs such as personal injury claims, the cost of repairing damage to roads, etc., nor the loss of potential investment or tourism during this period.

Anglo-Irish Conference (Public Bodies)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) views and (b) proposals the Irish Government have put forward through the Anglo-Irish conference since 1 January 1994 on the role of public bodies; and which public bodies were specified. [11200]

Mr. Ancram: Under the terms of article 6 of the Anglo-Irish Agreement, the Irish Government may put forward views and proposals on the role and composition of public bodies in Northern Ireland. Under that article, the views of the Irish Government on the general pattern of public appointments were discussed at meetings of the conference held on 30 June 1995 and 22 May 1996. Details of exchanges between the two Governments are confidential.

Anglo-Irish Secretariat

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the costs of receptions at the Anglo-Irish secretariat at Maryfield in 1995 and 1996 indicating the date and purpose of each event; and if he will indicate those events not proceeded with for which preparations were made. [12452]

Mr. Ancram: The British side of the secretariat did not host and made no financial contribution towards receptions in 1995.

In 1996 the British side jointly hosted two receptions at Maryfield:

Occasion	Date	British side contribution(£)
St. Patrick's day	14 March	1,501
Christmas	9 December	2,147

No preparations were made for other receptions.

Beef Export Ban

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimates he has made of the impact on (a) farmers' incomes and (b) the economy of Northern Ireland of the European ban on beef exports. [12922]

Mr. Ancram: The effect of the EU ban on beef exports, together with the fall in consumption on the UK market, was to reduce the value of cattle sales to commercial markets and into intervention by almost £120 million but this was offset entirely by compensation and support measures and the value of cattle output, including the over-30-months scheme, in 1996 was virtually the same as in 1995. The income of the agricultural industry fell by 6 per cent. in 1996, but this was mainly because of higher input costs.

The export ban had an immediate impact on the beef processing sector, with many short-term lay-offs, but the effects have since largely been mitigated by the operation of the over-30-months scheme. Related sectors such as animal food compounding, transportation and agricultural machinery have been adversely affected.

Polling Stations

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the draft polling station scheme for the next four years will be published for Northern Ireland. [13862]

Mr. Ancram: The draft polling station scheme for the next four years for Northern Ireland will be published not later than 10 days after publication of the 1997 electoral register, which is due to be published on 14 February 1997.

Water Service (Donaghadee)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action is proposed by the Water Service to cure the problem of dirty water at East street, Donaghadee; and when he expects this action to be taken. [14072]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Water Service under its chief executive, Mr. H. R. F. Plester. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from H. R. F. Plester to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 5 February 1997:

Mr Moss has asked me to reply to your parliamentary question about dirty water at East Street, Donaghadee.

On 4 March 1996, in response to complaints about discoloured water, the Water Service provided an additional hydrant on the watermain at East Street, Donaghadee, and established a schedule for routine flushing of the main to remove any build up of natural sediment, which can be a cause of discolouration. There have been no complaints about discoloured water in the area since mid-1996.

The Water Service is satisfied that its programme of routine mains flushing will maintain the quality of water to a satisfactory standard and it will monitor the situation at East Street, Donaghadee. If any complaint about discoloured water has been brought to your attention I will be pleased to have it investigated.

Waste Disposal Strategy

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, columns 53–54, if he will investigate the circumstances whereby a consultant on short-term contract to the Northern Ireland Department of Environment, described in the answer as not involved in water quality issues within DoE NI, answered a telephone call to the water quality unit, DoE NI, on 10 January; [14086]

(2) if the consultant on short-term contract and working on the preparation of a waste strategy for Northern Ireland is on loan from Haul Waste; [14087]

(3) if he will list the consultants and companies employed to date by the Northern Ireland Department of the Environment (a) in the preparation of the waste strategy for Northern Ireland and (b) in assessing the merits of applications for landfill sites in Northern Ireland on behalf of DoE NI. [14140]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Environment and Heritage Service under its chief executive, Mr. Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Mr. Ron Beggs, dated 4 February 1997:

You recently put down three parliamentary questions about Environment and Heritage Service operational matters which have been passed to me for reply as Chief Executive. I will answer each in turn in this letter according to the number order in which they were tabled.

No. 176

I have investigated the matter and the consultant simply answered the phone in his office and referred the caller to the Water Quality Unit. The caller had used a direct line number for the former occupant of the office (an Environmental Health Officer) with whom the caller had had regular contact.

No. 180

The consultant was appointed under the terms of a contract between his company the Environment and Heritage Service to provide recommendations for the specification for waste strategy and landfill audit contracts. He is not on loan.

No. 193

Two companies were contracted to prepare specifications for a strategic study and an assessment of training needs, Haul Waste Ltd. and Hyder Environmental.

Following this groundwork two companies—Environmental Resources Management and Kirk McClure Morton—were contracted to prepare a Draft Waste Strategy for Northern Ireland.

No companies are employed to assess the merits of landfill site applications on behalf of the Department. However, two companies—Environment Assessment Group Limited and M J Carter Associates—are engaged in the environmental audit of existing facilities.

School Examination Candidates

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which schools in Northern Ireland have candidates for (a) A-levels and (b) international baccalaureate; and which of these schools are (i) controlled, (ii) maintained and (iii) other schools. [13928]

Mr. Ancram: Schools which have pupils enrolled in the final year of an A-level course in October 1995 are shown in the booklet "School Performance Information 1995–96" published by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library. The number of schools in each category is as follows:

Controlled: 37

Maintained: 23

Voluntary grammer: 52

Grant-maintained integrated: 1.

One grant-maintained integrated school had pupils enrolled, in October 1995, in the final year of a course leading to the international baccalaureate.

Roads (Development)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what plans he has to visit Killaney corner on the Saintfield road, Ravara, Ballygowan, to assess the road safety situation at this site; [14071]

(2) what plans the Department of Environment has to widen Ballyrogan road, Newtownards; and if he will make a statement. [14073]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 4 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to respond to your Parliamentary Questions about road safety at Killaney Corner, Saintfield Road, Ravara and the need to widen Ballyrogan Road, Newtownards.

While there is not recent history of recorded accidents at Killaney Corner it was decided, following a site visit in September 1996, to increase the size of the hazard warning lines on the approaches to the bend. This work was carried out on 9 January 1997. No further work is planned.

Ballyrogan Road is an unclassified road which carries very little traffic. There are no proposals to widen it.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current status of application X96/0176 for retrospective approval for livery accommodation and a new access road to Ballyrogan road, Newtownards. [14074]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Housing Service under its chief executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 5 February 1997:

Mr. Moss has asked me to reply to your Question about the current status of planning application X/96/0176 for retrospective approval for livery accommodation and a new access road to Ballyrogan Road, Newtownards.

This application was first presented to Ards Borough Council on 28 October 1996 with an opinion to approve planning permission, at which time it was deferred at the Council's request. The Council have now requested to meet with the Divisional Roads Manager (DRM) and Divisional Planning Manager (DPM) to discuss the case. The meeting with the DRM was held on 14 January 1997. The meeting with the DPM is scheduled to take place on 11 February 1997. It is hoped that the application can be progressed following consideration of the issues raised at these meetings.

Angling

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to review the need for rod licences on privately owned waters following the remarks of resident magistrate of Mr. John Fyffe at Down magistrates court on 2 January. [14070]

Mr. Ancram: None.

Farms (Negative Equity)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many full-time farm businesses had a negative equity in each year since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [12754]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The results of the annual farm business survey for each of the years 1985 to 1996 show that none of the farms in the survey had a negative equity.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of suckler cow premium payments in Northern Ireland for the current year had been paid by 1 January 1997. [13941]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 3 February 1997]: In Northern Ireland 50.7 per cent. of the 1996 suckler cow applications were cleared for payment by 1 January 1997.

Within the 50.7 per cent, the Department met its citizens charter target of paying, by 31 December, all valid claims received by 30 September. Valid applications received between 31 October and 31 December will be paid within four months of receipt.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Football Matches

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the total aggregate attendances for all competitive fixtures played by each Premier and Nationwide League club in the 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 seasons together with the total number of (a) arrests, (b) ejections and (c) arrests plus ejections as a percentage of total attendance. [13152]

Mr. Sproat: The table shows the total attendances for the Premier and football leagues and domestic cup competitions, the number of arrests, and arrests as a percentage of total attendance for the same period. The table shows that the number of arrests as a proportion of attendances has fallen by 20 per cent. from the 1993–94 season, which was the last season before clubs in the top two divisions went all-seater. A breakdown of arrests at club level could be done only at a disproportionate cost, and club attendance figures are not held centrally. Ejection figures are not available as most ejections are now undertaken by club stewards and it is not possible for the police to record this information.

D'Oyly Carte Opera Company

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received from the Newcastle upon Tyne area in respect of the future of the D'Oyly Carte opera company. [14053]

Mr. Sproat: In addition to the letters I have received from my hon. Friend himself, and the three extremely helpful meetings I have recently had with him, I have received many representations from the Tyneside area about the future of the D'Oyly Carte opera company. Decisions about its future are a matter for the company itself, in the light of the available options. I informed the House on 28 January, Official Report, columns 148–50, that the Arts Council of England had decided to offer the D'Oyly Carte company a grant of £100,000 to enable it to review its operation and to build on relationships with venues and funding partners. Such relationships play an important part for any company in considering its future.

Voluntary Groups

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list each voluntary group part or wholly funded by her Department in the last two years for which the information is available and the amount of money received by each group in that year period. [14145]

Mr. Sproat: The total of grants made by the Department of National Heritage direct to voluntary organisations during 1994–95 was £18,056,840, and during 1995–96 was £18,034,500. This excludes grants to non-departmental public bodies sponsored by the Department, where the grant is largely used to make grants to voluntary organisations; and grants made through the voluntary and community division, which joined the Department in May 1996. Details of each of the voluntary groups funded by the Department during 1994–95 and 1995–96 and the amount of money received have been placed in the Library of the House.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in her Department. [14542]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage, since it was established on 13 April 1992, has no evidence that any computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in the Department.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, her Department has recorded in the last five years. [14543]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage, since it was established on 13 April 1992, has had one case of theft and recorded no cases of computer fraud or hacking.

Lottery Awards (Yorkshire)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list each national lottery award made to each constituency in Yorkshire since the awards were first made. [13838]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 3 February 1997]: As at 31 January 1997, there have been 747 awards totalling more than £173 million made to projects in Yorkshire. I have arranged for a full list to be placed in the Library of the House.

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she proposes to announce proposals relating to the millennium exhibition regional celebration. [12227]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 3 February 1997]: On 30 December, I announced that the Millennium Commission would be consulting on ideas for the millennium festival events throughout the UK. The deadline for responses is 21 February. The commission aims to seek applications for schemes for the millennium festival in the summer. In addition, the millennium exhibition operating company will make an announcement later this year about its national programme, which will take place throughout the UK during 1998 and 1999 in the lead-up to the opening of the exhibition at Greenwich.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

No. 1 Carlton Gardens

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 425–26, if he will provide a breakdown of the £3.5 million spent on the refurbishment of 1, Carlton Gardens. [14648]

Mr. Rifkind: In my answer of 31 January to the hon. Member's question about 1 Carlton Gardens, the figure of £3.5 million was inadvertently given as the cost of refurbishment. The actual cost was about £1.5 million. I apologise for this error.

Major costs comprised:

Building works	841,024
Mechanical and electrical work	240,672
Security works	54,306
Resource costs	111,755
VAT	218,358
	1,466,115

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, indicating how much has been spent on legal advice and from whom it was obtained. [14537]

Mr. Hanley: The amount spent by this Department on legal advice in relation to giving evidence to the Scott inquiry and the preparation of the Government's response to it was £414,567.03. This figure includes £228,446.03, representing the value of legal services charged by the Treasury Solicitor's Department. External legal advice was obtained from Messrs Smith Bernal Reporting Ltd., Messrs Barlow Lyde and Gilbert, and Messrs Allen and Overy.

Former Prisoners of War (Japan)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) will meet a group of hon. Members to discuss compensation for former POWs of the Japanese. [14394]

Mr. Hanley: Yes. As I have made clear to colleagues in the House, I would be happy to meet a group of hon. Members to discuss this general issue, and intend to do so on 13 February.

Mrs. Yasmin Akhtar Sarfraz

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects a decision will be taken on the application to the post in Islamabad by Mrs. Yasmin Akhtar Sarfraz (Ref. Imm/D5213) to join her husband in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [14636]

Dr. Liam Fox: It is policy, on grounds of confidentiality, for Ministers not to comment publicly on individual applications for entry clearance. I will therefore write separately to the hon. Member.

Chevening

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, columns 425–26, if he will list the members of the management board of the Chevening Trust; and if he will make a statement. [14650]

Mr. Rifkind: The board of trustees of the Chevening Trust is as follows:

The Lord Privy Seal: Chairman

The right hon. Lord Cornwallis: Appointed by the Prime Minister; Deputy Chairman

The right hon. Lord Kingsdown: Appointed by the Prime Minister

Mr. W. L. Banks: Appointed by the Secretary of State for the Environment

Mr. Alan Borg: Director of the Victoria and Albert Museum

Mr. D. A. Innes: Local Farmer co-opted in 1983, renewed 1994

Mr. W. W. A. Wells: Curator of Leeds Castle co-opted in 1992

Mr. J. Warde: Local Farmer co-opted in 1994.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 425–26, which organisations have held meetings and conferences at Chevening in each of the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [14649]

Mr. Rifkind: A list of meetings follows. This does not include the trustees' meetings or garden openings. I visit Chevening for about one weekend a month.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, columns 425–26, if he will list the tax exemptions applicable to the Chevening Trust. [14651]

Mr. Rifkind: The Chevening Estate Act 1959 gives the full details of the tax exemptions applicable to the Chevening Trust. In brief, exemption is given from income tax, capital gains tax, capital transfer tax and development land tax.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what use Chevening has been put in the days he has not been in residence; and if he will make a statement. [14647]

Mr. Rifkind: Chevening house and the pleasure gardens are the only parts of the estate used by the nominated person. The estate remains under the ownership of the trustees, and is managed by them. I have agreed with the trustees that the house may be used by them, when I am not in residence, for meetings of senior Government officials. All meetings are co-ordinated through the protocol department of the Foreign Office. The trustees allow the gardens to be opened for charitable purposes three or four times a year. In addition, the trustees hold some of their meetings in the house.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14558]

Mr. Hanley: None as far as we are aware.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14559]

Mr. Hanley: We believe there have been no instances of computer hacking or fraud but 10 cases of theft of computer equipment.

Mr. Ghafoor Ahmed

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Mr. Ghafoor Ahmed who has applied to join his wife in the United Kingdom (Ref: IMM/B/6851) will be interviewed by the post in Islamabad; when a decision wil be taken on his application; and if he will make a statement. [14637]

Dr. Liam Fox: It is policy, on grounds of confidentiality, for Ministers not to comment publicly on individual applications for entry clearance. I will therefore write separately to the hon. Member.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any capacity relating to the Scott inquiry. [14536]

Mr. Hanley: The direct salary cost of officials within this Department wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry since 1992 is approximately £241,500. Other officials were inevitably involved from time to time; their direct salary costs are unquantifiable.

WALES

Fuel Consumption

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the level of consumption of primary fuels and equivalents for energy use in Wales for each year since 1990. [13318]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on energy consumption in Wales was published in table 5.18 of the "Digest of Welsh Statistics 1996" and tables 8.9 to 8.13 of Welsh Economic Trends, No. 16 1995. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Councils (Increased Functions)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the extra duties given to councils since 1979. [13877]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Over the period involved, local government has assumed additional responsibilities in areas such as community care and children's services and relinquished them in others, for example, further education. Also, and at their own initiative, local authorities have developed existing services and promoted new ones, particularly in areas such as leisure and recreation.

Hearing-impaired People (Employment)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he plans to take to assist hearing-impaired people into work; and if he will make a statement. [14048]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Employment Service, through its network of placing, assessment and counselling teams, provides a wide range of specialist services for people with health problems and disabilities, including those with impaired hearing. This includes supported employment programmes and the access to work scheme, which are aimed at helping people with disabilities into jobs or training. In addition, disabled persons have priority in accessing employment and training programmes for which they are eligible and suitable.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hacker in his Department. [14548]

Mr. Hague: On no occasions to my knowledge.

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14549]

Mr. Hague: There have been no incidents of computer hacking, fraud or theft of computer chips to my knowledge. In separate incidents over the past five years, the Department has recorded the loss of a printer, a PC and three laptop systems, one of which was later recovered by the police.

Education Revenue Budget

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet the members of the councils of Wales to discuss the education revenue budget; and if he will make a statement. [14491]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My right hon. Friend met Welsh local authority representatives, in the forum of the Welsh consultative council on local government finance, on 16 December to hear their views on his proposals for the 1997–98 Welsh local government revenue settlement.

My right hon. Friend's final decisions on the settlement were debated and approved by Parliament on 4 February. It will be for each local authority to decide how much of its total resources to allocate to individual services, including education, taking account of its statutory responsibilities and its perception of local needs and priorities.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13457]

Mr. Howard: My Department's budgeted expenditure on publicity for the period January to March 1997 is £3,316,860. Of this total, £1,301,920 is budgeted for the advertising element of public information campaigns and the remaining £2,014,940 is for publications, posters, exhibitions and videos which give the public further information and advice. The total 1996–97 budgeted expenditure for advertising and other public information and advice is £8,854,000.

The figures for each of the past five years are as follows:

	Advertising (fourth quarter) £	Other public information and material (fourth quarter) £	Annual total including advertising and "other" £
1995–96	7,457,645	1,143,581	11,360,220

1992–93	2,089,191	2,031,929	12,983,617
1991–92	3,592,545	2,214,962	10,876,228

Police Expenditure

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers of 13 January, Official Report, columns 48–52, and 15 January, Official Report, columns 265–68, if he will re-calculate the figures based on the final local government finance and final police grant settlements for 1997–98. [13901]

Mr. Maclean: The figures given in my reply to the hon. Member of 13 January, Official Report, columns 48–52, have not changed. Revised figures, previously given in my reply to the hon. Member on 15 January, Official Report, columns 265–68, are set out in the table. The figures provided earlier were based on the provisional settlement which has now been finalised following consultation with police and local authorities.

Police (Wales)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the levels of revenue and capital settlements for Welsh police forces for 1997–98 and the levels requested by those police forces. [14133]

Mr. Maclean: The settlement for police revenue expenditure means that Welsh police authorities can increase their budgets by 3.8 per cent. in 1997–98. The four Welsh police authorities asked for a 6 per cent. increase in resources in 1997–98.

Provision for major capital building projects in 1997–98 has been maintained at current price levels. In addition, the four Welsh police authorities received a total of £5.119 million for general capital needs against a total bid of £20.29 million.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the application of additional rule 1 to each Welsh police force for the revenue and capital settlements for (a) 1997–98 and (b) future years. [14137]

Mr. Maclean: We introduced additional rule 1 to ensure that each police authority and the receiver for the Metropolitan police could benefit in 1997–98 from revenue funding which represents an increase of 2 per cent. or more on the equivalent figure for 1996–97. Funding for the purposes of this comparison comprises police grant, excluding the funding under additional rule 2 for new officers in 1997–98, standard spending assessment, and any SSA reduction grant—damping grant—payable.

The sums received by Welsh forces under this rule will be as follows:

Dyfed Powys	1,176,462
Gwent	1,124,792
North Wales	774,225
South Wales	2,556,399

No decision has been taken on the future of this rule. We will look at the need for additional rules in the light of circumstances at the time.

This rule does not apply to capital allocations.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each police force area in England and Wales (a) the total police revenue grant from his Department, (b) the total capital grant from his Department, (c) the total revenue grant from the Department of the Environment-Welsh Office, (d) other grants to police authorities from central funds and (e) the total of all capital and revenue grants from central funds for each of the years 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98. [13948]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The information requested is set out in the tables.

Police Pension Scheme

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account his Department took of the police pension scheme in the revenue and capital settlements for Welsh police forces in 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [14136]

Mr. Maclean: For 1997–98, on the basis of advice from the Government Actuary's Department, we have increased the allowance made for police pensions needs in the police funding formula. The pensions indicator will account for 12.9 per cent. of total formula funding in England and Wales. The total pensions indicator for Welsh forces will amount to around £43 million, before the application of additional rule 1.

Asylum Seekers (Rochester Prison)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will name the asylum seekers who are currently on hunger strike at Her Majesty's prison Rochester and their countries of origin. [14231]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Government's normal practice is not to disclose the details of individual detainees.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14564]

Mr. Howard: Over the past five years, there have been 16 recorded cases of hacking.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, his Department has recorded in the past five years. [14565]

Mr. Howard: A total of 78 cases have been recorded over the past five years.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what arrangements have been made to provide hon. Members with information about the amendments contained in the resolution tabled on Friday 31 January updating schedule 1 to the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975. [15117]

Mr. Bates: A detailed explanatory note on the resolution tabled on Friday 31 January is available from the Vote Office.

Public Appointments Unit

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current annual budget of the public appointments unit. [14512]

Mr. Freeman: The public appointments unit's budget for 1996–97 is £215,000.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many names are currently held on the public appointments unit register; and what were the figures (a) one year, (b) two years and (c) five years ago. [14511]

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

Year (as at 1 February)	Number of names on the public appointments unit's register
1997	5,285
1996	5,166
1995	5,245

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14568]

Mr. Bates: None.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, his department has recorded in the last five years. [14569]

Mr. Bates: Over the last five years, there have been no cases of computer hacking or fraud in the Office of Public Service and its agencies. there have been 31 thefts of computers or computer chips as follows:

1992–93: 6

1993–94: 1

1994–95: 5

1995–96: 13

1996–97: 6.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by the Deputy Prime Minister's Office on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, indicating how much has been spent on legal advice and from whom it was obtained. [14535]

The Deputy Prime Minister: No payments have been made in relation to my private office or the Office of Public Service, for external advice, including legal advice, in relation to the Scott inquiry.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in the Deputy Prime Minister's Office and the Office of Public Service employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any capacity relating to the Scott inquiry. [14534]

The Deputy Prime Minister: No full-time or part-time officials in my private office or the Office of Public Service were wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry. Some officials have inevitably been involved from time to time as part of their normal duties but the direct salary cost is unquantifiable.

ENVIRONMENT

Mine Water

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been sponsored by his Department into the use of reed beds for the biological treatment and decontamination of contaminated mine water. [13849]

Mr. Gummer: My Department has not sponsored any such projects. However, the Environment Agency, which is responsible for the monitoring and regulation of mine water discharges, is involved in two projects. First, it has set up a pilot project for the biological treatment, including reed beds, of mine water at the former Wheal Jane tin mine in Cornwall; secondly, it is collaborating with other parties on a wetland system to treat discharges into the River Pelenna, which is being partially funded by the EC LIFE programme. The data and experience obtained from these two projects will be valuable in the determination of treatment options for other sites.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the total external support including revenue support and non-domestic rates and (b) the allowable budget requirement for the London borough of Hounslow in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1995–96; and if he will indicate for each the changes between 1995–96 and 1996–97; and the changes between 1996–97 and 1997–98, in cash and percentage terms allowing for proper year-on-year, like-for-like comparisons, and allowing for the transfer of responsibility for care in the community from central Government to local authorities. [14271]

Sir Paul Beresford: The available information is as follows:

	Maximum budget allowed under capping criteria £ million	Increase on adjusted budget for previous year[1] £ million	Per cent.	External support[2] £ million
1995–96	182.511			140.421
1996–97	190.948	5.406	2.91	146.096
1997–98	194.294[3]	3.914	2.06	147.188

[1] For comparisons with the following year, the 1995–96 budget has been adjusted for community care special grant. The 1996–97 budget has been adjusted for the introduction of nursery vouchers, for community care special grant and for capital limits for residential accommodation charges grant.

[2] External support comprises revenue support grant and the redistributed amount from the non-domestic rates pool. No estimates of external support are available on a year-on-year, like-for-like basis for comparing 1995–96 with 1996–97. Adjusted figures for external support for 1996–97 were placed in the Library in my reply to the hon. Member for North-West Durham (Mrs. Armstrong) on 13 January 1997. The adjusted external support for 1996–97 for the London borough of Hounslow was shown as £145.5 million. This figure did not take into account any changes in the estimated aggregates of SSA reduction grant or police grants that would need to be made in order to bring the figure for 1996–97 on to a fully consistent basis.

[3] Provisional.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14474]

Sir Paul Beresford: The number of staff is 5.35, at a cost of about £150,000.

Departmental Decisions (Judicial Review)

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many decisions by his Department were challenged through judicial review in Session 1995–96; and in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [14371]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information is not held centrally in a form which would enable the Secretary of State to answer this question without incurring disproportionate cost.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions his Department has used headhunting consultants for public appointment purposes in the last two years. [14515]

Sir Paul Beresford: No central record is maintained of the use of headhunting consultants for public appointments made by my Department. I regret that the information cannot be provided in the form requested.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department; [14554]

(2) how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14555]

Sir Paul Beresford: There have been 16 cases of suspected or attempted computer hacking—none of which were proven to have resulted in illegal access—no cases of computer fraud, but 150 cases of computer theft, including thefts of computer chips, reported by my Department, including its agencies and non-departmental public bodies, over the last five years.

Radioactive Waste Storage

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what evaluation his Department has made of the (i) short, (ii) medium and (iii) long-term safety of the storage of (a) liquid and (b) vitrified high-activity long-lived radio active waste at Sellafield. [14088]

Mr. Page: I have been asked to reply.

The safety of stored liquid high-activity waste at Sellafield has been fully evaluated by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate. In 1995, HSE published a report entitled "The Safety of the Storage of Liquid High-Level Waste at BNFL Sellafield" setting out HSE's assessment of the safety issues involved. This report concludes that:

> current programmes should lead to the backlog of liquid high-activity waste currently stored at Sellafield's high-level waste storage facility being converted to vitrified waste by around 2015; and that > safety provisions for the storage of high-activity liquid up until then are acceptable,

A copy of that report is held in the Library of the House.

Arrangement for the storage of vitrified high-activity waste at Sellafield have also been fully evaluated. HSE has concluded that adequate safety provisions have been made for the operational life of the vitrified store which is expected to be at least 50 years. HSE will continue to monitor the safety of the storage of high-activity waste at Sellafield.

TREASURY

Tax Allowances

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many income tax allowances are available to reduce the tax paid by an individual; and what would be the total additional tax paid in each case if the allowances were to be withdrawn. [14042]

Mr. Jack: The latest information about the costs of income tax allowances and reliefs has been published in table 1.6 and appendix B.1 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1996". A copy can be found in the Library.

Oil and Gas Revenues

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlay the figures for the cumulative total for Government revenues from oil and gas production contained in his answer of 10 July 1996, Official Report, column 228 and 13 January, Official Report, column 23. [14270]

Mr. Jack: Government revenues from oil and gas production include corporation tax paid by North sea oil and gas production companies, before setting off their advance corporation tax payments; petroleum revenue tax; oil royalties; and, in 1981–82 and 1982–83, receipts from supplementary petroleum duty—SPD. Receipts from the latter were not included in the answer of 13 January. Including SPD receipts, and using the Budget forecasts of North sea tax revenues and the GDP deflator in 1996–97, the cumulative total for Government revenues from oil and gas production 1979–80 to 1996–97 expressed in 1996–97 prices is over £133 billion.

Unit Trusts

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the unit trust industry about the proposals in clause 105 of the Finance Bill. [15201]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Clause 105 of the Finance Bill contains proposals to replace the present stamp duty regime for repurchases of units by unit trust managers by a new stamp duty reserve tax regime. At present, a repurchase of units by the managers is liable to stamp duty at 0.5 per cent., but the duty may be repaid if the unit are cancelled within two months and the underlying investments are sold. The unit trust industry has criticised this regime because of the record-keeping required to check whether units are cancelled within two months, and because it is not certain, at the time of a repurchase, whether or not duty will ultimately be repayable.

Clause 105 seeks to deal with these problems by introducing a new stamp duty reserve tax regime which would remove the right to a repayment when units are cancelled, but would balance that by reducing the rate of tax on a repurchase to 0.2 per cent. This was intended to meet the criticisms which have been made of the present rules, and to raise broadly the same revenue as now but more simply and certainly. The industry has, however, now made representations that this particular approach would cause problems for some investors, and that it would prefer the present regime to continue for the time being while it considers possible alternatives. We are prepared to accommodate their request, and we will expect the industry to come forward with proposals which are capable of dealing with the criticisms made of the present regime while continuing to raise the same revenue as now.

We therefore intend to withdraw the proposals in clause 105, and leave the present stamp duty regime to continue for the time being. The regulations we will be making for the stamp duty and stamp duty reserve tax treatment of open-ended investment companies will adopt a similar approach.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 10 December 1996, Official Report, columns 125–26, if he will update the column relating to 1997–98 of the table headed "Private finance initiative: estimated capital spending arising from signed deals". [13893]

Mr. Jack: Table 5.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98", and my answer of 10 December were derived from returns made by Departments as part of the pre-Budget expenditure round. Arrangements have been put in place for the collection and reporting of information on the private finance initiative to the Treasury on a quarterly basis, but the ultimate responsibility for individual figures lies with each department. Collecting information centrally on more than a quarterly basis could be achieved only at disproportionate cost and would distract officials from the important task of securing value for money deals.

Self-Assessment

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the compliance cost assessment published on 29 November 1994 remains his current estimate of how much the introduction of self-assessment in April will cost; and what plans he has to publish a more up to date figure of how much the new system has cost to set up. [14308]

Mr. Jack: I can confirm that the Inland Revenue's compliance cost assessment in November 1994 remains the Government's current estimate of the impact of self-assessment on business compliance costs. The Inland Revenue plans to review its compliance cost assessment after the new system has bedded down and business and the Inland Revenue have gained practical experience of its operation.

Tax Evasion

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of evasion of payments of taxes administered by the Inland Revenue have been discovered in each year since 1990; and what has been the yield. [14508]

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the written answers which I gave him on 26 October 1995, Official Report, columns 727–28 and 11 December 1996, Official Report, columns 207–08.

Taxation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of (a) the additional tax revenues which would accrue to the Exchequer and (b) the reduction in Government spending, in each of the next five years if the annual rate of growth of gross domestic product in the United Kingdom were 0.25 per cent. per annum higher than assumed in the forecasts contained in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98"; and if he will make a statement. [12768]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The table shows estimates of the effect on government receipts and spending if the annual rate of growth of GDP were $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. per annum higher than forecast in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98". These are based upon the estimates set out in HM Treasury occasional paper No.4 "Public Finances and the Cycle". All such estimates are inevitably uncertain.

	Per cent. of GDP
	1997–98	1998–99	1999–00	2000–01	2001–02
General Government receipts	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	$\frac{1}{4}$	$\frac{1}{4}$
General Government expenditure	[1]—	$-\frac{1}{4}$	$-\frac{1}{4}$	$-\frac{1}{4}$	$-\frac{1}{4}$

[1] Negligible.

In both cases, the budget balance continues to improve, and is in surplus by the end of the projection period.

Rudolf Hess (Death Certificate)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what account was taken of the authority provided by the four power protocol dated 6 April 1954 in the decision (a) to cancel the death certificate of Rudolf Hess on 2 August 1995 and (b) to refuse to reinstate the death certificate either (i) in its original form or (ii) in the amended form requested by his next of kin; [13488]

(2) if he considered proposals to cancel the death certificate of Rudolf Hess before the application by Rudolf Hess's next of kin on 24 April 1995 to amend the details of the death certificate; [13486]

(3) what factors underlay the decision to cancel the death certificate of Rudolf Hess dated 19 August 1987. [13487]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The Registrar General of England and Wales decided to cancel the death registration of Rudolph Hess on the basis that the entry had not been made in accordance with statute. Once it was known that the entry had been made in error, there was no basis on which to reinstate the entry or amend its content. The relevant legislation provides only for the registration outside England and Wales of the births and deaths of members of the armed forces, service civilians and families.

The application of Rudolph Hess's next of kin to amend his death entry drew attention to the fact that the registration had not been made within the legal provisions. The status of the registration had not been questioned previously.

Dorneywood

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 421, if he will list the dates (a) he and (b) his predecessor have been in residence at Dorneywood since 1993. [14652]

Mr. Rifkind: (a) Never. (b) Never.

Revenue and Expenditure Balance (Scotland)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, columns 25–26, if he will estimate the total surplus or deficit of Government expenditure and revenue in Scotland for each year from 1997–98 to 2001–02 assuming a constant relationship between the Scottish deficit, as published in "Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland 1994–95" and the United Kingdom general Government borrowing requirement excluding privatisation proceeds and North sea revenues for 1994–95 and including in the Scottish total for each year a 90 per cent. share of North sea revenue and an 8.8 per cent. share of privatisation proceeds using the projections for (a) the United Kingdom Government borrowing requirement (b) projections for privatisation proceeds and other financial transactions published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98" and (c) the projections for North sea revenues published in that report and produced by the Inland Revenue for later years. [13908]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The table provides the information necessary to make the calculations requested by the hon. Member. However, as the hon. Member should be fully aware, his proposed methodology is a ridiculous way of either projecting the Scottish deficit, or estimating the Scottish deficit in past years.

The Scottish contribution to the borrowing requirement depends on the proportion of total Government expenditure incurred, and the proportion of total Government revenues raised, in Scotland. Even if each of these proportions were to remain stable over time at their 1994–95 levels, there is no reason why the ratio of borrowing in Scotland to that in the UK should also be stable. This is a straightforward arithmetical truism. In practice, the ratio changes markedly between years. Moreover, in some recent years, Scotland has had a deficit when the UK has had a budget surplus.

It follows that estimates of the cumulative Scottish deficit since 1978–79 and-or projections of it, based on the assumption of a stable ratio between the Scottish and UK deficits, are rendered totally meaningless.

My answer of 13 January incorporated the same assumption, at the hon. Member's request. I am pleased to set the answer in its proper context by emphasising how far that assumption is from the reality of Scotland's expenditure and revenue flows.

Budget forecasts and projections of the General Government borrowing requirement (GGBR), North Sea tax revenues and privatisation proceeds

£ billion

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
GGBR	19.6	12	4	–7	–18
Privatisation proceeds (PPs)	2.0	1.5	1	1	1
North sea tax revenues	4.1	3.9	3.6	3.6	3.4
GGBR excluding PPs and North sea tax revenues	25.8	18	8	–3	–13

Note:

The Scottish GGBR excluding North sea tax revenues and privatisation proceeds was £8.2 billion in 1994–95 (source: "Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland", table 12). The comparable figure for the UK was £45.8 billion.

Sources:

Tables 4.1 and 4.6, "Financial Statement and Budget Report, 1996", and Inland Revenue.Figures for 1997–98 are forecasts, figures for later years are projections. Figures for the GGBR in 1998–99 and beyond are rounded to the nearest £1 billion. Constituent items may not sum to totals because of rounding.

DEFENCE

Chemical Weapons (Iraq)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when United Nations inspectors were informed by the Iraqi authorities that the ammunition dump at Kamisiyah in southern Iraq blown up by US troops had contained chemical war weapons; what consideration his Department gave at that time to any possible connection between the destruction of the ammunition dump and undiagnosed illnesses among service personnel who served in the Gulf war; what more recent consideration has been given to a possible connection; and if he will make a statement. [14075]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Queen's Flight (Helicopters)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) type and (b) number of helicopters are currently operated by the Queen's Flight; when they were transferred to the flight; and when they are due for replacement. [14639]

Mr. Soames: No 32 (the Royal) Squadron currently operates two Wessex HC4 helicopters which entered service with the Queen's Flight in 1969, and two Twin Squirrel helicopters which entered service on 1 April 1996. No decisions have yet been taken on the replacement of the Wessex. The Twin Squirrels are operated by the RAF under a lease arrangement.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in each of the last 10 years the Wessex helicopters of the Queen's flight were used by members of the royal family. [14641]

Mr. Soames: The Wessex helicopters of No. 32 (the Royal) Squadron and, prior to 1 April 1995, the Queen's Flight were used by members of the royal family on the following number of occasions:

1987: 420
1988: 423
1989: 496
1990: 369
1991: 534
1992: 449
1993: 367
1994: 381
1995: 393
1996: 305.

Guard Duty, Plymouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the average number of hours worked per week, (b) the average number of hours worked per day and (c) the number of guards working 12-hour shifts in respect of the service personnel on guard duty at Stanchane barracks and royal naval base, Plymouth. [14392]

Mr. Soames: Service guards in the naval base and Stonehouse barracks work a mixture of rostered shifts and time on other duties. Twelve-hour shifts, including an element of stand-by time, are worked in the naval base and over the year guards average a 42-hour working week. Royal Marines generally undertake security duties on a more rotational basis. When employed on guard in Stonehouse barracks they generally work 24-hour shifts, including time on stand-by with sleeping facilities, followed by 24 hours off.

RAF Valley (Helicopters)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Wessex search and rescue helicopters based at RAF Valley were replaced by Sea Kings. [14640]

Mr. Soames: The timing of the replacement of Wessex helicopters based at RAF Valley with Sea King Mk3s is linked to the introduction into operational RAF service elsewhere of the Sea King Mk3A. This has been delayed by unforeseen technical difficulties. Remedial work is, however, progressing well and we currently estimate that the Sea King Mk3A will enter operational service in mid-summer. This will permit the redeployment of Sea King Mk3s to RAF Valley soon afterwards.

Army Regiments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army regiments there were in (a) 1979 and (b) 1997. [14488]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is given in the following table:

Number of major army units at 1 April 1979 and 1 April [1]1997

Corps	1 April 1979	1 April 1997
Royal armoured corps	[2]19	[3]11
Royal artillery	[3]22	[2]16
Royal engineers	[4]9	10
Infantry [5]	56	40
Special air service	1	1
Army air corps	6	5
Royal corps of signals	[2]12	[2]11
Total	125	94

[1] The table covers regular Army units of battalion size or equivalent in the major combat arms.
[2] Includes training regiments.
[3] Excludes the Household Cavalry mounted regiment.
[4] Includes the Queen's Gurkha engineers.
[5] Including Gurkha battalions.

Airborne Stand-off Radar Procurement

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's independent advisers on the ASTOR procurement project. [14489]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency provides my Department's team with specialist technical advice on the airborne stand-off radar programme.

Food Supply Tenders

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the values of the tenders from (a) the Navy, Army and Air Force Institute and (b) Booker Foodservice in the recent competition for the supply of food for the armed forces. [14521]

Mr. Soames: The tender values are commercially confidential and are not published under exemption 7 of the code of practice on access to Government information. I can, however, assure my hon. Friend that the tenders were scrutinised in detail to establish which provided best value for money and there was a clear margin in favour of Booker Foodservice. The estimated value of the contract will be in excess of £400 million over five years.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, indicating how much has been spent on legal advice and from whom it was obtained. [14529]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The amount spent by my Department on external advice, including legal advice, in relation to individuals giving evidence to the Scott inquiry and the preparation of the Government's response to it is £216,117; this consists entirely of legal advice. This figure includes £196,555 representing the value of legal services charged by the Treasury Solicitor's department. External legal advice was obtained by individual MOD witnesses from Lovell, White, Durrant and Peter Carter-Ruck and Partners.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any capacity relating to the Scott inquiry. [14528]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The direct salary cost of officials within my Department wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry since 1992 was approximately £255,000. Other officials were inevitably involved from time to time; their direct salary cost is unquantifiable.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the advantages and disadvantages of travel by the royal yacht in relation to travel by other modes of transport; and if he will make a statement. [14634]

Mr. Soames: The royal yacht is a national asset which projects the image of Britain, provides a dignified platform for state and official occasions, assists in promoting British economic interests and provides a suitable royal residence overseas. It is not a primary means of royal transport.

Publicity

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on advertising in each of the last 12 months. [14250]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 5 February]: Information relating to expenditure incurred on advertising in individual months is not available. An annual breakdown of expenditure on publicity and advertising is contained in the 1995–96 "Ministry of Defence Performance Report" (Cm 3055) (Table 9–1), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

SCOTLAND

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many redundancies will result at Greater Glasgow health board from the restructuring being undertaken; what is the range of jobs affected; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the restructuring on patient care. [14034]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Greater Glasgow health board's restructuring is consistent with the role of health boards set out in Professor Shields's report on the roles and responsibilities of health boards. A total of 60 posts will be saved by Greater Glasgow health board, nearly half of which comprise senior and middle management posts. The restructuring and associated savings in non-staff costs will release £3 million from management costs to be reinvested in patient care.

East Ayrshire Health Services

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions have been held with the private finance bidder for the East Ayrshire community hospital; what was the subject of these discussions; and if he will make a statement. [14609]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Officials from the Scottish Office Department of Health have only once met the bidder. The discussion took place last summer and was about the private finance initiative in general and not the East Ayrshire community hospital project.

Discussion with bidders on specific projects is normally a matter for the trust or health board concerned, not the officials within the Department.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what alternative provision has been made in east Ayrshire to take account of the closure of facilities at Ballochmyle hospital together with the delay in the provision of services at East Ayrshire community hospital. [14610]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Ballochmyle hospital would not close until alternative facilities were available.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions officers of his Department have had with (a) Ayrshire and Arran health board and (b) Ayrshire and Arran Community NHS trust about the East Ayrshire community trust; and what further discussions are planned with each body. [14608]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Office officials are in frequent contact with Ayrshire and Arran health board and the Ayrshire and Arran Community NHS trust to discuss East Ayrshire hospital and other topics. Further discussions will take place as required.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the delay in approving one of the options for funding the East Ayrshire community hospital; when he expects that decision to be made; and if he will make a statement. [14611]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The only representations received have been from the hon. Member. The trust and its preferred bidder are currently engaged in detailed negotiations over proposals under the private finance initiative which will come to a conclusion shortly.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision is made in his Department's budget for the current and future years for the funding of the East Ayrshire community hospital by the public funding method outside the private finance initiative. [14612]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Public capital funds are held in a capital pool until a business case is approved for a publicly funded scheme. No specific provision is made for any scheme until approval is given. Each business case submission is assessed on its own merits and in terms of its national priority.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the facilities to be provided in the proposed new East Ayrshire community hospital; what changes have occurred since the original specifications were approved by Ayrshire and Arran health board; and if he will make a statement. [14613]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The base specification of facilities is shown in the table:

	Facilities to be provided
GP medium acute rehabilitation unit	24 beds
Out-patient services for	15,000 consultant attendances 13,000 paramedical attendances
Day hospital	12 frail elderly places 6 mental health places 6 young physically disabled places

	Facilities to be provided
Continuing respite care	25 frail elderly places 25 mental health places

An option to include 15 further frail elderly continuing/respite care places was also specified. No changes to the original specification have been made.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the PFI projects in NHS provisions which (a) have been completed, (b) are currently under construction (c) have been approved by his Department and (d) have been submitted to his Department and are a awaiting approval. [14614]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The PFI projects which fall into these categories and on which information is held by the Department are listed. In addition there are other smaller projects developed on the same principles which fall within trust and health board delegated limits and for which information is not held centrally.

Projects completed

Health board/NHS trust	Project description
Law Hospital NHS trust	Provision and operation of a hospital information system
Edinburgh Healthcare NHS trust	Provision of 60 bed nursing home (Ferryfield house)
Ayrshire and Arran health board (Irvine)	Provision of 90 elderly care beds
Ayrshire and Arran health board (Irvine)	Provision of 90 elderly care beds
Lanarkshire health board (Bellshill)	Provision of 90 elderly care beds
Dundee Teaching Hospitals NHS trust	SMAC analysis
Grampian health board	Provision of 25 beds for mentally ill at Spynie hospital
Greater Glasgow health board (Darnley)	Provision of 120 elderly care beds
Greater Glasgow health board (Ruchill)	Provision of 120 elderly care beds
Greater Glasgow health board (Rutherglen)	Provision of 180 elderly care beds
Greater Glasgow health board (Shettleston)	Provision of 120 elderly care beds
Lanarkshire health board (Cumbernauld)	Provision of 40 elderly care beds
Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS trust	CT and MRI scanners
Lothian and Forth Valley health boards	Clinical waste disposal
Northern NHS trusts and health boards	Clinical waste disposal

Projects currently under construction or implementation

Health board/NHS trust	Project description
Perth and Kinross Healthcare NHS trust	Provision and operation of an integrated healthcare information system
Grampian health board	Provision and operation of a community hospital in Kincardineshire (Stonehaven)

Projects approved

Health Board/NHS trust	Project description
Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health Services NHS trust	In-patient mental health services at Stobhill hospital
Yorkhill NHS trust	Provision and operation of a hospital information support system

Projects Awaiting Approval

None have been formally submitted for final approval but several have been submitted in draft and are under discussion with the NHS trust or health board involved.

Speech and Language Disorders

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what specialised training is provided in Scotland to teachers of children with specific speech and language disorders. [13454]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The nature and provision of training in Scotland for teachers of children with specific speech and language disorders are matters for education authorities to decide. Education authorities have access to funding from the Scottish Office towards the cost of in-service training of teachers and other staff whose job entails working with children with special educational needs. In 1997–98, the specific grant for special educational needs training is £1.58 million.

Sheep Dips

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that farmers and landowners in Scotland are made aware of the dangers to the environment involved in the use of sheep dips based on synthetic pyrethroids. [13771]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I have nothing further to add to the reply I offered my hon. Friend on 25 November 1996. The Scottish code of good practice for the prevention of environmental pollution from agricultural activity is currently being revised by the Scottish agricultural pollution group. We have drawn my hon. Friend's concern to the attention of that group.

Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of state for scotland what is his current estimate of the revenue from non-domestic rate income in Scotland in 1997–98, broken down by the (a) industrial, (b) commercial and (c) other sectors. [14110]

Mr. Kynoch: Non-domestic rate income in Scotland for 1997–98 is provisionally estimated at £1,335 million. No estimates are available of this income broken down in the form requested. The table shows the percentage of total rateable value in Scotland accounted for by non-domestic subjects in the (a) industrial, (b) commercial and (c) other categories in April 1996, the latest date for which the information is available. Shares of rateable value do not give a precise estimate of shares of rates paid, as reliefs and exemptions may differ between different categories of subject.

Percentage of rateable value by type of subject, Scotland: April 1996

Type of subject	Percentage of total rateable value
Industrial	16.8
Commercial	54.0
Other	29.2

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of suckler cow premium payments in Scotland for the current year had been paid by 1 January 1997. [13939]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 February 1997]: By 1 January 1997, the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department had made 3 per cent. of the advance payments under the suckler cow premium scheme. By the end of January, 79 per cent. had been made. This is approximately the same percentage as this time last year.

Drinking Offences

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many arrests and prosecutions in connection with the drink ban byelaws there have been in each police division in Strathclyde since their introduction. [14029]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 February 1997]: Separate statistical information on criminal proceedings in connection with byelaws banning the consumption of alcohol in designated public places was collected from the beginning of 1992. The table presents the available information for 1992, 1993 and 1994, the latest year for which statistics are available. During this period, byelaws were in force in Motherwell from April 1991 and East Kilbride from November 1994.

Number of persons proceeded against where the main charge was under byelaws banning the consumption of alcohol in designated public places, Strathclyde, 1992 to 1994.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received relating to the availability of the electoral register on computer disk; and what instructions he has issued to electoral registration officers to make computerised copies of the register available. [14153]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 February 1997]: My right hon. Friend has not received any representations on this matter. Any such representations, would, however, normally be addressed to the local electoral registration officers, who have responsibility for the electoral register. A circular letter issued by the Scottish Office Home Department on 16 December 1996 reminded electoral registration officers of the provisions in regulation 53(5) of the Representation of the People (Scotland) Regulations 1986 about the availability of data, on payment of the fee, to persons entitled to receive free copies of the register in manual form. Regulation 53(4) of the 1986 regulations covers the form in which the electoral registration officer is obliged to make these data available.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) electors and (b) overseas electors were registered on the electorial registers (i) in force since February 1996, (ii) compiled in October 1996 and (iii) in force in April 1992 for each parliamentary constituency in Scotland. [14154]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 February 1997]: The information available is set out in the table. Figures compiled in October 1996 are provisional and based on the draft register. Specific statistics, such as figures for overseas electors, will not be collected until after the final register is published later this month.

Electoral statistics collected from the 1996 electoral registers are primarily based upon the new parliamentary constituencies which take effect at the next general election. No statistics for the existing constituencies other than the total electorate are held centrally for the electoral register in force since 1996. No figures based on the current constituencies are available for the draft register compiled in October 1996.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Coal Miners (Public Safety)

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what investigations have been undertaken by the Coal Authority in respect of the 18 ft hole reported to have opened up in Wednesbury on 15 January; and if he will make a statement. [14322]

Mr. Page: The Coal Authority is aware of what has been described as a mineshaft collapse on the site of a construction project on the Holyhead road, Wednesbury. It has not been asked to investigate the collapse, which they understand has been dealt with by a contractor acting on behalf of the black country development agency.

I have asked the Coal Authority to write to the hon. Member about this in greater detail.

Regional Assistance

Mr. Pearson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each region the number and value of outline bids submitted for (a) sector challenge funds and (b) the local competitiveness challenge funds; and if he will list each region's budget allocation. [14227]

Mr. Page: The following tables show the number of bids received and funding sought at outline stage for both the local and sector challenge. While regional allocations have been drawn up for local challenge these are only indicative, as it is Ministers who take decisions on funding on challenge projects. No such indicative allocations apply under sector challenge as bids are expected to benefit the UK as a whole.

Fireworks

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further consultation he proposes to conduct in relation to the use and control of fireworks; what is his timetable; and if he will make a statement. [14415]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I expect to make an announcement shortly of the conclusions arising from my review of the voluntary and statutory controls on fireworks. If it is considered appropriate to tighten the existing statutory controls, a public consultation on specific proposals will be undertaken.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made in the competition for contracts to supply electricity generated by renewable sources of energy under the fourth renewables non-fossil fuel obligation order, NFFO4; and if he will make a statement. [15118]

Mr. Page: I have today laid before Parliament an order requiring the regional electricity companies in England and Wales to make arrangements to secure 843 MW of new electricity generating capacity from a range of renewable energy sources. This is the fourth and largest renewables order under the non-fossil fuel obligation arrangements and covers the period 1 May 1997 to 30 December 2016.

Responses by bidders to the tender invitation were very impressive. The industry has achieved an average price for these projects of 3.46p per kilowatt hour, almost one penny better than the 4.35p achieved in NFFO3. Real convergence with market prices is clearly now within reach and our strategy of stimulating a competitive renewables market is working well. This has allowed me to do more and set an order which is larger than I envisaged when announcing NFFO4 in November 1995.

I now expect the RECs to meet their obligations arising from this NFFO4 order by signing contracts, through their agent the Non-Fossil Purchasing Agency Ltd., for 195 projects, details of which are tabulated.

Summary of fourth renewables order (NFFO4)

Technology	Contracted capacity for NFFO4 MW DNC	Number of projects	Lowest contracted price p/kWh	Capacity weighted average price p/kWh	Highest contracted price p/kWh
Landfill Gas	173.7	70	2.8	3.01	3.2
Waste-Fired Combined Heat and Power	115.3	10	2.79	3.23	3.4
Waste-Fired Fluidised Bed Combustion	126.0	6	2.66	2.75	2.8
Small Scale Hydro Electricity	13.3	31	3.8	4.25	4.4
Wind Energy larger than 0.768 MW DNC	330.4	48	3.11	3.53	3.8
Wind Energy 0.768 MW DNC or less	10.4	17	4.09	4.57	4.95
Anaerobic Digestion of Agricultural Wastes	6.6	6	5.1	5.17	5.2
Biomass Gasification of Pyrolysis	67.4	7	5.49	5.51	5.79
Total	843.1	195	—	3.46	—

Note:
DNC is declared net capacity, the maximum power available, and takes into account the intermittent nature of wind energy.

Successful generators will need to obtain planning permission for their projects if they have not already done so. Award of a NFFO contract does not confer any special privilege in the planning approval process which must be carried out in the normal way. I expect generators to develop their projects with care and sensitivity and so ensure the long-term prosperity of their industry.

NFFO has a very high international reputation as a process that works well in stimulating the renewables market for the most promising renewables and encouraging manufacturing industry. Over 428 MW of capacity is already operational under NFFO1, NFFO2 and NFFO3.

Our aim is to work towards 1,500 MW of new renewables-based generation capacity by 2000. This objective requires steady convergence under successive orders between the price paid under the NFFO and the market price, which is being achieved through effective competition in the allocation of NFFO contracts.

The Government took this into account in determining the size of the bands. In particular, they took into account the cost and quality of proposals received, and the assessment of the implications for the policy objective of helping the different renewable technologies to enter the commercial electricity generating market.

By having separate bands, we have ensured that the technologies involved have the opportunity of contributing to the capacity required under the order, to the extent that is appropriate to each particular technology.

Policy will be reviewed prior to the fifth order, NFFO5, in 1998 and will take into account progress under NFFO3 and this larger order, NFFO4. Over the next few years, I expect increasing numbers of renewable projects to be developed and be able to generate in the liberalised electricity market without needing support under the NFFO arrangements.

This will illustrate the success of our strategy to develop renewables-based technologies which bring with them environmental benefits from using sustainable energy sources; help to secure diversity of energy supplies; and develop an internationally competitive industry.

I have made the order after consultation with the RECs and the Director General of Electricity Supply. His advice has been deposited in the Library of the House and was published by the Office of Electricity Regulation on 31 January 1997.

Directors' Emoluments

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to amend the statutory disclosure requirements on directors' emoluments. [15119]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Following extensive consultation, I have today laid draft regulations before Parliament to amend the statutory disclosure requirements on directors' emoluments.

The main Greenbury recommendations, which were implemented in December 1995 when they were incorporated in the stock exchange listing rules, have done much to improve disclosure of directors' pay and to increase the accountability of directors to their shareholders. These draft regulations will bring the Companies Act into line with the Greenbury recommendations and will ensure that listed companies will not have to make two sets of disclosures to comply with the listing rules and Companies Act respectively.

In the case of unlisted companies, the new provisions will streamline present disclosure requirements.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14561]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Central records of IT security incidents reported within my Department for the period in question show:

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Hacking incidents (excluding minor instances of computer misuse)	0	2	1	0	0
Theft (including theft of computer chips and components)	10	13	31	44	15

None of the hacking incidents resulted in a successful attack. The figures include next step agencies only for years where they were covered by central records.

Mr. Foster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions in each of the past five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14560]

Mr. Taylor: Over the past five years, there have been no reported incidents where my Department's computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers. There were three recorded unsuccessful hacking attempts, two of which were by attackers external to the Department. These figures include next steps agencies only for the years where they were covered by central records.

Department-funded Schemes

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list each of the schemes currently funded by his Department to provide support to industry and the science base, indicating the commencement date, the annual funding to date, the termination date and future budget commitments; [14376]

(2) if he will list the schemes to support industry and the science base funded by his Department which have been cancelled in each of the last 10 years indicating the reasons for the cancellation. [14377]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Details of my Department's funding to support industry and the science base are given in the annual expenditure plans reports—Office of Public Service and Science; Cabinet Office Reports for Office of Science and Technology activities prior to 1996–97—copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The additional information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Offshore Drilling Platforms

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the preliminary guidelines prepared by the International Exploration and Production Forum covering the re-injection of oil-based muds from offshore drilling platforms. [14844]

Mr. Page: My Department has reviewed these guidelines and found them to be useful. They give detailed advice on planning, monitoring, reporting and operating re-injection systems and recognise the conditions under which re-injection may not be advisable.

Defence Equipment Exports (United Arab Emirates)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what licences for defence equipment exports to the United Arab Emirates have been issued since October 1995. [14248]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 5 February 1997]: The details of export licences issued to the United Arab Emirates between 1 October 1995 and 31 January 1997 are in the tables, which show the number of licences issued under each category of part III, group 1 of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Visit (Salcombe)

10. Mr. Steen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make an official visit to Salcombe in South Hams. [13141]

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Pay Review Bodies

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the reports and recommendations of the pay review bodies. [15116]

The Prime Minister: The 1997 reports of the five pay review bodies have been published today. Copies are available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. The reports are substantial documents representing the considerable commitment of the chairmen and members of the review bodies, and the Government are grateful to them for their contribution and for the time they have devoted to this work.

Pay settlements for these groups have to be consistent with the Government's approach to public sector pay. Specifically, under this approach, the cost of pay settlements should be met from existing spending plans, without recourse to the reserve. This position was re-affirmed in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's statement on public sector pay on 17 September 1996 and in the Government's evidence to the pay review bodies.

Last year, the Government accepted the recommendations of the pay review bodies, but introduced staging because they represented a significant step up in the level of public sector pay settlements and because the staging helped to accommodate the costs within spending plans.

In evidence to the pay review bodies, the Government proposed that recommendations this year should be lower than last year to drop back from those high levels and to reflect lower inflation and the absence of other pay pressures in the economy generally. Our continuing determination to control costs in the public sector means that spending plans have again been tightly drawn. The recommendations this year have to be considered in that context.

The main pay recommendations are as follows:

The Armed Forces pay review body has recommended a range of increases in daily rates of between 3 and 3.4 per cent. Taking all aspects of pay, including new bonus arrangements, the average increase is 3.3 per cent.

The Doctors and Dentists review body has recommended general increases of 3.4 per cent.

The review body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine has recommended an increase of 3.3 per cent. in national pay scales.

The School Teachers review body has recommended a 3.3 per cent. increase in teachers' pay.

The Senior Salaries review body has recommended:

(a) increases of 2.75 per cent. in the minimum and maximum values of each of the pay ranges for the senior civil service. Within the ranges, Departments will determine individual salaries on the basis of performance. The Government expect the cost of the settlement to be absorbed by the final savings arising from staff reductions following senior management reviews;

(b) increases for senior military officers in the range 2.75 to 6 per cent. averaging 3.7 per cent., including changes in pay structures;

(c) restructuring of judicial pay, following a two-year review, with pay increases in the range 3 to 7 per cent., averaging 6 per cent.

Separately, for armed forces personnel within the AFPRB's remit, there is a pay addition of 1 per cent. carried forward from last year's report to reflect the outcome of the quinquennial review of the value of armed forces pensions in comparison with the private sector. Similarly, the DDRB has recommended a pay addition of 0.35 per cent. to reflect narrower pension differentials with the private sector, with a further 0.35 per cent. next year.

The basic pay increases average some 3.3 per cent. This is lower than the corresponding average of 4 per cent. last year. This is a move in the right direction, but the recommendations are still high considering the general level of public sector pay settlements in the past year, and higher than the retail prices index. It would be difficult to meet the costs from existing spending plans without squeezing services.

The Government have always said that they will accept recommendations of the pay review bodies unless there are compelling reasons not to. We intend to accept the recommendations this year but, as last year, we intend to stage their introduction. Staging the recommendations for the coming year will make it possible to accommodate the costs within spending plans without prejudicing the planned level of service delivery. In addition, staging reflects our view that settlements should be lower this year both generally throughout the public sector and specifically for the pay review body groups.

We shall implement a first staged payment of 2 per cent. on 1 April, with the balance of the recommended increases to be paid from 1 December. This meets the requirements on affordability and the approach to public sector pay, while implementing the increases recommended by the review bodies in full by the end of this year.

The staging arrangements will apply to all groups. They will extend to the recommended increases in the minima and maxima of the senior civil service pay ranges and the awards Departments will determine for the senior civil service within the framework set by the SSRB recommendations.

We welcome the NPRB's continuing support for the principles of local pay determination, and we will consider further the NPRB recommendations on the future structure and coverage of the local pay arrangements.

We note the AFPRB recommendations for changes in certain allowances which are related to the proposals of the independent review of the armed forces manpower, career and remuneration structures. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence is considering the Government's response to the review.

The separate pensions-related adjustments in this year's recommendations by the DDRB and those in last year's recommendations by the AFPRB will be paid as recommended from 1 April.

The pay of Members of Parliament is linked to the pay ranges for the senior civil service. It follows that Members of Parliament and Ministers should be treated on the same basis as other groups, with an increase of 2 per cent. from 1 April and the balance on 1 December.

The SSRB report includes the outcome of its two-year review of judicial pay. We are grateful to it for this work. The recommendations give some members of the judiciary significant pay increases, but this is supported by the findings of the review. We intend to accept the recommendations as proposed, subject to the same staging as other groups.

The table summarises the main pay recommendations of the review bodies

	Main pay recommendations	Paybill costs
	Per cent.	£ million	Per cent.
AFPRB: Armed forces	[1]3–3.4	181	3.3
DDRB: Doctors and dentists	[2]3.4	230	3.4
NPRB: Nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine	[1]3.3	271	3.3
STRB: School teachers	3.3	376	3.3
SSRB: Senior salaries/Senior civil service	[4]2.75	—	—
Senior military	2.75–6.0	—	3.7
Judiciary	3.0–7.0	10	6.0

[1] There is also an additional 1 per cent. on pay as part of the staged pensions-related adjustment agreed last year.

[2] DDRB has also recommended an additional 0.35 per cent. this year and next, as a staged pensions-related adjustment.

[3] Recommended increase in national pay rates.

[4] Increases in pay band minima and maxima. Recommendations for the senior civil service affect the pay framework within which Departments will set individual pay rates.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 6 February. [13437]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Attorney-General if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, indicating how much has been spent on legal advice and from whom it was obtained. [14525]

The Attorney-General: The amount spent by my departments on external advice—all of it legal advice—in relation to giving evidence to the Scott inquiry and the preparation of the Government's response to the report is £56,526. Advice was obtained from Messrs Mishcon de Reya, solicitors, and from Jonathan Sumption QC, William Charles, Stephen Richards and Mark Howard of counsel.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Attorney-General what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any capacity relating to the Scott inquiry. [14524]

The Attorney-General: Several officials in my departments have been involved in matters relating to the Scott inquiry from time to time as part of their normal duties, but with the following exception the direct salary cost is unquantifiable. Two press officers were seconded to my office for short periods in 1996, the salary cost of about £2,300 being met by their home department.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Funding (Multilateral Agencies)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list for each of the past five years the funding through discretionary spending to multilateral agencies provided by his Department; [14325]

(2) if he will list for each of the last five years the agencies which have received moneys from his Department's discretionary spending. [14326]

Dr. Liam Fox: The details are in the table. Full details of ODA expenditure over the past five years are contained in "British Aid Statistics", copies of which were sent to the Libraries of both Houses in January.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what the forecast level of discretionary expenditure to multilateral agencies was for 1997–98 before the Chancellor's financial statement of November 1996; [14329]

(2) what is the current forecast level of discretionary expenditure to multilateral agencies from his Department for 1997–98. [14335]

Dr. Fox: The planned level of discretionary expenditure for multilateral organisations in 1997–98 was £58.63 million. The current forecast for 1997–98 is £58.63 million.

TRANSPORT

Great Eastern Rail Services

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what level of performance bond will be required of First Bus for the franchise for Great Eastern rail services. [14626]

Mr. Watts: The value of the performance bond which could be called in by the franchising director in the event of the need to terminate the Great Eastern franchise is £9.5 million.

Road Safety

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the reports received from the European Federal Road Safety Agency in respect of the prevention of accidents involving drivers under the influence of medicinal drugs; and if he will make a statement. [14484]

Mr. Bowis: I am aware of a report by a group chaired by Dr. De Gier which was published by the European Road Safety Federation on behalf of the European Commission. Many of its recommendations on medicinal drugs would require action at Community level or could not be implemented without extensive investigation or research.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department has taken to dissuade drivers from driving under the influence of (a) psychoactive and (b) other drugs; and if he will make a statement. [14516]

Mr. Bowis: A driver who drives while impaired by a drug is liable to conviction for the offence of "driving when under the influence of drink or drugs".

In addition, the "Highway Code" states:
"You MUST NOT drive under the influence of drugs or medicines. When taking prescribed medicines, ask your doctor if it is safe to drive. When taking other medicines, ask the pharmacist".

We shall consider any further action in the light of findings from the three-year survey of road fatalities that we are currently undertaking.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14557]

Mr. Bowis: The number of cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips the Department of Transport has recorded in the last five years is 71.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14556]

Mr. Bowis: The following is the information:

1991–92: None
1992–93: None
1993–94: None
1994–95: One
1995–96: Two.

Driving Examiners

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many contracts of employment introduced by the Driving Standards Agency in the last year restricted examiners to working one day per month; and what proportion this constitutes of the total. [14586]

Mr. Bowis: None. The 322 examiners recruited by the agency on fixed-period contracts are guaranteed a minimum of one day's work per month but they have generally been required to work for longer periods. Contract staff currently represent some 28 per cent. of the total driving examiner work force.

Fishing Boats (Safety)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the draft safety regulations for fishing boats under 12 m in length to be brought into force; in what form they will be brought before the House; what financial help will be made available for boat owners to enable them to comply with these regulations; and if he will make a statement. [13452]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 30 January 1997]: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. George Foulkes, dated February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the proposed safety regulations for fishing vessels less than 12 metres in length.

Since I wrote to you on 3 December 1996, the draft Code of Safe Practice for Registered Fishing Vessels Less Than 12 Metres Length has been approved by the Code Steering Committee and has been endorsed by the Fishing Industry Safety Group.

It is hoped that public consultation on the draft Code and on its supporting legislation will take place within the next two months and that publication of the Code will follow shortly thereafter. Owners and skippers will have time to become familiar with the Code requirements and recommendations prior to its enforcement. It is expected that a Statutory Instrument to bring the Code into force will be presented to Parliament early in 1998.

With regard to financial help to vessel owners, grant aid is a question entirely for the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) and I understand that MAFF Ministers will be considering this matter in the light of responses to the consultation exercise and once responses to that exercise have been analysed.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobcentres

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many jobcentres there are in England. [14579]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Ms Harriet Harman, dated 6 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about the number of Jobcentres in England. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

I can confirm that there are currently 903 Jobcentres in England.

I hope this is helpful.

Further Education

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 468, what sanctions the Further Education Funding Council is able to apply to further education colleges who are operating deficits. [14646]

Mr. Paice: The Further Education Funding College applies no sanctions to further education colleges with operating deficits. Colleges that are categorised as being in a financially weak position are, however, required to draw up recovery plans.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 397, when she last met the chairman or chief executive of the Further Education Funding Council to discuss the state of college finances. [14645]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend has not met the chairman or chief executive of the Further Education Funding Council for England recently. On her behalf, as the Minister with responsibility for further education, I last met them to discuss the funding of further education on 5 February 1997.

Quantock School, Taunton

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to publish the Office for Standards in Education report on the Quantock school, Taunton. [14393]

Mrs. Gillan: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Schools (Capital Allocation)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the capital allocation bids for schools made by Birmingham city council in each of the past five years, the amount of spending approved by her Department and the percentage of the bids that this represents. [13687]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Birmingham LEA's bids for capital expenditure on schools, the approved allocations and the allocations shown as a percentage of the bids in each of the past five years have been as follows:

Year	Planned LEA expenditure £ million	Annual capital guideline (ACG) £ million	ACG as percentage of plans	Supplementary credit approvals (SCAs) £ million
1993–94	27.3	6.25	23	1.7
1994–95	53.8	10.9	20
1995–96	40.9	9.21	23	0.2
1996–97	59.83	5.38	9	1.28
1997–98	53.49	1.06	1.98	0.1

Birmingham city council submitted a bid totalling £41.95 million under the capital challenge fund. This included an educational component relating to school improvement work. The authority will receive support totalling £5.75 million over the next three years starting in 1997–98. This includes the rebuilding of Perry Beeches school—the authority's largest education project included in its bid.

Expenditure on voluntary aided and special agreement schools

£ thousand

Year	Total bid	Total allocation
1993–94	1,516	1,372
1994–95	1,674	1,132
1995–96	838	422
1996–97	773	193
1997–98	539	514

Total allocations include the LEA's annual allocation for minor works improvement projects and committed expenditure on projects started in previous financial years, which LEAs do not bid for. Therefore, percentage of allocation compared to the bid is not calculated. Total allocation quoted is that announced in the preceding December and excludes any in-year adjustments for individual projects.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many available places there are under the assisted places scheme in (a) Portsmouth grammar school, (b) Portsmouth high school for girls and (c) Sir John's college, Southsea; and how many have been taken up. [13919]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is given in the following table.

Assisted places scheme: Academic year 1996–97

	Number of assisted places available	Number of assisted places taken up
(a) Portsmouth grammar school	234	188
(b) Portsmouth high school for girls	180	135
(c) Sir John's college, Southsea	200	199

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if the Committee has considered if meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland should be advertised in local and regional newspapers. [14815]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: At its meeting on 28 January, the Administration Committee considered a proposal from the Lord President that meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee held in Scotland might be advertised in regional and local newspapers.

The Committee endorsed the proposal, and agreed that the Scottish Office should act as the House's agent, subject to certain guidelines:

Such advertisements are drafted by House officials, not by the Scottish Office;

The relevant officials from the House and the Scottish Office should liaise in order to agree which newspapers the advertisements appear in; and

The cost of inserting the advertisements should be borne by the House, not by the Scottish Office.

Mr. Darling: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what has been the cost of the meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland in (a) the last Session of Parliament and (b) the current Session. [14293]

Mr. Beith [holding answer 4 February 1997]: Detailed costs are not currently recorded for individual meetings, but a manual check has been done of the accounting records. The approximate costs to date of the 13 meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee held in the last Session and the first three meetings in the current Session are given in the table. These may not be the final costs as some invoices and claims may still be outstanding. Excluded from these figures are staff standard hours and overtime, some Members' travel and the costs to Government Departments or others in attending the Committees.

Approximate cost of meetings by Session

1995–96 Session:	13 meetings	114,362.00
1996–97 Session (up to 13 January 1997)	3 meetings	19,446.00
		133,808.00

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will list each meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee held in the current Parliament, its location, and in each case the cost of the meeting; what have been the total costs to date of the meetings; and what estimate he has made of the average increase in costs per session since July 1994. [13693]

Mr. Beith [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The direct costs to date, coming within the purview of the House of Commons, for meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee held this Parliament up to 13 January 1997 are given in the table by financial year. These are not the final costs as there are still some invoices and claims outstanding. Excluded from these figures are staff standard hour costs and overtime, some travel by Members, and the costs to Government Departments or others in attending the Committees.

It has not been possible to establish a meaningful trend, as the costs of each meeting are dependent on many variables. For example, the cost of travel to different locations varies and not all local authorities charge for room hire or the provision of policing.

The average cost to date for meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee is approximately £7,500.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Fraud Hotline

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls have been made to the fraud hotline, broken down by type of benefit and outcome of investigation. [13051]

Mr. Heald: Up to end of December 1996, in the region of 130,000 calls had been made to the national benefit fraud hotline. Approximately 97,000 referrals have been received by the benefit fraud investigation service so far. Of these, around 76,000 were recorded on the fraud management information system and 5,000 have been recorded separately as part of spotlight initiative. The remaining 16,000 cases are either in transit between offices, awaiting initial scrutiny before entry on to the system, or linked to a referral previously received where an investigation is already under way.

From the recorded referrals, so far around 31,000 are being investigated, with 15,500 completed, of which 5,100 have scored benefit savings in the region of £14.1 million. The remaining 15,500 are expected to generate an additional £13.4 million in benefit savings. We believe that the existence of the fraud hotline also has a significant, although unquantifiable, impact on the level of fraud committed.

The fraud hotline caller does not always know the benefits in payment. Consequently, details of calls on a benefit-by-benefit basis have not been kept. This information is available for general fraud referrals, but it is not possible to track referrals in this way for specific fraud initiatives, such as hotline.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of claimants of (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit have earnings above the relevant disregard, giving figures separately for (i) couples, (ii) single people and (iii) lone parents. [13050]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Income support/housing benefit/council tax benefit recipients with disregarded earnings: May 1995

	Income support		Housing benefit		Council tax benefit
	Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.	Number	Per cent.
Couples	51,000	5.4	149,000	28.9	190,000	23.9
Single without dependants	33,000	0.9	98,000	10.1	81,000	6.7
Single with dependants	43,000	3.8	102,000	76.9	92,000	74.3
All cases	127,000	2.2	349,000	21.6	362,000	17.1

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Numbers refer to cases with earnings brought into account above the relevant disregard.
3. Proportions expressed are recipients with earnings above the relevant disregard as a proportion of the relevant group type (i.e., all couples/single/lone parents).
4. Figures refer to benefit units which may be a single person or a couple.
5. For the purpose of housing benefit and council tax benefit, earners have been identified as those with earnings from employment and self employment including those with part-time earnings.
6. Housing benefit/council tax benefit cases also in receipt of income support have been excluded as earnings have not been disregarded in terms of the housing benefit/council tax benefit assessment as they have already been taken into account in the Income Support assessment.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what payments are made to doctors carrying out medical examinations for incapacity benefit claims; and what was the total cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14028]

Mr. Burt: The administration of Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jimmy Hood, dated 5 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question about what payments are made to doctors carrying out medical examinations for Incapacity Benefit (IB) claims; and what was the total cost in the last year for which figures are available.

Doctors who undertake medical examinations in connection with IB are self employed contractors and are paid fees for the examinations they conduct. Additional expenses are also paid where appropriate.

For examinations conducted on Benefits Agency (BA) premises, doctors are paid a fee of £30.70 per hour. If the examination is conducted in a client's home, the fees are £37.90 for up to and including 1.5 hours, £56.90 for over 1.5 and up to 2.5 hours, and £88.40 for over 2.5 hours. Travelling and subsistence costs are also paid, based on prescribed amounts.

The total cost for the year ending March 1996 was £12,187,989, this figure is provisional and subject to change.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Rent Allowances

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many single people (a) under the age of 25, (b) between 25 and 60 and (c) over 60 years are currently receiving rent allowances (i) in total and (ii) in each local authority area in England. [13779]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Benefit Uprating

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the £16,000 upper capital limit for housing benefit and council tax benefit would be in 1997–98 if it had been uprated by (a) prices and (b) earnings since introduction. [14286]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Uprated by prices	[1]21,408.90
Uprated by average earnings	[2]22,820.65

Notes:

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the value of the £3,000 capital limit for housing benefit and council tax benefit in 1997–98 if it had been uprated by (a) prices and (b) earnings since its introduction. [14285]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table:

War Pensions

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the administrative costs of (a) the War Pensions Agency and (b) the war pensions appeals tribunals in 1996–97; [14021]

(2) how many staff are employed by the War Pensions Agency, and how many there were in (a) 1979 and (b) 1990. [14019]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Mr. Kevin Caldwell, chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. Jon Trickett, dated 5 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the administrative costs of the War Pensions Agenda (WPA) and Ware Pensions Appeal Tribunals in 1996–97 and the number of people now employed in the Agency and employed in 1979 and 1990.

The budget for the WPA's administrative costs for 1996/97 is £36.991m. The estimated spend is forecast to be within this budget.

War Pensions Appeal Tribunals do not come under the jurisdiction of the WPA. However, we have contacted the Pension Appeal Tribunals (PAT) for England/Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland and their estimated administrative costs for 1996/97 are as follows:

England/Wales: £2,450,284.00

Scotland: £274,561.00

Northern Ireland: £50,300.00.

The average number of staff employed by the WPA in the current financial year is 1346. Comparable staffing figures for the years 1979 and 1990 are not available. The WPA began operating in April 1994. Before that date, staff numbers were included in the Benefits Agency's complement and, before 1991, in the Department of Social Security figures. Relevant comparisons with WPA's current staff levels cannot therefore be made for years before 1994/95.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what final payments to an individual by an employer on termination of employment are taken into account when assessing entitlement to (a) contribution-based and (b) income-based jobseeker's allowance; [14601]

(2) how payments in lieu of notice affect entitlement to (a) contribution-based jobseeker's allowance and (b) income-based jobseeker's allowance. [14602]

Mr. Roger Evans:

Payments made on Termination of Full-time Work—16 hours or more a week.

Normal earnings, expenses and any earnings held "in hand" which are paid on termination of employment are ignored when assessing entitlement to contribution-based and income-based jobseeker's allowance.

Compensation payments, for example pay in lieu of notice or remuneration, made in respect of the termination of the employment, and holiday pay payable at termination, have the effect of treating the individual as continuing to be in full-time work after the termination of employment. Neither contribution-based nor income-based jobseeker's allowance is payable after the termination for a period equivalent to that for which the compensation or holiday pay has been paid.

Payments made under employment protection legislation for unfair dismissal, or under trades union legislation for unfair dismissal or redundancy on grounds of involvement in trade union activities, are taken into account as earnings in contribution-based and income-based jobseeker's allowance, subject to the appropriate disregard, normally £5 a week. They are taken into account for a period equivalent to that for which the payments has been made.

Lump sum redundancy payments and holiday pay payable more than four weeks after the termination of the employment are treated as capital and do not affect contribution-based jobseeker's allowance. Income-based jobseeker's allowance is affected only if the total capital held by the individual and his family is more than £3,000.

Payments made on Termination of Part-time Work—less than 16 hours a week.

Normal earnings, expenses and any earnings held "in hand" which are paid on termination of employment are ignored when assessing entitlement to contribution-based and income-based jobseeker's allowance.

Compensation payments, holiday pay payable at termination, and payments made under employment protection or trades union legislation are taken into account as earnings in contribution-based and income-based jobseeker's allowance, subject to the appropriate disregard, normally £5 a week. They are taken into account for a period equivalent to that for which the payment has been made.

Lump sum redundancy payments and holiday pay payable more than four weeks after the termination of the employment are treated in the same way as on termination of full-time work.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE (Germany)

2. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his German counterpart since the discovery of BSE in cattle in that country. [13104]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I and my predecessors have had a number of discussions with our German counterparts on BSE since the first case was reported in Germany in March 1994.

Animal Welfare

12. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the protocol on animal welfare which he has tabled at the intergovernmental conference. [13116]

Mrs. Browning: Discussions continue on our proposal for a protocol on animal welfare which would place a legally binding obligation on Community institutions. I am pleased to report an encouraging response.

BSE

13. Ms Corston: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from United Kingdom farm workers' representatives concerning BSE. [13117]

Mr. Boswell: In May 1996, I met representatives of the rural, agricultural and allied workers group of the Transport and General Workers Union to review the BSE situation, including implications for jobs and safety matters.

Conservation

14. Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government have taken to promote technical conservation measures. [13118]

Mr. Baldry: I have brought together in the fisheries conservation group practical fishermen, fisheries scientists and fisheries managers. They have reviewed the current technical conservation measures and continue to provide invaluable advice on the European Commission's current proposal for new EU-wide technical measures. I am promoting these practical ideas in the current negotiations in Brussels.

Fruit and Vegetables

15. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the value, in the last year for which figures are available, of home-grown fruit and vegetables which were left unsold. [13119]

Mr. Boswell: We do not have information about the removal of unsaleable fruit and vegetables from the market by growers and traders. However, in the 1995–96 season, public intervention in the UK removed 8,785 tonnes of apples, pears and cauliflowers at a cost of £827,000.

Common Fisheries Policy

18. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the enlargement of the European Union on the common fisheries policy. [13122]

Mr. Baldry: Negotiations for the further enlargement of the European Union are not scheduled to start until after the conclusions of the intergovernmental conference. The possible impact of enlargement on the common fisheries policy will depend on the accession terms proposed, which will be discussed in full with the UK industry before the Government determine their fisheries objectives for the negotiations.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next proposes to meet the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations to discuss the common fisheries policy. [13120]

Mr. Baldry: I plan next to meet the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations to discuss the common fisheries policy on 25 February.

Common Agricultural Policy

19. Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he has made in advancing the case for fundamental reform of the CAP with the EU Commission and other member states. [13124]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Both the Commission and most EU member states now recognise that further CAP reform is inevitable. This has been the Government's position for some time.

Broiler Chickens

22. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the welfare of broiler chickens. [13127]

Mrs. Browning: We are working in various ways to improve these in line with the recommendations of the Farm Animal Welfare Council.

Farm Paperwork

23. Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to reduce the amount of paperwork required of farmers. [13128]

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government have taken to reduce the amount of non-BSE related paperwork required of farmers. [13108]

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales last year commissioned an efficiency scrutiny on simplifying farmers' paperwork, which included working farmers on the team. We are now implementing the bulk of the recommendations.

Live Animal Transport

24. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government have taken to consult the farming industry over the new rules on animal transportation. [13129]

Mrs. Browning: We have consulted the farming industry extensively on our plans. The Department has issued three consultation documents—in October 1995, and in August and December 1996. Numerous discussions have been held with farming interests, including a workshop entirely devoted to the subject, which my right hon. and learned Friend and I held on 5 November 1996.

Beef Exports

25. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he estimates the European ban on British beef will be lifted. [13130]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We will shortly submit our proposals for a certified herds scheme, which will be the basis of the first step towards the phased lifting of the export ban; we will press the Commission to give them urgent consideration so that we can begin exports of meat and meat products from these herds as soon as possible.

Rural White Paper

26. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received to the follow-up to the rural White Paper. [13131]

Mr. Boswell: We have received a number of representations and a very positive response from people and organisations involved in rural issues to the follow-up to the rural White Paper "Rural England 1996".

Nutritional Policy

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his nutritional policy. [13111]

Mrs. Browning: Our policy is that consumers should have access to information that enables them to choose a safe, balanced, and nutritious diet.

Food Labelling

Mr. Day: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding the adequacy of present food labelling laws. [13121]

Mrs. Browning: Food labelling laws are wide ranging. We continue to receive representations from a variety of interested parties about them.

Fishing Targets

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government have taken to ensure that the United Kingdom fishing fleet will meet multi-annual guidance programme targets. [13125]

Mr. Baldry: The Government are providing up to £53 million for a voluntary decommissioning programme and have introduced a range of changes to the licensing regime. We are also in discussion with the Commission about its figures for UK performance to date. If the necessary changes are agreed, we will be within a handful of points of our overall tonnage targets and will have met the target for engine power.

Natural Habitats

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage farmers to protect natural habitats; and if he will make a statement. [13126]

Mr. Boswell: Over the last three years, the Ministry has greatly expanded the range of voluntary incentive schemes to encourage environmentally beneficial farming practices. The environmentally sensitive areas, countryside stewardship and habitat and moorland schemes in particular encourage farmers to protect natural habitats.

In addition, the Ministry funds free conservation advice to farmers and its codes of good agricultural practice provide guidance to all farmers on protecting the environment.

Geese

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of geese slaughtered for food in the last year; what estimate he has made of their average value; and if he will make a statement. [13436]

Mrs. Browning: In 1996, it is estimated that 500,000 geese were slaughtered for food in England and Wales, with an estimated average farm gate value of £14 per bird.

Cattle Cull

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking (a) to increase incineration capacity for cattle culled over the over-30-months slaughter scheme, (b) to reduce storage costs and (c) to increase throughput of cattle; and if he will make a statement. [14523]

Mr. Baldry: The Government are seeking to increase the incineration capacity available to the over-30-months scheme by competitive tender.

The unit cost of storing frozen carcases has been minimised by the competitive procurement of commercial cold store capacity and the conversion of three Government-owned stores; it will be further minimised by the consolidation of residual stocks and release of storage capacity. Stocks are being reduced as quickly as the availability of suitable rendering and direct incineration capacity allow.

Producers are now able to present animals for processing under the over-30-months scheme at their normal point of slaughter. To increase throughput would not therefore be justified.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many incinerators are available to deal with BSE casualties; what is their capacity; and what is their daily throughput. [14522]

Mr. Baldry: There are currently 13 incinerators accepting on-farm slaughtered cattle over 30 months of age. The theoretical capacity available is 285 cattle per day, but actual capacity depends upon the volume of other business. The average daily throughput of over-30-months cattle through incinerators since the beginning of the year has been 180 cattle.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what means of disposal is planned to be used for the disposal of the remaining meat and bonemeal from animals slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme; [14026]

(2) what is the planned timetable for completing the disposal of meat and bonemeal from animals slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme. [14027]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 5 February 1997]: The Government are actively pursuing a number of options for the disposal of rendered meat and bonemeal in store derived from cattle slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme. The Intervention Board executive agency recently agreed a contract with a high temperature incineration company to burn MBM and is in the process of tendering for further incineration capacity from which additional MBM disposal facilities are expected to emerge. Also, combustion trials have been carried out at PowerGen's test facilities at Ratcliffe on Soar, Nottinghamshire, and at National Power's test facilities at Didcot, Oxfordshire, to establish the feasibility of burning

MBM in power stations. These trials have been monitored by the Environment Agency and the results will be placed on the public register. The test results are being fully evaluated, with full weight being given to the protection of human health and of the environment in reaching any conclusion. It is too early to say when a decision will be made or, therefore, when the disposal of the MBM from cattle slaughtered under the OTMS will be completed.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14562]

Mr. Boswell: There have been no known instances of anyone external to the Department illegally accessing MAFF's computer systems in the past five years. As far as we can ascertain, there have been no recorded incidents of hacking internally.

Mr. Foster: To ask he Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14563]

Mr. Boswell: The number of cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft recorded in the Department in the past five years is as follows:

Incident	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Hacking	0	0	0	0	0
Theft	12	5	21	21	19

Genetic Engineering

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) dates and (b) conclusions of the meetings which his Department has held with food producers to discuss genetic engineering in the last two months; and if he will make a statement. [14485]

Mrs. Browning: I held a series of meetings on 7 January with the animal feed trade, food manufacturers, retailers and consumer organisations to discuss genetic modification. All groups were keen to ensure that consumers were fully informed about the potential benefits genetic modification offers.

The Department also organised a very successful consultation meeting on 22 January with a wide range of interested groups including environmental and non-governmental organisations, consumer representatives and food producers. The meeting provided an opportunity for those with concerns to air them and identify any changes needed to existing safeguards. These results will be considered further at a national biotechnology conference to be held on 10 March.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the potential dangers of allowing unprocessed genetically engineered maize to enter the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [14486]

Mrs. Browning: The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes advised that the use of processed genetically modified maize was safe, although there was a small but finite risk associated with the use of Ciba Geigy's GM maize in an unprocessed form. The ACNFP's concerns were examined in detail by three EC scientific committees, which concluded that the risk was too small to justify banning imports into the Community. There are therefore no grounds on which the Government can legally object to the use of this material.

Live Animal Transport (MV Cap Afrique)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the consignment of piglets exported on 24 January on the MV Cap Afrique was accompanied by an export health certificate as worded in model 111 of the annexe to Council directive 64/432/EEC. [14604]

Mrs. Browning: Yes.

Cattle Tracing

Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on measures to improve the traceability of cattle. [13123]

Mr. Baldry: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Mr. Thompson) on 10 December 1996, Official Report, column 104. We are currently considering the responses to the consultation exercise on our proposals.

Farms (Negative Equity)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many full-time farm businesses had a negative equity in each year since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [12757]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Results of the farm business survey indicate that the proportion of farms in the sample with negative equity did not exceed 1 per cent. in any year since 1986–87, the first for which this information is readily obtainable.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13459]

Mr. Boswell: Expenditure on advertising, publicity and public information campaigns, January to March, for each of the last five financial years—and an estimate for the current financial year—are as follows:

1991–92	1,757,000
1992–93	684,000
1993–94	1,699,000
1994–95	1,142,000
1995–96	1,590,000
1996–97	[1]1,160,000

[1] A separate allocation, amounting to £1.7 million in total, has been established specifically for the production and distribution of information relating to BSE. About £860,000 of that is available for January to March 1997.

HEALTH

GP Trainees

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trainee general practitioners there were in each training centre for each of the last five years; and how many places were available. [13756]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not available. However, the numbers of general practitioner trainees by region is available in "General Medical Statistics England and Wales", copies of which are available in the Library.

District Nurses and Health Visitors

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) district nurses and (b) health visitors there were in each health authority in London in each of the last five years. [13654]

Mr. Horam: Information for the five years to 1995, the latest available, has been placed in the Library.

Volatile Substance Abuse

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will seek the withdrawal of the Health Education Authority's literature published on 14 October 1996 in respect of volatile substance abuse. [13660]

Mr. Burns: No. The Department of Health believes that young people need to learn of the very real risks of volatile substance abuse. The available evidence suggests that the overwhelming majority of abusers learn about volatile substance abuse from friends and not from health education materials where they are told that it can kill.

Prostate Cancer

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will circulate to GPs' surgeries a leaflet advising on the dangers of prostate cancer and the availability of a prostate-specific antigen test. [13916]

Mr. Horam: The national health service centre for reviews and dissemination has today issued a patient leaflet, "Screening for prostate cancer: the evidence", to general practitioners and other health professionals which includes up-to-date information on the prostate specific antigen test. Copies will be placed in the Library.

The Department is also planning to produce material which will provide general information and advice for men in their middle years on a wide range of health topics, including prostate cancer. The material, which we are aiming to launch later this year, will be distributed through a number of outlets. We anticipate that this will include general practitioners' surgeries.

HIV–AIDS

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount of Government research expenditure on HIV–AIDS in 1996–97; and how many people received treatment for HIV–AIDS in 1996–97. [13999]

Mr. Horam: The total Government expenditure in 1996–97 on research on HIV–AIDS is estimated at £13.7 million. This figure includes expenditure by the Medical Research Council, the Department of Health and other Government Departments. There is relatively little contribution towards HIV–AIDS research from other sources such as charities. The Department of Health does not collect information on all treatments given to those living with HIV and AIDS. The survey of prevalent diagnosed HIV infections estimates that 13,817 individuals with diagnosed HIV infection were reported as having received care from statutory medical services during 1995. Information for 1996–97 is not available. These data are subject to under-reporting.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the United Kingdom's gross domestic product was devoted to health in (a) 1979, (b) 1990 and (c) the latest year for which figures are available. [14239]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is contained in the table.

Year	United Kingdom gross national health service expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product
1979–80	4.7
1990–91	5.2

1. Gross domestic product adjusted to remove the distortion caused by the abolition of domestic rates.

2. UK NHS expenditure figures include figures for Northern Ireland which are estimates due to the fact that Northern Ireland's health services and personal social services are provided on an integrated basis.

Medicinal Drugs (Driving)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is his Department's policy in respect of driving under the influence of medicinal drugs; and if he will make a statement; [14518]

(2) if he will list the medicinal drugs on sale in the United Kingdom which his Department assesses to affect drivers' reactions when taken in normal doses; and if he will make a statement. [14585]

Mr. Malone: Where there is evidence that a medicine can affect driving ability, this information is included in the summary of product characteristics for the doctor, and suitable warnings are provided on the label or in the leaflet for the patient as appropriate. The "British National Formulary" carries prescribing information for doctors, including information on side-effects that can impair driving ability, and advises pharmacists to attach a cautionary label when dispensing medicines that can cause drowsiness. The Medicines Control Agency reminded doctors and pharmacists of the possible effects of medicines on driving in its bulletin, "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in November 1995, copies of which are available in the Library. This identifies groups of medicines which may impair driving ability.

Benzodiazepines and Tricyclates

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has evaluated into the (a) short-term and (b) long-term effects associated with (i) benzodiazepines and (ii) tricyclates; and if he will make a statement. [14517]

Mr. Malone: For all marketed medicines, the available research into the side effects—both short and long—term— of benzodiazepines and tricyclic antidepressants was assessed at the time of granting the marketing authorisations and continues to be evaluated by the Medicines Control Agency. Recognised side-effects for both categories of drug are included in the authorised product information and the "British National Formulary".

Medicinal Drugs (Labelling)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans his Department has to require clearer labelling on medicinal drugs in respect of (a) verbal descriptions of products, (b) symbols and (c) the use of colours to draw attention to the possible side effects and dangers of products; and if he will make a statement; [14583]

(2) what guidelines his Department issues to drug manufacturers on the labelling of their products in respect of (a) their contents and (b) dangers associated with their use; and if he will make a statement. [14520]

Mr. Malone: All medicines are required by United Kingdom legislation implementing directive 92/27/EEC—on the labelling of medicines for human use and on package leaflets—to give essential particulars of the product on the labelling, including a description of the product and any necessary warnings. Where appropriate the warnings are placed separately in a boxed area to draw the reader's attention. Symbols and pictograms which can be readily identified by the public are actively encouraged as a means of simplifying essential messages. Medicines must also be accompanied by further detailed information in an enclosed patient leaflet unless the labelling contains all the information necessary under the directive. The directive requirements are being phased in by therapeutic category and it is anticipated that these requirements will be met for all medicines by the end of 1998.

The European Community is currently consulting on detailed guidelines for the labelling of medicines covering, in particular, special warnings and information on excipients which are known to have a recognised action or effect. We are participating in producing these guidelines which are expected to be available later this year.

The Medicines Control Agency prepared guidelines for the pharmaceutical industry when directive 92/27/EEC was implemented into UK law and intends to issue a revised edition to reflect EC guidance as appropriate.

Medicinal Drugs (Sales to Children)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department has taken to reduce the sales of medicinal drugs to children under 16 years; and if he will make a statement. [14519]

Mr. Malone: We are considering the need for further restrictions on the sale of medicine to children and, subject to further consideration of the available evidence of risk, we will bring forward any necessary proposals.

Medicinal Drugs (Sales)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria his Department sets for medicinal drugs permitted to be sold over the counter; and if he will make a statement. [14584]

Mr. Malone: The criteria set for allowing medicines to be available over the counter are laid down in Council directive 92/26/EEC and have been incorporated into section 58A of the Medicines Act 1968. Medicines are considered unsuitable for sale or supply without a doctor's prescription when they:

- are likely to present a danger either directly or indirectly, even when used correctly, if utilised without medical supervision, or
- are frequently and to a very wide extent used incorrectly, and as a result are likely to present a direct or indirect danger to human health, or
- contain substances or preparations thereof the activity and/or side effects or which require further investigation, or
- are normally prescribed by a doctor to be administered parenterally.

Cancer Screening

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlie his Department's priorities in allocating funding for the screening of (a) prostrate cancer, (b) cervical cancer, and (c) breast cancer. [14378]

Mr. Horam: The Government look to the national screening committee for advice on the introduction, review, modification or cessation of population screening programmes. In order to determine priorities for screening, the national screening committee uses criteria based upon the principles of screening developed by Wilson and Jungner for the World Health Organisation. The key principles are: that the condition should pose an important health problem; the natural history of the disease should be well understood; there should be a recognisable early stage; treatment at an early stage should be more beneficial than treatment started later; there should be a suitable test acceptable to the population with facilities for diagnosis and treatment; screening should be repeated at intervals where appropriate; the chance of physical or psychological harm to those screened should be less than the chance of benefit; the cost of a screening programme should be balanced against the benefit it provides.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasion in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14544]

Mr. Horam: There have been no reported incidents of illegal hacking on the Department of Health's computer systems over the last five years.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14554]

Mr. Horam: For the calendar years 1992 to 1996 inclusive, 267 cases of computer theft—mostly minor—were reported, 21 of which concerned computer chips. No cases of hacking or fraud were reported during that period.

Meningitis

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the most common laboratory difficulties involved in diagnosing whether a patient is suffering from C group meningitis. [13018]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Pre-treatment with antibiotics is the main cause of difficulty in diagnosing meningococcal infection. New molecular techniques currently being developed will help overcome this difficulty. A further difficulty is that the organism may be slow to grow which can delay diagnosis.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what occasions in the last five years a vaccination programme against type C meningitis has been commenced before there is an established strain link between the cases involved. [13013]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Meningococcal immunisation programmes are advised only when the epidemiological evidence supports a link between the cases and at least one case has been identified as group C infection. Data on meningococcal immunisation programmes have been collected centrally only for the period since April 1995. We are aware of three community and 10 schools' meningococcal immunisation programmes in the period 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996. Data are collected each March for the preceding full year. We are aware that all three community immunisation programmes and five of the school programmes were linked by the same strain.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate how long it currently takes, on average, for a microbiology laboratory test to identify whether a patient is suffering from the C group of meningitis. [13015]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 27 January 1997]: When alive meningococcus is isolated from a case—currently about 60 per cent. of cases—provisional confirmation of the serogroup as "C" can usually be made within 24 hours. Confirmation of this provisional typing will take longer. Quite frequently a meningococcus is not isolated, usually as a consequence of successful pre-hospital antibiotic treatment by the general practitioner, and confirmation of the "C" strain can then be done only by molecular methods at a reference laboratory. It cannot be achieved in all cases, and takes up to two weeks. In some cases, molecular methods do not provide a diagnosis and serological tests may then show evidence of infection several weeks after the acute episode.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Prison Visits

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual budget of the assisted prison visits scheme; what are the costs of administering the scheme in (i) the Northern Ireland Office and (ii) the Department of Health and Social Services; how many claims have been made from each of the prisons in Northern Ireland; and how much was allocated in payments to prisoners' families in each of the last five years. [14090]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Northern Ireland Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Shannon to Ms Majorie Mowlam, dated 5 February 1997:

The Secretary of state has asked me to reply to the Parliamentary Question you tabled relating to the Assisted Prison Visits Scheme.

The Assisted Prison Visits Scheme in Northern Ireland is administered, on behalf of the Prison Service, by the Benefits Agency of the Department of Health and Social Services through its network of local offices. Claims are made in person and are paid in advance, either by travel warrant or by Girocheque.

The costs of the scheme, including the administration costs, are wholly borne by the Prison Service and are made up of the administration fee charged by the Benefits Agency, the staff costs (which are not separately quantified but which are in the order of £15k per annum) incurred by the Service and the amounts paid to eligible claimants.

The table below illustrates the breakdown of costs from the beginning of the 1992/93 financial year to 31 December 1996, the latest date for which figures are available. You will note that the number of claims paid in each year is split into local claims and those to prisons in England and Wales and Scotland; visits to Channel island prisons or the Isle of Man prison are not covered.

Financial year	Visits in Northern Ireland	Visits in Great Britain	Total paid out £ thousand	Administration costs £ thousand	Total cost £ thousand
1992–93	2,266	231	76.6	15.0	91.6
1993–94	2,437	344	95.0	17.4	112.4
1994–95	2,396	357	110.0	18.0	128.0
1995–96	2,336	257	86.7	17.6	104.3
1996–97	1,834	367	82.4	15.9	98.3

[1] Against a 1996–97 baseline provision of £145.0 thousand.

In order to come into line with the rest of the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland increased the number of paid visits in any 12 month period to 26, with effect from January 1996.

I hope this is helpful.

Local Government Finance

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the general Exchequer grant allocations to district councils for the 1997–98 financial year. [14324]

Sir John Wheeler: The total provision for general Exchequer grant for 1997–98 is £37.7 million. Distribution of the grant will be in accordance with the statutory formula.

Social Security Benefits

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals are in receipt of (a) disability living allowance, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) severe disablement benefit, (d) family credit, (e) income support, (f) jobseeker's allowance, (g) widow's benefit, (h) state retirement pension and (i) child benefit, in each parliamentary constituency. [13314]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie, and I have asked him to arrange for a response to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Seamus Mallon, dated 4 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the number of people in receipt of various social security benefits in each parliamentary constituency.

I have attached a table which shows the number of customers in receipt of five of the benefits listed in your question. Unfortunately, information about Widows Benefit, Child Benefit and Retirement Pension is not available in the format you requested. It will also be some time before the figures are available for Jobseeker's Allowance.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide any further information you require.

Number of people in receipt of various social security benefits

Educational Expenditure

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total capital expenditure by the Department of Education in each parliamentary constituency in each of the past 10 financial years, indicating the cost of each project. [13343]

Mr. Ancram: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department; [14550]

(2) how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14551]

Sir John Wheeler: During each of the past five years the number of occasions when computer systems within this Department have been illegally accessed by computer hackers is as follows:

Year	Number of occasions
1992–93	2
1993–94	0
1994–95	1
1995–96	0

[1] To date.

Over this period, there were no recorded cases of computer fraud or theft of computer chips, there were however 10 cases of theft in this period.

TREASURY

Fixed Exchange Rate System

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the net (a) benefits and (b) costs to the United Kingdom economy of sterling's membership of a fixed exchange rate system. [14238]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Chancellor considered carefully the case for joining the new exchange rate mechanism in stage 3 of economic and monetary union linking the euro with non-participating member states, but concluded that the best way to secure lasting exchange rate stability is to achieve low inflation and sound public finances. Hence, the Government have no intention of re-entering sterling into a fixed exchange rate system, such as the new ERM. The Government recognise the value of a stable exchange rate but do not have a target for sterling.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14479]

Mrs. Angela Knight: A number of staff in personnel including the departmental equal opportunities officer provide advice on equal opportunities issues, all of whom have additional duties. A breakdown of the cost of time spent solely on equal opportunities issues is therefore not available.

Dorneywood

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the members of the management board of the Dorneywood trust; and if he will make a statement. [14619]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Dorneywood trust is a private trust, for which I am not responsible and for which Ministers are not answerable to Parliament.

Privatisation (Revenues)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenues from privatisation which will be received in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–1 and (e) 2001–2; how much of the revenue in each year relates to privatisation which took place before 1 February; if he will list the additional bodies assumed to be privatised after that date; and if he will make a statement. [14817]

Mr. Jack: As published in table 5.3 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98", privatisation proceeds are expected to be:

(a) £2.0 billion in 1997–98;

(b) £1.5 billion in 1998–99;

(c) £1.0 billion in 1999–2000.

No estimates have been made for the years 2000–01 and 2001–02. The proceeds for 1997–98 relate to privatisations which took place before 1 February. The other proceeds estimates include the planned privatisation of the National Air Traffic Services Ltd., and reflect the Government's ongoing commitment to privatisation. The Government will announce future privatisation plans when they are ready to do so.

Stamp Duty

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the advice commissioned from the Securities and Investments Board on the regulatory implications of the proposed liberalisation of stamp duty on UK equity stock borrowing. [15317]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Securities and Investments Board has submitted to the Treasury a report, "The fiscal liberalisation of stock borrowing and repo in UK equities; regulatory recommendations". This report was produced in response to a request from the Chancellor in September 1995, following the Director General of Fair Trading's report on the rules of the London stock exchange relating to market makers. Copies of the report are available in the Libraries of the House.

The Government fully accept the SIB's key recommendations that there is no immediate need to tighten or extend regulation in this area, but that further work on stock borrowing should be undertaken by the SIB, to cover guidance on good practice; the disclosure regime for short selling, and the stock borrowing regime for smaller companies.

The way is now clear for Parliament to consider the proposals set out in the Finance Bill for a sweeping reform of the current fiscal regime as it affects the lending and borrowing of UK equities. These proposals amount to a substantial liberalisation and modernisation of existing tax rules. Taken together with the SIB's proposed light regulatory touch, they should enhance the competitive development of this market, to the benefit of investors and market intermediaries alike.

Personal Pensions

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people who have been mis-sold personal pensions have so far received compensation. [11395]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Accurate figures are not available for the total number of people who have received compensation for being mis-sold a personal pension.

Profit-related Pay Schemes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies have notified the Inland

Revenue their intention of introducing a profit-related pay scheme since (a) September 1996 and (b) December 1996. [14425]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 6 February 1997]: Between 1 September 1996 and the end of January 1997 the Inland Revenue received almost 7,500 applications to register a profit-related pay scheme. That figure includes some businesses which have previously had a registered scheme and some which have not. Of this total, about half—3,700—applied in the three months before 1 December 1996, and about half—3,800—applied in the two months following that date.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14566]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 6 February 1997]: There have been no recorded instances of hacking into Treasury computer systems in any of the last five years.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14567]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 6 February 1997]: There have been no recorded instances of hacking into Treasury computer system or their fraudulent use in any of the last five years.

There have been some cases of thefts of computer equipment as follows:

1991–92: 1

1993–94: 1

1994–95: 2

1995–96: 5.

TRANSPORT

Rail Transport (Bicycles)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when (i) he and (ii) his officials last had discussions with Connex South Eastern about the provision of bicycle accommodation on trains between Sevenoaks and Blackfriars; and if he will make a statement. [13443]

Mr. Watts: Neither my right hon. Friend nor I have had discussions with Connex South Eastern about the carriage of bicycles on its services, which is a matter for it. The franchising director and his officials meet with Connex South Eastern regularly to discuss the operation of the franchise when any pertinent matter may be raised.

In respect of the carriage of bicycles on trains generally, the franchising director has included in franchise agreements a requirement that, so far as reasonably practicable, and subject to the availability of appropriate space on its rolling stock, franchisees should ensure that facilities are made available for the carriage of cycles on trains. Franchise operators may not charge passengers unreasonable amounts for the provision of these facilities.

It would, however, be impracticable to require franchisees to make facilities available on all services. For example, not all existing rolling stock is designed to carry cycles. The provisions therefore strike a balance between the desire for operators to accommodate cyclists while acknowledging that it may not always be possible for them to do so.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people are employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14466]

Mr. Bowis: The management of equal opportunities is an integral part of personnel work in the Department and its agencies, but certain staff carry specific responsibilities for particular equal opportunities issues. In the central transport group there are six, in the Highways Agency, three, in the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, four, in the Vehicle Certification Agency, three, in the Driving Standards Agency, four, in the Vehicle Inspectorate, one, in the Marine Safety Agency, one, and in the Coastguard Agency, one. The cost of that part of their work, and of other staff in handling equal opportunities issues, cannot readily be disaggregated.

In addition, the 18 staff in the Department's mobility unit handle issues covering disability, gender and race in relation to transport. Again, the part of their work which specifically focuses on equal opportunities cannot readily be disaggregated.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many people are employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14473]

Mr. Bates: The information requested on staff employed to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities in the departments and agencies for which my right hon. Friend is responsible and other areas which fall to the Cabinet Office vote is as follows:

	Number of staff 1996–97 (full-time equivalents)	Cost £
Cabinet Office/OPS (Departmental Policy)	0.7	17,500.00
Cabinet Office/OPS (Service-wide Advice)	10.5	301,000.00
Civil Service College	0.3	8,000.00
Central Computer and Telecommunication Agency	0.2	4,500.00
Central Office of Information	0.1	1,300.00

	Number of staff 1996–97 (full-time equivalents)	Cost £
Property Advisors to Civil Estate	0.2	3,500.00
Security and Facilities Executive	0.1	1,500.00
The Buying Agency	0.2	4,000.00

Admiralty House

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 4 February, Official Report, column 526, if he will provide a breakdown of the £723,000 spent on the running costs of Admiralty house in 1995–96. [14964]

Mr. Freeman: The figure of approximately £723,000 spent on the running costs of Admiralty house in 1995–96 may be broken down as follows:

Rent	250,000
Maintenance, including centrally managed maintenance costs	248,000
Security	135,000
Contribution in lieu of rates	38,000
VAT surcharge	22,000
Staff costs	16,000
Cleaning	12,000
Fuel and utilities	2,000
Total	723,000

Manchester City Centre

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he is yet in a position to respond to proposals for the redevelopment of Manchester city centre following the IRA bombing. [15318]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have kept closely in touch with the proposals produced by the task force representing Manchester city council and the private sector, under the chairmanship of Sir Alan Cockshaw, chairman of AMEC Building Ltd. and I hope to be in a position to make an announcement early next week.

Cash Limits

Mr. Mans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals he has to change the Cabinet Office; Security and Intelligence Services cash limits for 1996–97. [15390]

Mr. Freeman: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVIII, vote 2 will be increased by £3,750,000 from £751,058,000 to £754,808,000. The running costs cash limit will be increased by £17,631,000 from £386,973,000 to £404,604,000. The increase in running costs will be offset by savings on capital provision, and also the take up £2,670,000 running costs end year flexibility. There will be an increase in appropriation in aid of £2,000,000 and a net increase in superannuation payments of £450,000. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Her Majesty's Stationery Office

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the value of contracts to supply publications entered into by HMSO before privatisation which were cancelled at the time of privatisation; and if compensation was paid by HMSO in this respect. [14702]

Mr. Freeman: HMSO did not cancel any contracts to supply publications at the time of privatisation and did not therefore have to pay any compensation. All customers were given the opportunity to novate their existing contracts from HMSO to The Stationery Office Ltd.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the publications HMSO was contracted to supply to the Open university prior to privatisation and which at the time of privatisation HMSO withdrew from sale. [14703]

Mr. Freeman: HMSO did not withdraw any items for sale at the time of privatisation, and as a result of privatisation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Young Workers

Mr. Luff: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to consult on implementing provisions in the EC young workers directive requiring the creation of certain entitlements for adolescent workers; and if he will make a statement. [15231]

Mr. Lang: I am today publishing a consultation document with proposals for regulations to change employment law to give adolescent workers required entitlements to certain minimum daily and weekly rest periods and daily work breaks, and to health and capacity assessment before assignment to night work and at regular intervals thereafter.

We were able to agree to the EC directive on the protection of young people at work which requires these measures—the young workers directive—because its terms also give us an opt-out from what would have been unacceptable arbitrary limits on young people's working hours.

The consultation document seeks views on our proposals for enforcement arrangements to secure these entitlements, and on our assessment that, in general, employers will not have to make significant changes to their current practices in respect of employing young people. The Department of Health has already consulted on proposals for the changes which the directive requires us to make to the law regulating the employment of children, and the Health and Safety Commission about changes required to health and safety legislation.

The consultation period last until 7 May. We will then consider the position in the light of responses.

Inward Investment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the (i) value of inward investment located in Britain and (ii) number of inward investment jobs which have come to Britain from (a) Gibraltar, (b) Italy, (c) Malta, (d) France, (e) Scotland, (f) the Netherlands, (g) Sweden, (h) the Azores, (i) Bermuda, (j) the USA, (k) Mexico, (l) Jamaica, (m) the Lesser Antilles, (n) the Windward Islands, (o) the Leeward islands, (p) Portugal, (q) Greece, (r) Cyprus, (s) Russia, (t) Egypt, (u) Saudi Arabia, (v) the UAE, (w) India, (x) the Yemen, (y) Finland, (z) Denmark, (aa) Grand Canary, (bb) Ivory Coast, (cc) Namibia, (dd) Ghana, (ee) Senegal, (ff) Maderia, (gg) Germany, and (hh) the Balearic Islands, in each of the last five years. 1. These flow figures include UK disposals by foreign companies. Flow figures are volatile and fluctuate year to year in part due to the cyclical nature of reinvestment profits and of mergers and acquisition actively.

2. The negative flow figures represent disinvestment in the UK by inward investors. An inward investor may for example sell a UK based company to a UK investor. This is not outward investment but negative investment.
3. Figures on a FY basis are not available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Dyslexic Prisoners

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners were diagnosed with dyslexia while in prison during each year since 1990; [13823]

(2) how many prison officer hours were spent training to deal with dyslexic prisoners during each year since 1990; [13827]

(3) what plans there are to introduce tests to screen prisoners for dyslexia; [13825]

(4) what provision is available within the Prison Service for prisoners with dyslexia; [13824]

(5) what training in dealing with dyslexic prisoners is available to staff working in the Prison Service; [13826]

(6) what proportion of prisoners were diagnosed with dyslexia before entering prison during each year since 1990. [13822]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 7 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your six recent Questions about dyslexia among prisoners.

Education in prisons, including the provision of help to prisoners suffering from dyslexia, is provided by contractors rather than by prison officers. Contract terms require them to offer the Basic Skills screening test in numeracy and literacy to all prisoners. There are no plans to introduce additional tests to diagnose dyslexia.

Basic literacy is included in the Prison Service's core education curriculum. It is the policy of the Prisons Board towards prisoners who have any learning disabilities, including dyslexia, that those who need to improve basic literacy and are prepared to attend education classes will be given every opportunity to do so.

A number of prisons are trying to find better ways of giving basic skills training to prisoners as part of vocational training and in the course of daily work in prison workshops. This work is being supported by the Basic Skills Unit, with whom the Prison Service works closely. The Unit has contracted Amersham and Wycombe College to provide a National Support project to this end. Instructional officers are being encouraged to attend a one day course which is based on an initial certificate in teaching basic skills in the workplace.

The number of prisoners identified by the Basic Skills Screening test as having a learning disability, and the number of prisoners diagnosed with dyslexia before entering prisons, are not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Glen Parva Young Offenders Institution

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when a decision was made concerning the closure of the therapeutic community at HM YOI Glen Parva; [13831]

(2) what plans he has to provide alternative facilities at HM YOI Glen Parva following the recent closure of its therapeutic community; [13829]

(3) how many hours per month were spent by prisoners undergoing rehabilitation at HM YOI Glen Parva since January 1995; and of these hours, how many were spent undergoing rehabilitation in the therapeutic community; [13832]

(4) for what reasons the therapeutic community at HM YOI Glen Parva has recently closed; [13828]

(5) how long a period of notice of closure of the therapeutic community at HM YOI Glen Parva was given to (a) the prisoners and (b) the staff involved with the unit. [13830]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 7 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about the Therapeutic Community at HMYOI Glen Parva and the reasons for its closures.

The decision to close the Therapeutic Community was taken on 13 December 1996 and prisoners and staff were given about half a day's notice of its closure.

The Therapeutic Community has been temporarily closed to allow the Governor to re-deploy existing health care staff to provide an increased level of cover and observation on the acute psychiatric and assessment wards following a decision to close the seclusion rooms for prisoners at risk of self-harm.

There are no immediate plans to provide alternative facilities at Glen Parva, however health care facilities are currently being reviewed and the outcome of this review will determine the long term future of the Therapeutic Community. In the meantime a new therapeutic community unit has recently opened at Aylesbury Young Offenders Institution and priority will be given to prisoners from Glen Parva when considering admissions to this unit.

Prisoners at Glen Parva have each spent an average of 79.19 hours a month undergoing rehabilitation since January 1995. The figure for those held within the Therapeutic Community, for the same period, was an average of 74.75 hours a month for each prisoner.

Prisoners (Transport)

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if male and female prisoners are escorted in the same vehicle; and if he will make a statement. [15222]

Miss Widdecombe: Male and female prisoners are escorted in the same vehicles at the same time in area 7—east midlands and Humberside—but not elsewhere. In the three years in which this practice has been followed in area 7, no problems have resulted. The vehicles are cellular; female prisoner custody officers are used to handle female prisoners; and careful loading procedures are followed to ensure proper segregation. On the basis of these safeguards, I have agreed that the practice may be extended to the other contract areas.

Whitemoor Prison (Escape)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of the role playing training session held on how to behave in court for those HMP Whitemoor personnel due to give evidence at the trial of the men accused of the 1994 escape from Whitemoor; who took the decision to organise the session; what legal advice was obtained regarding the lawfulness of the session prior to that decision; and if he will make a statement. [13421]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara dated 7 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about training of Whitemoor personnel due to give evidence at court.

Three training sessions aimed at preparing staff to give evidence in court have been run at Whitemoor Prison since September 1996. This training was chosen by the Governor of Whitemoor particularly because a number of staff at the prison were expected to be asked to give evidence in the coming months; it was expressly for the purpose of general briefing for staff on the appropriate behaviour for court appearances and on court procedures. Because the training was part of the normal local programme, no additional costs were incurred.

Governors have been encouraged, at least since 1991, to provide training to staff on what is involved in being a witness to reduce the possibility of trials being prejudiced as a result of inappropriate action by staff. Legal advice was sought before the training was delivered.

Prisoners (Deaths)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to publish the conclusions of reports into deaths of prisoners held by the Prison Service; and if he will make a statement. [13953]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 3 February 1997]: The reports of inquiries by the Prison Service into the deaths of prisoners are not published and there are no plans to do so.

Prison Reports

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the reasons for the delays in publishing each of the reports of Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons which have been received by him but not yet published. [14223]

Miss Widdecombe: The reports of Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons to the Secretary of State of the inspection of prison establishments generally contain much detailed information and discussion and make a number of recommendations. Before the reports are published, Ministers receive the advice of the Director General of the Prison Service on them and the Prison Service's response to their recommendations, with an indication of the action which has been or is to be taken. Action does not wait until publication of the report, but Ministers are accountable for the Prison Service and it is essential that they should be satisfied about the Prison Service response to inspection reports before they are published.

Some 25 reports have been received from Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons but have not yet been published. Fifteen of these reports have been considered by the Prison Service and by Ministers and are expected to be published during February and March. They are the reports of the inspections of the following establishments: Channings Wood, Dartmoor, Dover, Featherstone, Gloucester, Guys Marsh, Hatfield, Holloway, Lancaster Castle, Low Newton, Onley, Portland, Ranby, Risley and The Verne.

The remaining 10 reports are under consideration and will be published as soon as possible. They are the reports of the inspections of the following establishments: Acklington, Albany, Belmarsh, Chelmsford, Eastwood Park, Everthorpe, Shepton Mallet, Usk/Prescoed, Whitemoor and Wormwood Scrubs.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, indicating how much has been spent on legal advice and from whom it was obtained. [14527]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 6 February 1997]: No money has been sent by my Department on external advice in relation to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any capacity relating to the Scott inquiry. [14526]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 6 February 1997]: No officials in my Department are, or have been, wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry. Some officials have been involved on an occasional basis as part of their normal duties, but the direct salary cost is unquantifiable.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Arts Council

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the cumulative change in the Arts Council of England grant in aid for each year since 1993–94. [13209]

Mr. Sproat: The Arts Council of England has received grant in aid to fund its operating costs and grant programmes as follows:

£ million

	Grant in aid	Cumulative change
1993–94	[1]189.15	nil
1994–95	185.99	–3.16
1995–96	191.13	+1.98
1996–97	186.13	–3.02
1997–98	186.10	–3.05

[1] The Arts Council of England came into being in April 1994. The sum shown for 1993–94 is an estimate of that attributable to England from the grant in aid to the Arts Council of Great Britain.

Sports Clubs

Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what consultations she has had with the Department of the Environment concerning the planning implications for playing fields and sports clubs arising from the recent judgment against Thames Ditton lawn tennis club; [12820]

(2) what discussions she has had with (a) the Lawn Tennis Association, (b) the Central Council of Physical Recreation, (c) the National Playing Fields Association and (d) the Sports Council about the implications of the recent judgment against Thames Ditton lawn tennis club; and if she will make a statement; [12815]

(3) if she will investigate the implications for sports clubs of the recent judgment against Thames Ditton lawn tennis club; [12816]

(4) what assessment her Department has made of the implications of the recent judgment against Thames Ditton lawn tennis club; [12817]

(5) what steps she intends to take to remedy the problems for sports clubs relating to the recent judgment against Thames Ditton lawn tennis club. [12818]

Mr. Sproat: I have looked very carefully indeed at the problems experienced by the Thames Ditton lawn tennis club. My Department has had lengthy discussions with both the Sports Council and with the Department of the Environment, about the recent judgments against an application for a renewal of its lease. I have also examined the possibility of listing the club, which has not proved to be justifiable.

While I understand that many people are concerned about the decision to demolish the site, the land is privately owned, and the Government cannot intervene in the disposal of an individual's private property in these circumstances.

I would encourage the club to continue to discuss with the English Sports Council how best to secure its long term future.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people engaged in the jobseeker's allowance scheme in the constituency of Alyn and Deeside; and if he will make a statement. [14052]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the jobseeker's allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison and Leigh Lewis, the chief executives of the Benefits and Employment Service Agencies. Mr. Mathison will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 6 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking, what is his estimate of the number of people engaged in the Jobseekers Allowance (JSA) scheme in the constituency of Alyn and Deeside; and if he will make a statement.

I have assumed your question refers to the number of staff employed in the delivery of JSA. The information is not available in the format requested. The delivery of JSA is undertaken jointly by the Benefits Agency (BA) and the Employment Services (ES) Agency.

There are 27 ES members of staff employed in your constituency, based at Shotton and Mold Jobcentres.

Staffing data for BA is only available by BA Districts and not by Parliamentary Constituencies. The BA District of Wrexham and North Wales Coast has offices at Colwyn Bay, Deeside, Rhyl and Wrexham. Currently there is a total of 50 BA staff employed in the delivery of JSA within these sites and in the corresponding ES sites at Colwyn Bay, Flint, Holywell, Llandudno, Llandudno-Conwy, Llandudno-Llanrwst, Mold, Rhyl, Rhyl-Denbigh, Rhyl-Prestatyn, Shotton and Wrexham, Wrexham-Cefn Mawr, Wrexham-Llangollen. These figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits Agency Offices

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Benefits Agency offices there are currently in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales. [14603]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Harriet Harman, dated 6 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many Benefits Agency (BA) offices there are currently in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales.

The information requested is shown in the table below:

Country	Number
England	688
Scotland	116
Wales	91
Total	895

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

These figures include BA Central Services and other locations which do not deal directly with benefit payments. There is no public service at 109 of these sites.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the percentage of the population currently dependent on income support. [14821]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Income support beneficiaries February 1996

	Number	Proportion of the population (GB)
Beneficiaries	9,809,000	17.2 per cent.

Notes:

1. Beneficiaries includes claimants, their partners and any dependants.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Decimals are rounded to one decimal place.
4. Sample size 5 per cent.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Singapore Summit

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 225, if he will make a statement on the policy towards Burma that the Government will advance at the EU-ASEAN summit in Singapore. [14598]

Mr. Hanley: Together with our EU partners, we shall be explaining to ASEAN representatives our concerns at recent events in Burma. We also hope to discuss ways of encouraging democratic reform and respect for human rights in Burma, as urged in the UN General Assembly resolution on Burma, which was adopted by consensus on 12 December 1996.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people are employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14480]

Mr. Hanley: In this Department, the responsibility for the provision of advice on equal opportunities is shared between seven individuals.

The total estimated cost to this Department, including the Overseas Development Administration, for the current financial year is £51,659.

Mr. Syed Zahoorul

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will call for a report concerning the arrest of Mr. Syed Zahoorul on 22 January in Srinagar by the border security force. [14818]

Dr. Liam Fox: I have asked our high commission in New Delhi to look into the alleged arrest of Mr. Syed Zahoorul, and to report the findings. I will write to the hon. Member thereafter.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Mark Gibson (Parole)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Prison Service has refused access to the notes, minutes and records of the Life Sentence Review Board's decision to defer consideration of parole for Mr. Mark Gibson, in Her Majesty's prison Maghaberry, to Mr. Gibson's solicitor. [14068]

Sir John Wheeler: It is the practice of the Northern Ireland Office, influenced by considerations of public interest and confidentiality, not to make disclosure of reports considered by the Life Sentence Review Board.

Life Sentence Reviews

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons prisoners serving life sentences in Northern Ireland do not have the right of access to dossiers concerning their life sentence review; and in what ways this differs from the situation in England and Wales. [14069]

Sir John Wheeler: It is the practice of the Northern Ireland Office, influenced by considerations of public interest and confidentiality, not to give disclosure to life sentence prisoners of dossiers concerning their life sentence reviews. This practice is set in the context of circumstances in which the majority of life sentence prisoners have been convicted of very serious terrorist-related offences. Both the law and practice in England and Wales is different, where prisoners are normally entitled to disclosure of papers which are put to the Parole Board.

Psychotic Diseases

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate how many people in Northern Ireland were registered sufferers of (a) Alzheimer's disease, (b) schizophrenia and (c) other psychotic diseases in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [14664]

Sir John Wheeler: Sufferers of mental illness are not required to be registered. Information on the total numbers of people suffering from different types of mental illness is not available.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Education Funding (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) private finance initiative and (b) public funding went into the education system in Lancashire in each year since 1992. [13279]

Mr. Robin Squire: PFI is new to the schools sector and to date no contracts involving Lancashire schools have been signed. A number of Lancashire schools are considering PFI options, and St. Wilfrid's Church of England high school, Blackburn is taking forward a PFI project to rebuild the school on a new site.

The following table lists capital allocations to Lancashire since 1993–94. Equivalent information for 1992–93 is not available. Allocations for grant-maintained schools are a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools.

Total	17,885	13,763	11,241	12,009	9,276

Policy Initiatives

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment to which policy initiative she has devoted most funding in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement on progress with each initiative. [13929]

Mr. Robin Squire: The effectiveness of initiatives in education and employment does not depend solely on the funding allocated to them, and many of the initiatives of the Departments and its predecessors have been aimed at making better use of existing resources. Among the important measures in the last five years have been:

- in 1992–93, the setting up of the Office for Standards in Education as an independent Government department; the introduction of the new further and higher education sectors and the subsequent increase in numbers and efficiency; and the publication of the first school performance tables;
- in 1993–94, the introduction of procedures to deal with failing schools; the formation of the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority; and the launch of the technology colleges programme; in 1994–95, the piloting of modern apprenticeships; and the setting up of the Teacher Training Agency; in 1995–96, the launch of the improving schools programme, covering a broad range of measures to raise standards in all schools; and legislation to provide vouchers for nursery education; and in 1996–97, the start of the national literacy and numeracy project; and the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance, which aims to improve the operation of the labour market, secure better value for money for the taxpayer, and improve the service to unemployed people themselves.

These and other initiatives have contributed to the fact that participation rates in education are at historically high levels, that pass rates in examinations have continued to rise, and that in the labour market the UK has a higher proportion of its people in work and fewer out of work than any other major EU country.

External Education (Recoupment)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she proposes to take to change Northumberland county council's proposed finance settlement in respect of local authority recoupment relating to children being educated outside their county of residence. [12848]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 4 February 1997]: My right hon. friend has no plans to change Northumberland county council's finance settlement in respect of inter-authority recoupment relating to pupils educated outside their area of residence.

Disabled Pupils

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funds she provides to improve facilities for disabled children in mainstream education; and if she will make a statement. [14336]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government are providing support totalling £12 million over the next three years under the schools access initiative for projects to make more mainstream schools accessible to pupils with disabilities. Some 800 mainstream schools have already benefited from schools access initiative projects in 1996–97.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils with physical disabilities have been refused places in mainstream schools over the last year. [14338]

Mrs. Gillan: This information is not collected centrally. The annual report of the Special Educational needs tribunal for 1995–96 shows that, in that year, 26 appeals were registered concerning the placement of a child with physical handicap; of these, 12 were upheld. Local education authorities have a duty to secure education in a mainstream school for children with a statement of SEN, where this is what parents wish, provided the placement is appropriate for the child and is compatible with the education of other children and the efficient use of resources.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children with physical disabilities have been refused places in Roman Catholic schools in the Leicester area over the last year. [14337]

Mrs. Gillan: This information is not collected centrally.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are employed by her Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14465]

Mrs. Gillan: This Government are committed to equal opportunities and issued to all Departments model guidance on policy appraisal for equal treatment. This ensures that the impact on particular groups, such as women, is considered as part of the policy development and review process. Specific guidance, based on this model was issued within the Department last September.

Consequently, in addition to the personnel related functions in respect of the Department's own employees, advice on the application of equal opportunities is an important strand in a wide number of the Department's activities and apart from two specialised units, for which details are given, it is not possible to disaggregate either the number or the cost of staff involved.

The Department's sex and race equality division has responsibility for the sex discrimination legislation, promoting equality of opportunity in education, training and at work, particularly with regard to gender and race; and to further women's issues more generally. The division has 57.2 staff with a budget for 1996–97 of £1,905,661. This includes 21 employees in the race relations employment advisory service with a budget of £669,376.

The team responsible for the successful implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act has 5.6 staff and a budget for 1996–97 of £181,910.

Further Education Funding

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date she received the Further Education Funding Council's claim for additional grant in aid for demand-led element enrolments for colleges exceeding their growth targets. [14625]

Mr. Paice: Further to my reply of 3 February, Official Report, column 460, the Department received the latest claim on 4 February.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she last made a statement on the availability of demand-led funding for colleges exceeding their growth targets. [14624]

Mr. Paice: On behalf of my right hon. Friend, I wrote to the Further Education Funding Council for England and to all further education colleges in England about demand-led funding on 5 February. I am placing a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of the demand-led element of funding for further education has been used as core funding in the most recent financial year. [14698]

Mr. Paice: None. The £82 million additional grant in aid that the Department is making available in the current financial year to the Further Education Funding Council for England for it to pay colleges for demand-led funding is additional to the original provision for further education set out in the estimates for financial year 1996–97.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of the demand-led element of funding for further education was consolidated into college targets for 1993–94. [14699]

Mr. Paice: Within the Department's planned provision for financial year 1993–94, the Department made available to the Further Education Funding Council for England £152,500,000 for demand-led funding including in college's enrolment targets.

Financial year 1993–94 was the first year of the sector's existence. During that year, £152,500,000 was paid to colleges for demand-led funding included in colleges' enrolment targets. This sum was found within the planned provision for further education and did not require additional resources.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the effect on financial control in further education of moving college accounting to a year end of 31 July while maintaining a year end of 31 March for her Department's transfers to the funding council; and if she will make a statement on how the demand-led element of funding is affected by using two different year end dates. [14700]

Mr. Paice: Further education colleges have used a 1 August to 31 July financial year since the creation of the further education sector, with the exception of its first financial year which ran from 1 April 1993 to 31 July 1994. The Further Education Funding Council for England takes account of the difference in the Government and college financial years in determining its spending plans and in making payments to colleges. Demand-led funding is paid to colleges in February, April and July each year. The timing of those payments is not affected by the year end dates and I have made it clear to all colleges that demand-led payments due to them for contractual commitments for the academic year 1996–97 entered into on or before 28 January 1997 will be made under existing arrangements.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the vote incorporating the demand-led element of further education funding is cash limited. [14701]

Mr. Paice: The vote incorporating the demand-led element of further education funding is not cash limited.

Moral Values

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to promote moral values within the educational system. [14695]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend expects to receive advice from the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority later this month on the recommendations of its national forum for values in education and the community.

Scouts and Guides (Funding)

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide public funding to support (a) the Scout Association and (b) the Girl Guides; and if she will make a statement. [14997]

Mr. Paice: Both the Scout Association and the Girl Guides receive funding through the Department's scheme of grants for national voluntary youth organisations. The current scheme runs from 1996–99. For 1997–98, £3.05 million had been allocated for grants under the scheme including £125,000 for the Scout Association and £40,855 for the Girl Guides. All grants are for approved programmes of work designed to promote the personal and social education of young people.

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is (a) the average sum per pupil and (b) the average percentage of the general schools budget, allotted by each local education authority in the current financial year for (i) mandatory exceptions from delegation, (ii) discretionary exceptions outside the potential schools budget, (iii) discretionary exceptions within the potential schools budget and (iv) the aggregated schools budget; [10401]

(2) what is (a) the average sum per pupil and (b) the average percentage of the general schools budget, allotted by each local education authority in the current financial year for discretionary exceptions outside the potential schools budget and which is (i) delegated and (ii) not delegated to schools; [10400]

(3) what is (a) the average sum per pupil and (b) the average percentage of the general schools budget, allotted by each local education authority in the current financial year for (i) money allocated to schools via age-weighted pupil units, (ii) premature retirement compensation, (iii) school transport, (iv) statementing and support for statemented pupils and (v) school meals (net of income). [10402]

Mr. Robin Squire [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1997, c. 75-84]: The following table corrects the figures previously given in the columns showing the amount per pupil allocated through discretionary exceptions within the potential schools budget, the percentage of the general schools budget allocated through mandatory exceptions and the percentage of the GSB allocated through the cost of statements.

The information in this table has been derived from financial statements produced under the section 122 of the Education Act 1996 (formerly section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988), incorporating LEA's changes to their statements notified to the Department by 31 December 1996.

WALES

Osiris Network

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the main software systems in use in his Department on the date of commencement of the Osiris network and (b) the purposes for which the systems were installed; and to whom the intellectual property rights belong. [14340]

Mr Hague: The following table gives details of the main software systems in use in the Welsh Office at the start of the Osiris contract. Intellectual property rights rest with the Welsh Office for bespoke systems and with the suppliers for commercial packages.

Type of purpose	Product	Commercial/Bespoke
Office automation	DisplayWrite	Commercial
	Lotus 123	Commercial
	Smart	Commercial
Financial package	JBA	Commercial
Statistical package	SPSS	Commercial
Highways information	Access	Bespoke
Grant administration	Dataflex	Bespoke
Financial information	Ingress	Bespoke
	Visual C	Bespoke
	Visual basic	Bespoke
	Smart	Bespoke

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if part of his Department's computer (a) hardware and (b) software systems was transferred to the Osiris project and its private owners; and what policy his Department agreed with the company installing Osiris under the private finance initiative as to (i) the disposal of redundant computer hardware and software systems and (ii) the transfer of intellectual property rights. [14349]

Mr. Hague: Ownership of part of my Department's computer hardware passed to Siemens Business Services under the Osiris contract. There was no transfer of ownership for software systems. Siemens Business Services is required under the contract to remove unwanted equipment with minimum disruption and to meet the Department's security requirements for equipment no longer in use. As no software systems were transferred the question of the transfer of intellectual property rights does not arise.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the main types of computers in use in his Department on the date of commencement of the Osiris network; and if he will categorise those computers by age and approximate capital value when new and after depreciation. [14348]

Mr. Hague: The following table gives details of the main types of computer in use in the Welsh Office at the start of the Osiris contract.

Type	Age range (years)	Original value (£)	Depreciated value (£)
Personal computers	1 to 10	—	[1]2,350,000
Machines under UNIX	1 to 6	154,727	99,317
AS400	2 to 6	415,895	59,413
Mainframe 4381	10	1,350,000	Nil

[1] Personal Computers have a depreciation life of three years, at the end of which their value is nil. To have replaced all the personal computers with new equipment would have cost about £2,350,00.

Hospital Statistics

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of the Welsh health authorities concerning the supply of statistics on the number of non-emergency operations cancelled since Christmas 1996 to assist hospitals in coping with the surge in medical emergency admissions; if he will give such statistics as have been collected; and if he will make a statement. [14965]

Mr. Hague: None. I shall, however, be meeting health authority chairmen on 10 March 1997 when a range of issues, including emergency medical admissions, will be discussed.

Early Retirement

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the financial payments for Treasury grant in aid to his departmental costs in running its voluntary early retirement scheme, with particular reference to the start and completion date of the scheme and the costs to (a) public funds and (b) his Department's budget in (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96, (iii) 1996–97 and (iv) 1997–98. [14820]

Mr. Hague: No grant in aid was received from Treasury for the Department's early retirement scheme which ran from 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996.

The cost of the scheme from the Department's own funds was:

1994–95: £0.7 million

1995–96: £0.7 million

1996–97: £1.8 million estimated

1997–98: £0.4 million estimated.

The Treasury meets its portion of the costs of early retirements directly from the civil superannuation vote. No funding is transferred to the Department.

Psychotic Diseases

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate how many people in Wales were registered sufferers of (a) Alzheimer's disease, (b) schizophrenia and (c) other psychotic diseases in each of the last five years, and if he will make a statement. [14663]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not held centrally.

ENVIRONMENT

Parish Council Elections

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date each of the district councils concerned was informed of the Government's decision that parish elections, in areas due to hold their first unitary council elections in 1997, would not be held in 1997. [14822]

Sir Paul Beresford: As no ordinary parish council elections are due in 1997, it is not necessary to inform any district councils that they will not take place.

HEALTH

Sick Children Nurses

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by trust the number of registered sick children nurses. [12055]

Mr. Horam: The information requested will be placed in the Library shortly.

Lariam

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the safety of lariam. [14275]

Mr. Malone: Lariam (mefloquine) is an authorised medicine used in the treatment and prevention of malaria which is considered to have an acceptable level of safety in relation to its benefits. A rigorous evaluation of quality, safety and efficacy of mefloquine by the Licensing Authority and its expert advisory body, the Committee on Safety of Medicines was carried out before a marketing authorisation was granted in 1990. Mefloquine, like all medicines, has side effects, and the Medicines Control Agency and the CSM continue to monitor its safety. If new relevant evidence comes to light, this is reviewed in order to ensure the risk of possible side-effects is outweighed by the benefits. Information on how to use mefloquine, including its side effects and precautions in use, is available to health care professionals and to patients through the manufacturer's product information authorised by the MCA, the British National Formulary and the bulletin Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance.

Public Health Consultants

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public health consultants there were in public health medicines in each health authority in 1980, 1985, 1990 and 1996. [14331]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

N.B. all figures are rounded to the nearest ten. Totals may not match the sum of the individual regions due to rounding.

[1] Includes regional and district directors of public health.

The figures are comparable for the years requested, only if given by the old regional health authorities.

Senior Medical House Officers

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what approval is required from the dean of faculty to enable a district general hospital to appoint a senior house officer in medicine once training approval has been granted by the Royal College of Physicians; and if he will make a statement. [14315]

Mr. Malone: Arrangements for the recruitment of medical and dental trainees are set out in an executive letter EL(94)58, and copies have been placed in the Library. Senior house officer posts may be given staffing approval by the regional task force on junior doctors' hours in consultation with the postgraduate dean. In approving a new SHO post, the postgraduate dean will wish to have regard to the distribution of posts within a region, the balance of training opportunities for each specialty and the availability of applicants and resources.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the professional guidelines for the ratio of senior medical house officers to patient work load (a) in day-time hours and (b) out of hours. [14317]

Mr. Malone: In each national health service trust the number and grading mix of doctors is based on careful appraisal, by department, of the service and training commitments, the tasks required, and the skills and competencies needed. These requirements vary according to the type of trust, service needs and local circumstances.

Food Safety Council

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where the new food safety council will be located. [14328]

Mr. Horam: A decision will be announced in due course.

Trust Chairmen

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many chairmen of NHS trusts in Cheshire were previously employed by ICI. [14482]

Mr. Malone: The chairman of Mid-Cheshire Hospitals NHS trust, Mr. Robin Farmer, was previously employed by ICI Ltd. None of the other chairmen of NHS trusts in Cheshire have been employed by ICI.

Neuroleptic Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance his Department issues to the medical profession for prescribing neuroleptic drugs; and if he will make a statement; [14654]

(2) if he will list the neuroleptic drugs currently available on prescription; [14655]

(3) if he will estimate (a) how many and (b) what percentage of people suffering from (i) Alzheimer's disease, (ii) schizophrenia and (iii) other psychotic diseases are currently prescribed neuroleptic drugs; and if he will make a statement. [14660]

Mr. Malone: Guidance on prescribing issues, including on neuroleptics, is available to general practitioners from a variety of sources. Publications funded by the Department include the British National Formulary, which is regularly updated and provides advice for all doctors on the choice of suitable drugs, and the "MeReC Bulletin", which provides prescribing advice to all general practitioners. Copies of both documents are available in the Library.

The neuroleptic drugs—antipsychotic and antipsychotic depot injections—currently licensed and available on prescription in the United Kingdom are listed in sections 4.2.1 and 4.2.2 in the BNF. However, information on the number of patients being prescribed these drugs is not available centrally.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what warnings his Department currently requires on the packaging of neuroleptic drugs; and if he will make a statement. [14656]

Mr. Malone: All medicines are labelled to show any appropriate warnings. There are no statutory warnings relating specifically to neuroleptic drugs. Products information for doctors and patients produced by the manufacturer and authorised by the Medicines Control Agency includes extensive information on precautions in use, contraindications and side effects. The British National Formulary recommends that all such medicines, when dispensed against a doctor's prescription carry the standard warning:

> "WARNING: May Cause Drowsiness. If affected do not drive or operate machinery. Avoid alcoholic drink".

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research his Department has evaluated into the side effects of neuroleptic drugs on patients with (a) Alzheimer's disease, (b) schizophrenia and (c) other psychotic diseases; and if he will make a statement; [14658]

(2) what research his Department has evaluated into the link between neuroleptic drugs and (a) the speed at which sufferers from dementia lose their cognitive abilities, (b) aggressive tendencies, (c) sleeping difficulty and (d) paranoia; and if he will make a statement. [14659]

Mr. Malone: As for all marked medicines, the available research into the side effects of neuroleptics was assessed at the time of granting the marketing authorisations and continues to be evaluated by the Medicines Control Agency whenever new information emerges. Recognised side effects for neuroleptics are included in the authorised product information and the British National Formulary.

Information regarding the sensitivity of patients with dementia, particularly those with Lewy-body-type, to neuroleptics has previously been given to doctors in an article in the bulletin of the Medicines Control Agency and the Committee on Safety of Medicines in "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance, May 1994".

Psychotic Diseases

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate how many people were registered sufferers of (a) Alzheimer's disease, (b) schizophrenia and (c) other psychotic diseases in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [14661]

Mr. Burns: Information on the number of mentally ill people with a particular diagnosis is not collected centrally. We estimate that there were around 600,000 people in the United Kingdom with a diagnosis of dementia, including Alzheimer's disease, in 1994.

Heart Attack Treatment

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to evaluate the treatment for heart attacks proposed by Professor Noble, of Charing Cross and Westminster hospital medical school. [14905]

Mr. Horam: None.

Meningitis

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if a same-strain link has to be established between two cases of meningitis before his Department describes them as a cluster. [13017]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 27 January 1997]: No, the definition of a cluster does not require any microbiological link.

When laboratory confirmation of meningococcal disease is not available for one or more cases in a potential cluster, a very common situation, management guidance varies from case to case. Consultants in communicable disease control are advised to seek expert advice from the Public Health Laboratory Service. Advice is always available and additional guidance on the management of clusters of meningococcal disease was included in a letter sent to all doctors from the chief medical officer on 3 January and in the PHLS's communicable disease report review of 10 January. Copies are available in the Library.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Police Officers (Criminal Conduct)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to review the handling by the Crown Prosecution Service of allegations of criminal conduct made against police officers by members of the public which are reportable to the Director of Public Prosecutions under the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. [15265]

The Attorney General: The Crown Prosecution Service from its inception until 31 January 1997 handled such cases in accordance with the arrangements set out in paragraph 12 of the White Paper (Cmnd 9411) published in December 1984. With the exception of cases involving allegations of non-fatal motoring offences, they were dealt with by specialist teams comprising part of the CPS central casework in order to avoid any suggestion that decisions might be influenced by the working relationship between the public and local Crown prosecutors. However, an internal review concluded that central handling is no longer necessary to achieve this nor is it desirable for any other reason. Following consultations with interested parties, new arrangements have been agreed with police forces for the majority of cases involving allegations of criminal conduct by police officers to be considered by the CPS at local level. To guard against local influence, these cases will be assigned to CPS lawyers with suitable experience who have no working relationship or other connection with the officer concerned. Wherever possible, cases will be handled in a CPS branch which covers a different police force from the one in which the officer serves.

A list of those cases which will continue to be dealt with by CPS central casework has been placed in the Libraries of the House. They are the more serious or complex cases and include allegations involving interference with the administration of justice, corruption, offences alleged to have been committed by officers of the rank of superintendent and above and cases involving deaths in police custody.

The new arrangements came into effect in most police areas on 3 February 1997.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 289

SESSION 1996–97

27th January—7th February 1997

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
